the patent, & affixed to each filter a label bearing the inscription, "S. C.'s improved patent gold medal self cleaning rapid water filter." In 1865 the patent was allowed to drop. In 1867, G. C. began to use his own initials instead of his father's on the labels, &, notwithstanding the expiration of the patent, he continued to place above the descriptive words a medallion containing the royal arms, surmounted by the words, "By her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent." In 1875, defts. who had formerly been in G. C.'s employ, commenced to manufacture & sell filters similar in appearance of those of G. C., & on which were affixed labels bearing the inscription "S. C.'s patent prize medal self cleaning rapid water filter, improved & manufactured by W. & co."—Held: G. C. was not entitled to an injunction restraining defts. from using the labels, (a) because the label used by G. C. was not a trade mark, but only a description of the article as made according to S. C.'s patent, which was common to all the public; (b) because deft.'s label was not a fraudulent imitation of that of G. C., calculated to deceive the public; (c) because G. C.'s label, taken in conjunction with the royal arms, constituted such a false representation of the subsistence of the patent as to disentitle him to relief.—CHEAVIN v. WALKER (1877), 5 Ch. Griffiths with three stars & I X L., which stars were commonly used in the trade to denote quality, & the exclusive use of them was disclaimed. S. Griffiths had also used similar marks with one & two stars instead of three. In 1876 S. Griffiths had registered "I X L." alone, & this mark was assigned to M. From early in 1894 E. Griffiths, who had been connected with S. Griffiths & Sons, carried on the business of trap manufacturer, using his name & the stars on his traps, & in 1899 he sold the business, which had then only a small turnover, to S. & S., trap manufacturers, for £50, & S. & S. continued to carry on the business under the name of E. Griffiths, marking their traps in the same way. M. commenced an action against S. & S. for infringement of his registered trade mark & for passing off. M. contended that his traps were known as "Griffiths' traps," & that defts. had purchased E. Griffiths' business to secure the name Griffiths; defts. contended that "I X L." was the distinguishing mark of pltf.'s traps, & that they were known as "I X L." traps;—defts. had not infringed the trade mark & the "I X L." was the feature by which pltf.'s traps were known, & defts. goods were not calculated to deceive. The action was dismissed with costs.—MARSHALL v. SIDEBOTHAM (1900), 18 R. P. C. 43.

623. ———.]—H. & co. were the registered owners of label trade marks consisting of a frame of vine leaves surrounding a space, in which their name appeared, & enclosing in the top centre an "arm & battle axe" device, which was also registered by them as a trade mark; these labels were used by them printed in gold on a white ground upon their bottles of Cognac brandy, in which they did an extensive & old-established trade. They brought an action for injunctions to restrain both infringement of trade mark & passing off against D., who served R. with a "third party notice," R. being joined as co-deft. at the trial, in respect of bottles of brandy, a limited quantity of which had accidentally been acquired by R. from whom D. had purchased a few, & which were labelled with a label printed in gold on a white ground, & consisting of a similar frame of vine leaves, surrounding a space in which appeared the name of "Jules Chateau et Cie," but in this case the small top centre space occupied by the device on pltf.'s label was filled up by continuing the vine leaf frame:—Held: although whoever designed deft.'s label must have copied the vine leaf part thereof from pltf.'s label, yet as the evidence showed that vine leaves encircling a label printed in gold on a white ground were common to the trade, deft.'s label, containing a different name & not containing the device of pltf.'s, was not calculated to deceive. The injunctions asked for were refused with costs.—HENNESSY & Co. v. DOMPE (1902), 19 R. P. C. 333.

They had previously used this mark abroad on their photographs, some of which had been sent to England & sold to wholesale dealers. Shortly after the establishment by pltfs. of the branch of their business in London, deft. co. was formed & registered for the purpose of publishing picture post cards, which had in the corner a heart, in the centre of which was printed very small a letter & a number. The design of pltf.'s heart was somewhat different from defts.' design being considerably broader than it was long, while deft.'s design was the conventional shape of a heart. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for infringement of their trade mark & for passing off, & alleged that people had been misled by the mark on deft.'s cards:—Held: the characteristic feature of pltf.'s trade mark was the initials & not the design of a heart: there was no likelihood of deception & no one would be likely to mistake deft.'s mark for pltfs.—*SCHWEDTKEGER (E. 628. ———.]—Pltfs. in an action for infringement of trade marks & for passing off carried on a large business as manufacturers of toy goods, including children's cycles, which they sold under the name "Fairycycle," & they had trade marks, one being that name & others being the word "Fairy," alone or combined with words descriptive of the particular goods. Deft., a manufacturer of perambulators, including toy perambulators issued a circular containing a description of a new toy cycle of his manufacture. On motion, deft. stated that in the circular the name of his cycle had been put in the form "Farriscycle," by mistake, & he undertook not to use the words "The Farris Cycle" otherwise than as separate words. At the hearing, deft. alleged that, about the end of 1923, he had had made for him, & had sold, a toy cycle that he had called "The Farrisette," & that, later, when the maker of it had entered deft.'s employment, deft. had altered the name to "the Farris Cycle." Pltfs. alleged that, in response to a written order for a "Fairycycle" at several shops of H. & Co., deft.'s cycle had been supplied, & that, in consequence, H. & Co. had submitted to an injunction against passing off:—Held: (1) the action was purely a name case, without any question of passing off by get-up; in the deft.'s circular, the name "Farriscycle" had been used by mistake. (2) Neither actual deception nor probability of deception had been proved; (3) upon deft.'s undertaking always to keep the words "Farris" & "cycle" separate, the action must be dismissed.—LINES BROTHERS., LTD. v. FARRIS & Co. (1925), 43 R. P. C. 64.

629. — — —.]—In 1926 pltfs. registered a trade mark consisting of the words "Silent Knight" for cooking & heating apparatus in Class 18. Later in 1926, defts. applied to register a trade mark consisting of the device of a chess knight for the same class, with the words "Red Knight," but on pltfs. objecting, the application was amended by striking out those words, pltfs. understanding, that it was deft.'s intention not to use the words "Red Knight." In an action for infringement of pltf.'s trade mark & passing off, pltfs. alleged that defts. had, since registration of their trade mark, advertised their gas stoves in connection with the words "Red Knight," & they moved to expunge deft.'s trade mark. Defts. gave notice of motion to expunge pltf.'s trade mark, but that was not pressed at the trial. There was evidence of actual confusion of the names "Silent Knight" & "Red Knight":—Held: (1) pltf.'s trade mark had been infringed, defts. had intended pltfs. to understand that defts. would discontinue the use of the words "Red Knight" in connection with their stoves, & deft.'s device & the method in which they used it were calculated to deceive. Injunctions restraining infringement & passing off were granted, & deft.'s mark was ordered to be expunged from the register & their motion refused. (2) An order for delivery up & an inquiry as to damages were also granted & defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action up to & including the order & the costs of the motions, including any costs of the Registrar.—*FORTH & CLYDE & SUNNYSIDE IRON COS., LTD. v. In 1879 they registered their mark in class 43 fermented liquors & spirits as an old mark. There are two other cat & barrel marks on the Register, in the same class, one scarcely used in England by traders who sold in bulk or used a label without a cat and barrel; the other was a barrel & three cats, & no user in this country was proved. Pltf.'s goods were well known as the "Cat & Barrel Brand" or the "Cat Brand." Deft. in 1899 commenced to sell sloe gin under a label whereon part of a cat & part of a barrel was depicted with the words "Cat Brand" underneath. Pltfs. did not manufacture sloe gin at the date of the registration of their mark:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to (a) an injunction to restrain deft., his agents & servants, from infringing pltf.'s registered trade mark; & (b) an injunction to restrain deft., his agents & servants from selling or passing off sloe gin not of pltf.'s manufacture as & for the goods of pltfs. in any way whatsoever & in particular by using the words "Cat Brand" in connection with the representation of a cat & a barrel, or any words, signs, figures or devices, which were calculated to enable deft.'s sloe gin or other liqueurs or goods of deft. to be passed off as & for the goods of pltfs. —BOORD & SON v. HUNDAERT (1903), 89 L. The infringement complained of consisted in the sale of matches in boxes having on them the device of a cow & the words "Cow Brand," the words "Mother Brand Safety Matches," & the words "Condensed Milk" underneath. Defts. were the registered proprietors of a trade mark which consisted of the device of a cow & was registered in respect of condensed milk, & the matches which they had sold & proposed to sell were intended to advertise their "Cow Brand" condensed milk. They brought an action for infringement of trade mark & passing-off against F. A. B. They complained of certain advertisements of F. A. B. offering "Bechstein Model Pianos" for sale:—Held: "Bechstein Model" indicated that a piano was made by the firm of Bechstein; deft. had infringed pltf.'s trade marks & had dishonestly attempted to pass off pianos not of their manufacture as being of their manufacture; & a perpetual injunction must be granted with costs. An inquiry as to damages was directed.—BECHSTEIN v. BARKER & BARKER (1910), 27 R. P. C. 484.

654. "A.1."—Manufacturers of mustard, who were very well known, registered in 1906 a trade mark for mustard consisting of the letter & numeral "A.1," & that mark had become known as indicating their goods. They brought an action for infringement against a co. carrying on the business of provision dealers in London, who were advertising mustard made by a German firm called Born Brothers as "A.1" Mustard, & applied for an interlocutory injunction. Defts. contended that they only used the expression "A.1" in conjunction with the words "Born's Mustard" or other words indicating manufacture by Borns, & that they had only used it as a bona fide description of the character or quality of the goods. Pltfs., however, exhibited a receipted invoice given on a trap order, which contained no reference to "Born's":—Held: it was a clear case of infringement of pltfs.' trade mark.—FARROW (JOSEPH) & CO., LTD. v. SEYFRIED (JOHN F.) & SONS, LTD. 655. "Dario."—In 1926 pltfs. obtained registration as a trade mark in classes 8 & 13 of the word "Dario" in respect of thermionic valves. They commenced an action against deft. for infringing the said trade mark by selling & offering for sale goods not those of pltf.'s to which the trade mark had been applied. Deft. gave notice of motion for the rectification of the Register by removing the said trade mark therefrom. At the trial of the action & hearing of the motion, deft. contended that, as pltfs. imported the goods to which the mark was applied from a foreign manufacturer who was the registered owner in France of the trade mark, the mark was not distinctive of pltf.'s goods, & should not have been registered in their name:—Held: there was no evidence of any user in this country prior to the application for registration of the trade mark or directed to show that the mark was not capable of being distinctive in this Pltf.'s label consisted of a bulldog's head on a black ground surrounded by a circular band on which were the words "Read Brothers, London. The Bull Dog Bottling." Def't.'s label represented a rough terrier's head on a black ground surrounded by a red circular band on which were the words "Celebrated Terrier Bottling, E. Richardson." Pltf.'s beer was well known in the colonies as the "Dog's Head" beer, & they alleged that defts., by exporting to certain colonies beer with the terrier's head label, led to their beer being substituted & taken for pltf.'s beer:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an interim injunction restraining the continuance of the terrier's head in the label on the bottles of beer exported to such colonies by defts.

Def't. advertised & sold under the name of "Condi-Sanitas" articles of a similar nature to those manufactured by pltfs.:—Held: the word adopted by def't. so resembled pltfs.' trade mark as to be calculated to deceive & mislead; & therefore an interlocutory injunction must be granted to restrain def't. from using the word "Sanitas" in conjunction with "Condi," or in any other way which would infringe pltfs.' trade mark.—*SANITAS CO., LTD. v. known in Ireland as "Barber's knives." M. sold knives stamped as "Edward Barber." "Edward Barber" had been registered in 1882 as an old mark by D. for table knives & forks, scissors, shears, files, & saws. This mark was as M. alleged assigned to him by D. in the latter part of 1882 with the goodwill of his business. At the trial the judge ruled that pltf.'s claim as it stood was for infringement of trade mark only, but he allowed an amendment extending it to passing off:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an injunction, confined to the Irish market, & to pocket knives only, & to the costs of the action.—*BARBER v. 661. "La Flor de Margareta"—"Margarita."—B. registered the words "La Flor de Margareta" as an old trade mark for cigars, & brought an action for infringement against S. P. & co. for selling cigars in boxes branded "Margarita." Pltf. had sold cigars under his trade mark for many years. His cigar boxes had borne a label containing the words "Fabrica de Tabacos de la Vuelta Abajo," but this he had discontinued before the action was commenced. His cigar boxes, used at the time of the action, had a lid label which included the trade mark & other matters, & had printed at the bottom thereof "Regd. by H. B. 6458." Defts. denied infringement, & among other defences, they set up that pltf. was disentitled to maintain his action by reason to the said two labels which defts. alleged contained misrepresentations. In his cross-examination pltf. was asked to give the names & addresses of the manufacturers of his cigars sold under the trade mark; this he refused to do, & the judge ruled that, under the circumstances of the case, he was not bound to answer this question:—Held: defts. had infringed, & pltf. was entitled to succeed in his action.—BENEDICTUS v. SULLIVAN, POWELL & Co. (1894), 12 R. P. C. 25.

663. "Brooks"—"J. Brookes."—Pltfs. were owners of Trade Mark No. 196, 435, Class 37, which consisted of the word "Brookes," & was an old mark in use before Aug. 1875. J. Brookes was a manufacturer of cycle saddles. Def't.'s saddles were stamped with the name "J. Brookes." The N. co. advertised these saddles as "Brookes." Pltfs. commenced an action against J. Brookes & the N. co. to restrain infringement of their trade mark & passing off of def't. J. Brookes' saddles as pltf.'s by the use of the word "Brookes," & moved for an interlocutory injunction. The N. co. did not appear:—Held: an injunction must be granted against the N. co. to restrain infringement of the trade mark, & against other def't. to restrain passing off.—BROOKS (J. H.) & Co., LTD. v. NORFOLK CYCLE CO. & BROOKES (1899), 16 R. P. C. 523.

pipes in Great Britain & Ireland stamped with the letters "G.B.D.," enclosed in an oval, which they had registered as a trade mark under the Act of 1875. Deft., a tobacconist in Londonderry sold pipes stamped "J.B.D.," also enclosed in an oval, but denied infringement on the grounds (a) of the difference in the letters; (b) that the stamp on his pipes was gilt, whereas pltf.'s trade mark was plain cut & ungilt; (c) that there was no evidence that he had sold them as of pltf.'s manufacture. Proceedings having been taken deft. offered to discontinue using the stamp complained of provided he was allowed to sell off the few gross of pipes in stock. This offer was not accepted, & the proceedings were continued. Pltfs. were granted a perpetual injunction, delivery up of the pipes & the instrument, if any, used for stamping the same, & costs.—*MATCHEAL & LUCHON v. 666. "Seccoline" — "Securine." —Pltfs. in 1894 registered the word "seccotine" as a trade mark for a cement, & used it extensively. Defts. began to sell a cement as "securine." — Held: "Securine" was a colourable imitation of "seccotine," & an injunction was awarded with consequential relief.—McCaw, STEVENSON & ORR, LTD. v. NICKOLS & Co. (1903), 21 R. P. C. 15.

667. "B. Warsop's Cricket Bats" — "A. Warsop's World-renowned Cricket Bats." —Pltfs. were old established manufacturers of "B. Warsop's Cricket Bats." Deft. Alfred Warsop, who was formerly in pltf.'s employ, commenced to sell "A. Warsop's World-renowned Cricket Bats," stamped with his initial & surname, & with a device somewhat similar to that which appeared on pltf.'s bats. The word "registered" appeared on both bats, pltf.'s device being in fact registered as a trade mark, but not deft.'s although steps had been taken to obtain registration. On pltf.'s motion for an interim injunction, no order was made on deft. undertaking to sell his bats without any mark except his name & address "Marylebone": — Held: at the trial, the markings on the two bats were so distinct that it was impossible for an average man about to purchase a cricket bat to be deceived into thinking that deft.'s bat was pltf.'s & the action was dismissed, but without costs, by reason of deft.'s wrongful user of the word "registered." — WAR SOP (B.) & SONS, LTD. v. WAR SOP (1904), 21 R. P. C. 481.

668. "Club Black Enamel" — "Hub Black Enamel." —M. was the registered proprietor of a trade mark consisting of an "ace of clubs" with the word "club" upon it, & used the same on labels pasted on stone bottles in which he sold "Club Black Enamel" with descriptive letterpress. C. commenced to sell "Hub Black Enamel" in similar bottles carrying similar labels with the device of an "ace of spades" with very similar letterpress. An action was brought by M. against C. claiming an injunction, damages, & costs:—Held: it was a rank case of dishonesty, & an injunction was awarded to restrain infringement of trade mark & passing off, with one guinea damages & costs.—MUNDAY v. CAREY (1905), 22 R. P. C. 273.

669. "Colonel" — "Colonial." —The St. M. Co. made & sold golf balls & put upon them "The Colonel" & the word "Colonel" had been registered by the Co. as a Trade Mark for golf balls. The co. brought an action for infringement of trade mark & for passing off; the complaint being founded on the sale of "Colonial" golf balls by defts. The "Colonial" balls were sold at 1s. & the "Colonel" at 2s. & 2s. 6d. There was evidence adduced by defts. to show that no confusion was likely on account of the difference in the names & also in the price:—Held: the words "Colonel" & "Colonial" could not readily be mistaken the one for the other; in the make up & concomitants of their sale defts.' balls were essentially distinct from pltfs.; pltfs.' had not proved confusion; it was impossible in the absence of gross fraud on the part of the vendors, for which defts. would not be responsible that their balls could be passed off as pltfs.'; defts. had not been guilty of passing off, nor had they infringed pltfs. trade mark.—ST. MUNGO MANUFACTURING Co. v. VIPER & RECOVERING Co. (1910), 27 R. P. C. 420.

670. "Anzora" — "Onsoria." —L. registered the word "Anzora" as a trade mark in class 32 & used it for a hair cream. He discovered that deft. was using the word "Onsoria" on a hair cream & commenced an action to restrain him from infringing the trade mark, & from selling hair cream, not of pltf.'s manufacture, under the name "Onsoria" or any other colourable imitation of the word "Anzora," & from passing-off his preparation as & for the preparation of pltf. Pltf. moved for an interlocutory injunction: — Held: it appeared from the materials before the ct. that the name adopted by deft. was calculated to deceive & an interlocutory injunction was granted.—LEWIS v. VINE & VINE'S PERFUMERY Co. (1913), 31 R. P. C. 12.

671. "Oxo" — "Oxot." —Pltfs. were owners of a registered trade mark consisting of the word "oxo" under which their fluid beef & solid meat extracts were sold. Deft. offered for sale a preparation of meat put up in a cube form, but not made up like pltfs.' cubes, under the name of "oxot." Pltfs. claimed an injunction restraining deft. from infringing their trade mark or from selling meat cubes as being pltfs.' goods under the name "oxot" or under any other names which were colourable imitations of the word "oxo" or were otherwise calculated to represent that the goods so sold were those of pltfs.:—Held: the difference in sound which arose when the word "oxot" is vocalised with or without the "t" at the end of the second syllable did not constitute a valid defence to the action, vocalisation being cautious purchaser to take deft.'s goods thinking they were pltf.'s, notwithstanding the substitution of the word "Imperial" for that of "Salada," deft.'s trade mark & label will be adjudged to be an infringement of the pltf.'s.—SALADA TEA Co. OF CANADA, LTD. v. KEARNEY, [1925] EXCH. C. R. 119.—CAN.

o. Whether letter or combination of letters may constitute trade mark.—There is no warranty for the broad proposition that a letter or combination of letters cannot constitute a trade infringement of any rights in the use of the term "shur-on" by another trader as his trade mark, nor of fraudulently counterfeiting similar goods described by the latter term: nor is such a use of the former term a colourable imitation of the latter term calculated to deceive purchasers, as the terms are neither phonetically nor visually alike.—*KRISTEIN, SONS & Co., COHEN BROTHERS, LTD. but one of the elements to be taken into consideration in actions for infringement of trade marks; & the adoption of the name "oxot" by deft. for his meat cubes was not legitimate trading & pltf's. were entitled to the injunction they claimed with costs.—*Oxo, LTD. v. 673. "999" — "99."] — In 1907 pltf's. predecessor in business registered as a trade mark the number "999" in respect of cigarettes. At the same time he also registered the numbers "111," "222," & "555" for the same goods. Pltf's. were the registered proprietors of all these marks, & also of marks which included the numbers "333," "444," "666," & "777," but in each case with a disclaimer in respect of the numbers. The number "999" as also "555," was used for certain of the "State Express" cigarettes sold by pltf's., such cigarettes being Virginia cigarettes, "999" being for a higher priced cigarette than "555." In 1922 deft. co. decided to bring out, & subsequently sold, Turkish cigarettes on the boxes & packets of which they put the number "99" & "double nine." The boxes & packets bore prominently the name "Lucana" & defts.' name & registered trade mark, & the get-up of them was quite different from that of pltf's. boxes & packets of their "999" cigarettes, & the price was considerably less. Defts. had had for some time previously on the market Virginia cigarettes bearing the number "66" & the word "Lucana." Pltf's. brought an action against defts. for infringement of their trade mark "999" & for passing off. It was contended for pltf's. that they were the only firm in the tobacco trade that used a series of recurring numerals & that any number consisting of recurring nines would lead to deception & confusion, & that their "999" cigarettes had come to be so asked for by customers that confusion would result. It was admitted that the use of numbers was common in the trade, & there was evidence of the use of a single "9" (inter alia) by a co. closely associated with defts., & of several instances of double recurring numerals, including in one case the number "99." At the trial pltf's. alleged a dishonest intention on the part of defts.:—Held: there was no ground for the charge of dishonest intention; the idea of pltf's. trade mark was, at most, triplication & there was no infringement of pltf's. trade mark "999"; pltf's. "999" cigarettes were usually asked for as "State Express" cigarettes with a reference to the number & there was no short term without any reference to "State Express" by which those cigarettes were generally known to the public; & there was no risk of deception or confusion.—ARDATH TOBACCO Co., LTD. v. SANDORIDES (W.), LTD. (1924), 42 R. P. C. 50.

674. "Amami" — "Amata."] — Pltf. co. carried on business as manufacturers of perfumery, toilet preparations & other similar articles, & had for many years distinguished their goods by the application thereto, & the use in connection therewith, of the word "Amami." In July, 1909, they registered that word as a trade mark for goods in Class 48. The trade mark was to be applied to perfumery, including toilet articles & preparations for the teeth & hair & perfumed soap. In Jan. 1924, deft. co. was incorporated for the purpose, according to the Memorandum of Asscn. of (a) carrying on business as wholesale manufacturers of toilet preparation, & (b) publishers of medical books & publications relating thereto, but the real object was to sell a medical book written by one of the two directors, & the co. had not sold toilet preparations, but on letter paper had described themselves as "Wholesale Manufacturers of Amata Toilet Preparations." The share capital was £100 divided into 100 shares, the whole of which were taken up by the two signatories to the Memorandum who were also the only directors of the co. Pltf. co. commenced an action against deft. co. & the two directors for an injunction restraining them (inter alia) "from selling or offering or exposing or advertising for sale or procuring to be sold any such goods as aforesaid"—i.e., perfumery or toilet articles or preparations—"not being pltf's. goods under the name 'Amata' or under any other name which by reason of colourable imitation of the word 'Amami' or otherwise is calculated to deceive" & from infringing pltf's. trade mark, & from carrying on business as manufacturers of toilet preparations under the name "Amata, Ltd." At the trial defts. claimed the right to use the word "Amata" for toilet preparations:—Held: (1) the sale of toilet preparations by deft. co. as "Amata" cream or "Amata" perfume, or any other toilet preparation with the word "Amata" affixed, would almost necessarily lead to confusion, & an injunction in the terms quoted above must be granted, but not the injunction asked for to restrain the use of the name Amata, Ltd., & deft. co. must pay pltf's. costs; there was no evidence that deft. co. had been formed by the other two defts. for the purpose of doing a wrongful act, & no claim had been established by pltf's. against these defts. personally, & the action against them must be dismissed with costs.—*PRICHARD & CONSTANCE (WHOLESALE), LTD. v. 679. Lion.]—H. & S. took over in 1891 the business of The Lion Soap co. & subsequently sold "Red Lion Soap," "Golden Lion Soap," & "Lion (arbolesic Soap)," the first in large quantities. They were the owners of several registered trade marks, one being the word "Lion," & the others comprising the device of a lion, but they did not use any of their trade marks as such upon their soap wrappers. Their soaps became known as "Lion Soaps." K., a limited co., who dealt in arms & ammunition, & had registered & used for such goods the trade mark of a lion's head began to sell soap in four different wrappers, unlike H. & S.'s wrappers, but having thereon the representation of a lion's head in several places, & in some cases with the words "Trade Mark" attached. K.'s name was prominent on their wrappers. An action was brought by H. & S. against K. to restrain them from infringing plffs.' trade marks, & to restrain them from selling soap in wrappers or boxes bearing the device of a lion or a lion's head, & from using the device of a lion & the word lion in the course of their trade in soap:—Held: plffs. had not established a case of infringement of trade mark, but were entitled to an injunction to restrain defts. from selling, or offering for sale, soap in the wrappers complained of or so as to induce the belief that defts.' soaps are manufactured by plffs.—*HODGSON & SIMPSON v. T. moved for an interlocutory injunction in his action, & moved to expunge the trade mark on the ground that it was descriptive of an article which anyone could make & use. W. also proved that he did not use the word in question on his goods, but only in his price lists:—Held: T.'s trade mark was properly on the Register & ought not to be expunged, but W. had not infringed T.'s rights by using the word in his price lists as he had done.—TALBOT v. WEBLEY, Re TALBOT'S TRADE MARK (1886) 3 R. P. C. 276.

681. Advertisements.]—Manufacturers of soap, whose registered trade mark consisted of a ship, & whose goods had in consequence come to be known as "Ship Brand" soap, commenced an action to restrain the use by another firm of soap manufacturers of a poster, on which a ship was a prominent feature. This ship was different from that of plffs., & bore on its sail a conspicuous Geneva cross, defts.' trade mark being a hospital nurse with a Geneva cross on one arm. The poster also bore defts.' name prominently, & the words "Fluid, Powder, Soap." Plffs. alleged that the poster was calculated to deceive by leading people to the conclusion that defts. were the makers of "Ship Brand Soap." They moved for an interlocutory injunction, which was refused by the judge. Plffs. appealed, & the action was settled in ct., plffs. accepting an offer by defts. not to use the poster in connection with powder or soap.

Defts., who were also boot retailers, advertised their goods by show cards, & posters on which appeared a pick with the words, "Bargains. Pick them Out." Pltf. commenced an action against defts. to restrain them from infringing his registered trade mark & from passing off their goods as & for his goods, & applied for an interlocutory injunction. Defts. alleged that they had not infringed pltf.'s trade mark, inasmuch as they had not used the device of a pick on the goods themselves, & further, that they used the word "Pick," as a verb in calling attention to their goods:—Held: there must be an injunction till the trial to restrain defts. from using the device of a pick similar to that in the trade mark, or the word "Pick" in connection with their goods.—BRIGGS (TRADING AS BRIGGS & Co.) v. DUNN & SON (1911), 28 R. P. C. 704.

The trade marks consisted respectively of the device of an alligator, the word "alligator," & the device of an alligator with the word "alligator" on it. Plffs. complained of an advertisement by defts. in a trade journal advertising "Stee lace Belting, Alligator Pattern—Prices from the sole manufacturers," followed by their name & address. Defts. contended that there was no user by them as a trade mark & that there was no infringement:—Held: there was a use by defts. of the word "Alligator" for the purpose of indicating the origin of the goods, indicating that defts. were making the goods which were really the goods of the owners of the trade marks. An interlocutory injunction from infringing the two last-mentioned trade marks was granted.—STONE (J. B.) & Co., LTD. v. STEELACE MANUFACTURING Co., LTD. (1928), 45 R. P. C. 127.

Div. against defts., in respect of an infringement by them of his registered trade mark, & claiming an account of profits or damages, defts. submitted to a perpetual injunction; & the only question remaining to be tried was what damages should be paid, pltf. waiving any account of profits. Pltf. applied to the ct. that the action might be transferred to the Q. B. Div., so that it might be tried with a jury. This application was opposed by defts., on the ground that, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 36, r. 4, the judge had a discretion; & that the damages could be as well ascertained by the judge in ct. or chambers as by a jury:—Held: the judge had no discretion, & under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 36, r. 6, an order must be made for a trial with a jury; but even if the ct. had a discretion, this was not a case in which such discretion ought to be exercised, the only question remaining at issue in the action being in regard to the amount of damages for the infringement of the trade mark, which question would be more properly tried with than without a jury.—*FENNESSY v. their hands for transmission. S., a resident in America, who claimed to be owner of the goods, served notice of motion that he might be at liberty to reship the goods to a foreign port, & that if necessary he might be added as deft. to the action:—Held: S. must give security for the costs of the motion, for that whatever his position as to costs might be if & when he was made deft., he must on this motion be treated as a person resident abroad coming forward to enforce a right, & stood in the position of pltf.—*APOLLINARIS Co. v. 690. Service out of the jurisdiction—Action not matter for English courts.]—A summons by T. A. M., a manufacturer, resident in Scotland, for leave to register a trade mark, was pending before the judge & was opposed by J. M., also resident & carrying on a similar manufacture in Scotland, on the ground that the mark was similar to one belonging to J. M. J. M. applied for leave to issue a writ against T. A. M. for an injunction & damages, on the ground that T. A. M. was selling his goods in England in such a way as to lead the public to believe that they were J. M.'s goods. J. M. deposed that the same witnesses would be required on the summons & in the action, & that it would be most convenient & would save great expense if the action was brought in England, or that the summons & action could be tried together:—Held: as an injunction in England could only be enforced against agents of T. A. M., & not against himself, leave ought not to be given to issue the writ, the matter being one which was better left to the Cts. of Scotland.—MARSHALL v. MARSHALL (1888), 38 Ch. D. 330; 59 L. 691. — (1) An action was brought in England, by a firm having places of business in Dublin & London, to restrain defts., a limited co., having its registered office in Belfast, from infringing pltf.'s trade mark by the sale of goods under a similar trade mark in England. Defts. had no agents or depôts in England, but supplied occasional customers in England direct from Belfast. A motion was also pending in England by pltf. under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 90, to expunge defts.' trade mark, & it was proposed by pltf. that the action & motion should come on together:—Held: the action was to be regarded as practically an Irish & not an English action; & an order obtained ex parte by pltf. under R. S. C., 1883, giving them leave to issue & serve the writ out of the jurisdiction, was, notwithstanding the pending motion to expunge, discharged with costs.

(2) The fact that a motion on behalf of pltf. to rectify the Register by striking out defts.' trade mark is pending is not material in considering the balance of convenience to the parties.

Pltfs. moved for judgment against the A. co. in default of defence & also moved to rectify the register by expunging the registration of certain trade marks which the A. co. had registered:—Held: the claim against the two defts. being severable, pltfs. were entitled to judgment against the A. co. without waiting for the trial of the action against the B. co. In 1891 they had registered as an old trade mark in connection with fireworks the words "Crystal Palace." They had also registered two other trade marks consisting of representations of the Crystal Palace.

They used the term for all their goods of the firework class. It was not limited to the displays that they gave at the Crystal Palace. Their goods were asked for as "Crystal Palace Fireworks" & were supplied under that name.

Pltfs. having ceased to have the contract, defts., another firm of pyrotechnists, obtained in the year 1910 the right to give firework displays at the Crystal Palace, & thereupon they sought to describe their fireworks as "Crystal Palace Fireworks" with the addition of their own name:—Held: pltfs. having for nearly fifty years applied the words "Crystal Palace" to their goods, it was irrelevant to consider whether they had still got the right to give displays of fireworks at the Crystal Palace; the use of those words did not imply that they had; & therefore they were entitled to a perpetual injunction to restrain defts.—BROCK (C. Two persons, sons of their father, who had originated the manufacture of such pipes, & designated them as "Southern's Brosley pipes," on the death of their father, manufactured at Brosley, but at separate establishments, & for their separate benefit, pipes of a like character; one of the brothers instituted a suit to restrain the use of this trade mark, the other declining to join in such suit:—Held: the one brother might alone file a bill for an injunction & account. — *SOUTHERN v. A particular mark was by arrangement between the three parties adopted for the goods, of which some portions & the general arrangement were new, & other portions consisted of R.'s name & arms, & of a symbol which had formerly been used by G. After goods had been regularly exported for some years under this arrangement, W. ceased to send goods through R., & commenced exporting them to Rangoon through the agency of F., continuing to use the old mark except that the name & arms of F. were substituted for those of R. At the same time R. commenced exporting other goods under the old mark. Cross actions were commenced for injunctions, in which R. set up an alleged custom in Manchester, giving the right to the trade marks to the shipping agent:—Held: upon the evidence, no such custom existed, neither R. nor W. had any exclusive right to the use of the mark, & both actions must be dismissed. — *ROBINSON v. In the same year they registered two trade marks upon which appeared (inter alia) the letters "K.M.S." The Letters Patent expired in 1899. During the years in which the Letters Patent were in force, & afterwards up to the date of the trial, pltf.s, continued to manufacture this salt & to put it upon the market. They sold it as Kalium Meta Sulphite, or more generally as "K.M.S." Upon their advertisements it was described as "K.M.S." with the full name Kalium Meta Sulphite added in brackets. In 1906 they registered the letters "K.M.S." as their trade mark. The ordinary English chemical name of the salt was Meta Sulphite of Potassium. Defts. were also manufacturing chemists, & for some years past had manufactured a salt of the same chemical quality & substance as that of pltf.s, but they did not at first advertise or sell their product as "K.M.S." In 1907, however, they began to advertise & sell their salt as "K.M.S."; pltf.s, thereupon commenced this action. Defts. contended that the letters "K.M.S." were the descriptive name of the article & were not distinctive of pltf.s, manufacture, & they moved to expunge the pltf.s' trade marks from the Register:—Held: at the time when the action was commenced the letters "K.M.S." indicated the salt as manufactured by pltf.s.

Pl'tfs. alleged that they owned certain trade marks & that they sold their lime juice in bottles which were moulded with representations of their trade marks, & they alleged that the moulding on defts.' bottles was calculated to deceive. Both pl'tfs. & defts. put labels on their bottles, but pl'tfs. alleged that such labels frequently got rubbed off. Both firms exported their lime juice to other countries, including South Africa. Pl'tfs. made an application for a commission to take evidence in South Africa or alternatively for letters of request to issue. They stated that they wished to obtain evidence as to the circumstances & conditions of the trade in South Africa. The application came before the judge in chambers, to whom certain proofs of the proposed witnesses were submitted by pl'tfs., & an order was made for letters of request to issue. Leave was given to defts. to appeal, & they appealed:—Held: evidence as to the manner in which the goods were dealt with in the market was material, & the ct. refused to interfere with the discretion of the judge, & held that the order made was right.—*ROSE (L.) & CO., LTD. v. Pl'tfs. appealed in the patent action, but the appeal was dismissed with costs. On a motion in the patent action by pl'tfs. to enforce a set-off of the costs incurred in the trade mark action against those in the Appeal Ct., defts.' solr. objected that he had a lien on those costs which intercepted the right of set-off:—Held: the set-off of the costs was not intercepted as to the costs of the patent action; but as to the trade mark action the right of set-off was not to prevail so as

In 1896 P., who had infringed the said trade mark without knowing of H.'s registration or user of it, communicated with H., asking for the date of registration & disclaiming any intention to infringe. Negotiations ensued between the parties, in which P. was ready to give the undertaking asked for by H. subject to a condition that H. should not advertise it. H. was ready to agree to such condition on P. agreeing to disclose the names of his customers to whom he had supplied the goods. P. would not so agree, & the negotiations fell through. H. issued a writ asking for an injunction, damages or an account of profits, & costs. P., by his defence, offered an undertaking, but made no offer as to costs. At the trial it was admitted that H. was not entitled to damages or an account of profits:—Held: H. was entitled to an injunction & the costs of the action so far as it sought relief by way of injunction, but deft. was entitled to the costs of the action so far as it asked for damages or an account, such costs to be set off.—HIPKINS (G. The wine had been consigned to plffs. on approval & rejected by them, & was sold on account of the growers. Defts. purchased the wine at the auction, & resold it as "Burgoyne's Superior Australian Burgundy." On the trial of an action, to restrain defts. from infringing plffs.' trade mark, & from passing off the wine in question as being plffs.' wine, it was held, that the wine was not plffs.' wine, & that plffs. were not estopped by their conduct from restraining the sale of the wine as their wine. An injunction & an account of profits were granted. Defts. appealed:—Held: defts. were justified in coming to the conclusion that the wine was Burgoyne's wine, & they were so justified by reason of the conduct of plffs. in the matter, & plffs. were not entitled to any relief; the appeal was allowed with costs.—*BURGOYNE & Co., LTD. & BURGOYNE v. The M. co. alleged that they had used the mark before the W. co.:—Held: as the W. co. had first used the mark in Nov. 1910, & according to their evidence the M. co.'s first actual user was in Jan. 1911, the W. co. had established their case, & were entitled to an injunction, damages, & costs.—WILLIAMS'S, LTD. v. MASSEY (1911), 28 R. P. C. 512.

739. — Order for particulars of user—Form of order.]—In an action to restrain infringement of trade marks consisting of the word "Pelican" registered respectively in classes 1 & 39 in respect of inks & the like, defts. in their defence alleged that they & a predecessor had used the word "Pelican" from 1917 onwards in connection with inks & on bottles containing ink: & in a motion to rectify the register by expunging therefrom the entries of the said trade marks, they made similar allegations. Pltf. applied for particulars of the alleged user:—Held: defts. should give particulars of the user alleged in the defence of the word "Pelican" on or in connection with inks, & bottles as containers therefor bearing labels altered as alleged, giving the names & addresses of three representative customers to whom the alleged sales were made, & giving the best estimate of the total sales of ink in respect of which such user took place year by year from 1917 to 1925, stating whether the ink so sold was manufactured by the said predecessor or defts., & if not either by whom; & similar particulars of the alleged user by defts. from 1925 to the present date. Particulars substantially the same were ordered in the motion to rectify.—BEINDORFF (TRADING AS WAGNER) v. CHAMBERS & Co., LTD. (1928), 45 R. P. C. 122.

740. Non-user—Necessity for proof of circumstances of trading.]—The registered owner, D., of a trade mark consisting of the word "Fram" applied to razors, formed a co., of which he was the only substantial shareholder, for dealing in the razors, but did not assign the trade mark to the co. In an action by the co. & D. for infringement of the trade mark, defts. alleged that they had acted innocently. In negotiations, they offered to give an undertaking, but later reserved the right to set up all defences open to them. At the trial they contended that the co. could not obtain an injunction, & that D. could not recover damages. It was held that defts. had acted innocently; that without saying that damages could not be awarded against an innocent infringer, D. was not, as a shareholder in the co., entitled to damages; that no damage to plffs. attributable to the infringement had been proved; & that D. was entitled to an injunction, & half the costs of the action. Pltf. co. was dismissed from the action without costs. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal, & contended that, as D. had not, since the formation of the co., used the trade mark, he was not entitled to an injunction:—Held: the co. could not be regarded as the agents of D.; as defts. had not repeated in their defence their offer of an undertaking, there was nothing to prevent D. from obtaining an injunction; without deciding whether non-user of a trade mark could not, in certain circumstances, be set up as a defence in such an action without a motion to rectify the register, it had not been pleaded, & in the absence of evidence as to the circumstances of the trading, the ct. would not say that D.'s non-user of the mark constituted a defence to the action. The appeal was dismissed with costs.—FRAM MANUFACTURING Co., LTD. v. MORTON (ERIC) & Co. (1922), 40 R. P. C. 33, C. A.

A. In General.

741. Whether registration condition precedent to relief—Injunction.]—A Dutch co. moved to restrain deft., a commission agent, from infringing their trade mark, & from shipping goods abroad with their trade mark stamped on them. The writ in the action was issued after the time for registration of trade marks limited by Trade Marks Registration Amendment Act, 1876 (c. 33), had expired, & before Trade Marks Registration Extension Act, 1877 (c. 37), had come into force. Pltff. co. had not before the motion for injunction registered their trade mark:—Held: (1) registration was not a condition precedent to pltffs.' right to an injunction; (2) semble: the Acts do not make the registration of their trade marks by foreigners a condition precedent to their right to sue for an infringement of them.—*TWENTSCHE STOOM BLEEKERY GOOR & HARPER v. S. sold mineral water imported from abroad in bottles having labels bearing this device. This mineral water purported to come from springs belonging to O. & co. The co. brought an action for infringement. It was admitted that the device was adopted by O. & co. in Germany & was registered here by the co. with O. & co.'s knowledge & consent, & that O. & co. were using the device on their mineral water with the A. co.'s knowledge. It was alleged that the trade mark was only registered by the co. for the purpose of protecting an exclusive right to the sale of O. & co.'s mineral water in the United Kingdom which O. & co. had entered into a contract to give them:—Held: (1) it must be assumed that the trade mark in question was rightly on the register in the absence of a motion to rectify & A. & co. were entitled to register the mark as they did.

(2) S. was held entitled to read against the co. the cross-examination of one of their directors on an affidavit made for the purposes of an interlocutory motion in the action.—APOLLINARIS Co. v. SNOOK (1890), 7 R. P. C. 474.

B. Trade Mark containing False Representation.

744. Whether relief granted.]—Pltfs., who were manufacturers of & dealers in cigars in England, imported from Germany cigars made of Havana tobacco. There was no direct evidence as to the place where they were manufactured, but the ct. found as a fact that they were also manufactured in Germany. Pltfs. sold these cigars in England in boxes on which was a label containing their trade mark, registered under Trade Marks Registration Act, 1875 (c. 91), which consisted of the words "La Pureza," & a pictorial representation of an Indian woman in a state of semi-nudity holding up a bundle of cigars, two winged boys each holding a shield, & a background representing a portion of some tropical country. On one shield was depicted the arms of Spain, & on the other those of Havana. In the trade mark as registered the shields were blank. A smaller label contained what was apparently the lithographed signature of "Ramon Romnedo." On each box were branded the words "La Pureza" & "Habana." It was proved that "La Pureza" was an old brand, long disused, of Havana cigars, & that there was no known existing person of the name of "Ramon Romnedo":—Held: as the trade mark & other marks on pltffs.' boxes together amounted to a "dressing up" of pltffs.' cigars, & a misrepresentation that they were cigars manufactured in the Havana the action must be dismissed.—*NEWMAN v. The wrappers also bore a device consisting of a portrait, from a photograph, of pltf. in an oval frame, the portrait being the essential part of pltf.'s trade mark, which was registered as such in 1891. In 1892 pltf. had threatened with proceedings II., who was also selling cough lozenges in wrappers labelled "Army & Navy Paregoric Tablets," & got up in a manner closely resembling pltf.'s goods. Deft. subsequently purchased & carried on H.'s business, continuing the practices complained of. An action was brought for an injunction to restrain the infringement of pltf.'s trade mark, & the passing off of deft.'s goods as pltf.'s. There were circumstances in the case which satisfactorily accounted for pltf.'s delay in bringing the action. There was a concurrent motion by deft. to expunge pltf.'s trade mark from the Register, on the ground that a portrait was not a "distinctive device," & the proper subject-matter of a trade mark, within Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1888 (c. 50), s. 10 (1) (c).—Held: (1) a portrait of a human face, if not already on the register nor common to the trade, might be, & the portrait here was, a

757. — More than one year.]—Pltfs. had registered a label which bore together with other letterpress, the words "The Derby Dry Plates," also the words "Extra Rapid," printed in red diagonally. Defts. had issued labels similar in all respects to pltfs., except that the word "Derwent" was substituted for "Derby." More than a year had elapsed since deft. had commenced to use his label:—Held: the application of pltfs. for an injunction was not too late, & they were entitled to an injunction to restrain defts. from infringing pltfs.' trade mark by imitating their labels.—DERBY PHOTOGRAPHIC DRY PLATE CO. v. GRAHAM & CO. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 276.

758. — Four years.]—In the year 1897 pltfs. registered the word "Glacier" as a trade mark in class 39 in respect of transparent paper as a substitute for stained glass, & that word had become identified with such goods as sold by pltfs. In Feb. 1900, defts. commenced to sell similar goods under the name "Glazine." In Mar. 1905, pltfs. commenced an action to restrain infringement of their trade mark & passing off. They alleged that their goods were sometimes ordered as "Glazier" or "Glacine." Defts. alleged that their use of "Glazine" was not calculated to deceive, & set up acquiescence on the part of pltfs. A director of pltf. co., who was called as a witness, admitted that he had known of "Glazine" for four years, he would not say it was not five years:—Held: under these circumstances pltfs. had failed to establish that "Glazine" was an infringement of the trade mark "Glacier" or was calculated to deceive; & pltfs. failed on the merits & by reason of their delay in bringing the action.—*MCCAW, STEVENSON & ORR, LTD. v. T. & Co. defended the action & raised a contention against B. & Son concluding, inter alia, for declarator that the trade mark was incapable of registration & should be expunged from the register, in respect that it was common property before its registration by B. & Son:—Held: the lapse of five years was no bar to the removal of the entry, & the question of B. & Son's right to be on the register had been competently raised.—*BOORD & SON v. D. Effect of Offer by Defendant.

762. On grant of injunction—Offer after action brought—Refusal to publish apology.]—B. filed a bill against C. to restrain an infringement of a trade mark, & obtained an interim injunction: before the hearing of the cause C. offered to enter into an undertaking to refrain from using the trade mark & pay all costs, but declined to publish an apology, insisted upon by B., in the newspapers. The ct. at the hearing, while decreeing a perpetual injunction, ordered, in consequence of B.'s refusing C.'s offer, each party to pay his own costs.—HUDSON v. BENNETT (1886), 14 L. T. 698; 12 Jur. N. S. 519; 14 W. R. 911.

763. ———.]—Before commencing an action for infringement of trade marks & for passing off, plffs., through their solrs., demanded from defts. an undertaking to refrain in the future from infringement & passing off, that defts. should issue at their expense in two papers, to be named by plffs., an apology in terms to be settled by their solrs., & payment of an agreed sum as damages. Defts., whilst alleging that any infringement of plffs.' rights was by salesmen acting contrary to directions given to them, expressed their willingness to give an undertaking & damages, but refused an apology for publication. Plffs. commenced proceedings & moved for an interlocutory injunction. Several instances were proved of sales at a kiosk of defts. at the Wembley Exhibition of defts.' goods when plffs.' goods were ordered:—Held: plffs. were, under the circumstances, entitled to an injunction.—*KODAK, LTD. v. On T.'s complaining of this, W. offered to give an undertaking that he would not use such tickets again, & to pay a certain sum, but declined to make a public admission that he had used the tickets in order to defraud T.:—Held: notwithstanding W.'s offer, T. was entitled to an injunction with costs, & also to an inquiry as to damages at his own risk.—*TONGE v. 768. ———. Plaintiff's motion for injunction not unnecessary.]—On June 12, 1886, one of defts.' travellers received an order from Nutting, of Lavender Hill, for sixty dozen cardboard boxes with labels bearing the words "Browne's Satin Polish for ladies' & children's boots & shoes, travelling bags, trunks, etc., manufactured by Browne of Lavender Hill." On July 6, 1886, pltf., the owner of a registered trade mark, 14,127 bearing the words "Brown's Satin Polish" issued a writ to restrain the infringement of his trade mark. On July 7, 1886, defts. offered to compensate pltf. without the necessity of legal proceedings & to destroy the labels, & comply with any reasonable request of pltf. On July 16, pltf. moved for an injunction:—Held: notwithstanding defts.' offer the motion was not an unnecessary proceeding, & defts. must pay the costs caused by what they had done.—FENNESSY v. DAY & MARTIN (1886), 55 L. T. 161.

769. ———.]—In an action to restrain defts. from using the Royal Arms & the words "By Appointment," defts. shortly after the issue of the writ agreed to minutes of an order except on the question of costs. Plffs. moved in ct. for an injunction. Defts. contended that the order might have been obtained in chambers, & asked that they might be only ordered to pay such costs as would have been incurred if the order had been made in chambers:—Held: plffs. were amply justified in moving in ct. for an injunction, & it was their proper course to do so. Defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action.—ROYAL WARRANT HOLDERS ASSOCN. v. KITSON, LTD. (1909), 26 R. P. C. 157.

(2) The right to an injunction ordinarily carries with the right to costs; but if pltf. asks for the costs, & for something more than he is entitled to, he will lose the costs he might otherwise have received.

(3) Where pltf. being entitled to an injunction seeks also for an account of profits to which he is not entitled, he will lose his right to costs, & if deft. submit to the injunction & offer pltf. his costs up to the filing of the bill, pltf. persevering in the suit will be ordered to pay all subsequent costs incurred by deft.—*MOET v. At the trial deft. S. did not appear; deft. B. appeared & alleged that he had acted innocently on behalf of S. It was admitted by pltf.s. that the purchasers of the wine had acted in good faith:—Held: (1) there had not been fraud on the part of B.; but an injunction was granted against both defts., with an inquiry as to damages against S., but not against B.; (2) as to costs, separate orders were made, namely, against S. a full order, but against B., an order for the general costs of the action, except in so far as they had been increased by the issue of fraud, with a set-off in favour of B. of the costs of that issue.—*CHAMPAGNE HEIDSIECK ET CIE v. Defts., who had acted innocently, admitted the sale under the name "Sferavox" of a single loud speaker not of pltf.s.' manufacture, but denied that pltf.s. were entitled to an injunction or to damages. They had for some time exhibited in their window a loud speaker not of pltf.s.' manufacture under the name "Sferavox":—Held: (1) pltf.s. were entitled to an injunction or to an undertaking in the terms of the statement of claim; (2) they were entitled to costs notwithstanding that they had asked for damages to which they did not show themselves to have been entitled.—*SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE RADIO-ELECTRIQUE v. Defts. proved that their principals had been using "Apollinis" in Germany since 1876 & that attempts to stop them had failed & further that the water in question had been sold in England under the labels complained of since 1881, in small quantities to persons who bought for private consumption & not for resale. Pltfs.' secretary deposed that they were not aware of the sale of mineral water under the title "Apollinis" until shortly before the action was commenced:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an injunction. As there was no motion to rectify the Register, the validity of the registration of pltfs.' trade mark could not be called in question in the action; the use by defts. of "Apollinis" was an infringement of the registered trade mark "Apollinaris"; there had been no such public & notorious sale of the mineral water in question with the label complained of, as to deprive pltf. of their right to an interlocutory injunction.

I think we are justified in coming to the same conclusion as the learned judge in the ct. below did, that the use of this word "Apollinis" is nothing more than a colourable imitation of "Apollinaris" (LINDLEY, L.J.).—*APOLLINARIS CO., LTD. v. R., & denying notice of the breach of the injunction before July, 1852:—Held: (1) they were entitled to the order, & acquiescence, to constitute a defence to such a motion, must amount to a licence to use the mark; (2) pltfs. might move to commit W. 826. — Reduction of prices necessitated by infringement.]—(1) Pltf's., in an action against three def'ts., obtained a judgment by consent for default of defence against def'ts. for an injunction to restrain infringement of pltf's.' trade marks, with costs, & by the judgment it was referred to the Official Referee to inquire & report what sums of money if any, were fit to be awarded to pltf's. for any damages sustained by them by the use of the infringing tickets. The Referee by his report found, for the reasons assigned by the report, that £3,007 ought to be paid by the first two def'ts. & £5,000 by the third. Def'ts. moved to vary the report, & pltf's. moved that it be adopted:—Held: the report be adopted, & def'ts.' motions be dismissed with costs, & they must pay the costs of the reference.

(2) When the Chief Clerk or the Official Referee has had before him, not only the whole case, so that he may have considered it as an entirety but has had the witnesses before him, seen them, heard what they said & seen how they gave their evidence, the ct. ought to be unwilling to differ from him with regard to conclusions of fact. Where the evidence is all writing, then, of course, the ct. is in a very different position: but when the evidence is oral it would be presumptuous, dangerous, mischievous, in my opinion, for the judge, with only the transcript of the shorthand notes or the Referee's own notes before him, to say that this, or the other conclusion must follow because it is the necessary consequence of the grammatical meaning of certain language used by persons who may have been lying, or stating facts in language which they did not themselves understand, or did not mean to be understood in the sense which it grammatically bears (KEKEWICH, J.).—ALEXANDER & CO. v. HENRY & CO., MITCHELL HENRY & WALLER & CO., (1895), 12 R. P. C. 360.

827. — From time when defendant had notice of plaintiff's mark.]—At the date of the registration of the trade mark hereinafter referred to, pltf. was carrying on business in partnership with one Joseph Berry as West African merchants & shippers under the style or firm of Horsfield, Berry & Co. On Jan. 3, 1901, J. J. H. & J. B., who were carrying on business in co-partnership, registered a trade mark in respect of cotton piece goods in class 24 consisting of two concentric circles of different radius forming a ring with the signs of the zodiac printed or impressed on such ring in regular order reading from left to right. In 1905 the partnership was dissolved & the whole of the partnership business, goodwill, & property became vested in J. J. H. In Apr. 1910 J. J. H. discovered that J. W. & co. were exporting & selling at Lagos in West Africa cotton piece goods, the wrappers of which bore a mark containing the signs of the zodiac. J. J. H. thereupon commenced an action against J. W. & co. for infringement. Upon the hearing of a motion for an interim injunction def'ts. offered to submit to a perpetual injunction & to pay the costs of the action down to that date. Pltf. had refused def'ts.' offer, contending that he was entitled to an inquiry as to damages. The action came on for trial. Upon the evidence:—Held: def'ts. were not innocent infringers, but had been aware prior to the commencement of the action of the existence of pltf.'s trade mark, & pltf. was entitled to an inquiry as to damages from the date upon which def'ts. first became aware of the ownership by pltf. of the said trade mark.—HORSFIELD v. h. False representation that trade mark registered.—Use of word "registered."—Defts., who were merchants in Belfast, sold a box of baking powder, bearing a label with the words "Trade Mark—Royal—Registered"; & on the obverse side were the words "Manufactured by Royal Baking Powder Co.,

New York." The trade mark had been for many years, & at the time of the sale was, registered in the United States, & had also been for some years registered in England, but seven weeks previous to the sale it had been expunged from the Register in this country. Defts. were prosecuted at petty sessions under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 105, for describing the trade mark as registered; & the magistrates being of opinion that the word "Registered" on the label did not necessarily imply that the trade mark was registered in the United Kingdom, & that being coupled with the words "Manufactured by Royal Baking Powder Co., New York," it might mean registered in the United States, they dismissed the summons; but stated a case for opinion of the ct. as to whether the Act had been infringed or not.—Held: the use of the word "Registered" amounted to a representation that the

Upon demurrer.—Held: this was not an action for penalties given by a statute to the party grieved within Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 3, nor an action by the Crown or by a common informer within 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5, the two years limitation consequently did not exist, & the demurrer must be allowed.—*ROBINSON v. Where an article, such as a match-box, cigarette case, or letter clip, is once a "manufacture of gold or silver," within the meaning of that term as used in the Act of 1738, it does not cease to be such because it is used as the base or foundation of enamel work, however great the artistic merit of that work is as compared with the value of the gold or silver.

844. Extent of warranty—Defendant in third party proceedings—Liability to indemnify co-defendant against costs of proceedings.—P. & C., the proprietors of a Trade Mark "Cathédrale" for herrings, brought an action against B. B. & Co. & W. B. for infringement. It appeared that W. B. had supplied B. B. & Co. with cases of herrings, bearing the mark "Cathédrale" with the representation of an edifice, with which they proceeded to deal. B. B. & Co. served a third party notice on W. B., claiming an indemnity from him in respect of the action, & an Order was made that the matter should be determined under the third party proceedings & pleadings were delivered therein. In the action an injunction was by consent ordered against both defts. with costs, without prejudice to the third party proceedings. An agreed sum of £200 for damages & an agreed sum of £175 for costs had been paid by W. B. to plffs. The third party proceedings came on for trial:—Held: W. B. had warranted that the trade mark had not been falsely applied & was under an obligation to indemnify B. B. & Co. against the costs of the action. He was ordered to repay them the costs which they had paid, such costs to be taxed as between solr. & client, & to pay them the costs of the third party proceedings to be taxed as between party & party.

It seems to me that whether the goods were then manufactured or were going to be manufactured, were then marked or were going to be marked, they undoubtedly were so marked when the delivery of the goods took place, & it seems to me that it would make the sect. 847. Goods supplied of as good quality.]—In order to constitute the offence of applying a false trade description to goods with intent to defraud, within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (1), it is not necessary that there should be any fraud in the sense of an intent to supply a worthless or inferior article, but it is sufficient that an article is intended to be supplied of a different description from that which the customer intends to purchase & believes he is purchasing.

Resps., who were manufacturers of gunpowder, entered into a contract with the Govt. to supply powder. Owing to an accident they were unable to manufacture the powder themselves, & in order to carry out their contract they bought German powder, & put it into barrels supplied by the Govt., & put labels upon the barrels containing their own name & a description applicable to the powder of their own manufacture which they would have delivered if they had not been prevented by the accident. The powder so delivered was, in fact, equal in quality to powder of resps.' own manufacture, but no indication was given that the powder was of German manufacture:—Held: resps. were guilty of the offence of applying a false trade description to goods within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (1) (d), & they had acted with intent to defraud within sect. 2, sub-sect. 1 (f), & were liable to be convicted.—*STAREY v. 849. Vendor suspecting genuineness of trade mark — Warning to purchaser.]—Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (2), provides that a person selling goods to which a forged trade mark is applied is guilty of an offence against the Act unless he proves that, having taken all reasonable precautions, he had no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade mark "or that otherwise he had acted innocently":—Held: a person who had reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade mark might nevertheless have acted innocently in selling goods to which the trade mark was applied, & might, therefore, be exonerated under this sub-sect.—CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS v. COOPER, [1900] 2 Q. B. 522; 69 L. J. Q. B. 708; 83 L. T. 54; 64 J. P. 692; 49 W. R. 46; 16 T. L. R. 442, D. C.

850. Reasonable precautions not taken.]—Resps. were charged with selling goods to which a false trade description, namely, "silk," was applied. The magistrate found that stockings had been sold as silk which were, in fact, artificial silk. He held that all reasonable precautions had not been taken, but that the buyer employed by resps. had acted in perfect good faith; & that there being no mens rea, which the learned magistrate, in a written judgment annexed to the case, defined as "intent to cheat or defraud," resps. had "otherwise acted innocently" & were entitled to acquittal:—Held: Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (2), provides two alternative kinds of defence, one contained in clauses (a) & (b) together, & the other in clause (c); it is necessary to prove that all reasonable precautions were taken, as a foundation for the defence of "no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade description"; the seller is not entitled to say that although he did not take all reasonable precautions, he had no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade description, & therefore, "otherwise" acted innocently; such an interpretation would in effect omit the word "otherwise."—*ALLARD v. 853. ———.]—The provisions of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (2), which make it an offence to sell goods to which a false trade description is applied, do not apply where the description is entirely oral.

Resp. asked a salesman in applt.'s shop for a small English ham; the salesman pointed to some American hams on a shelf, & said, "These are Scotch hams"; resp. chose one, which was weighed, & an invoice which did not contain the word "Scotch" was handed to resp. by another assistant. Resp. told the assistant to put the word "Scotch" on the invoice, as he had bought the ham as such; the assistant did so, & handed the invoice to resp., who then paid the amount:—Held: the description in the invoice was a false trade description sufficient to satisfy the statute.—COPPEN v. 854. ——— Ticket inserted in packet.]—Respt. bought from applts., who were tea merchants, one quarter pound of tea. The packet was already wrapped in silver paper & tied up with string. The shopman put a ticket under the string, wrapped the whole parcel in brown paper, & delivered it to resp. On the silver paper was printed the words "Star Tea Co.'s blend, quarter pound gross weight." On one side of the ticket was printed "Star Tea Co., Ltd., 1 lb. 2/8 tea ticket. 22 Park St., Walsall 1. 1886," & on the other side a notice to the effect that every purchaser of quarter pound of tea & upwards was given some useful article or check, in exchange for a number of which a valuable present would be given by applts. Resp. was not shown the silver paper, nor was it handed to him to read before it was wrapped in brown paper, nor was his attention called to the words printed on it. There were only 3½ ounces of tea in the packet:—Held: the ticket constituted a false trade description within the meaning of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (1) (d).—STAR TEA CO., LTD. v. WHITWORTH (1904), 91 L. T. 87; 68 J. P. 443; 20 T. L. R. 539; 48 Sol. Jo. 494; 2 L. G. R. 1000; 20 Cox, C. C. 658, D. C.

The packets respectively contained less than half a pound weight of tea:—Held: the mere handing of the packets to applt. in response to his demand did not constitute an "application" to the goods of a false trade description of their weight within the meaning of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (2).—LANGLEY v. 858. ——— Selling beer in bottle marked with another brewer's name—Though proper label affixed.]—Applt., a bottler of beer, having in the course of his business come into possession of certain bottles belonging to the F. Brewery co. & embossed with that co.'s name, filled them with beer brewed by Bass & co., placed Bass & co.'s labels upon them, & sold the contents as being Bass & co.'s beer:—Held: applt. had applied a false trade description, namely, the F. Brewery co.'s name, to the beer none the less because the presence of the Bass labels on the bottles would prevent any reasonable purchaser from supposing that he was buying anything but Bass's beer.—STONE v. BURN, [1911] 1 K. B. 927; 80 L. J. K. B. 500; 103 L. T. 540; 74 J. P. 456; 27 T. L. R. 6, D. C.

Description "lawfully & generally applied" at passing of Act—Description known to trade but not to public.]—At the time of the passing of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), there was a trade in England in the sale of small fish, prepared in oil & packed in tins, under the description of "Norwegian sardines." Sardine is the French name for the pilchard. The persons engaged in the trade knew, but the purchasing public did not know, that the fish under the above description

The contents only of the bottles were sold, & D. supplied the bottles & cases on condition that they were to be returned; if unreturned, there was a fixed charge less than the value of the bottles & cases; & in the event of a subsequent return the charge was refunded. I., another firm of aerated water manufacturers, used certain of D.'s bottles & cases for the supply of their own minerals, but with their own labels fixed to the bottles. There was no suggestion that in so doing they were attempting to pass off the articles as D.'s. D. applied for an interdict against I.:—Held: granting the interdict; the property in the bottles & cases remained in D.; I. had contravened Act 22, 1888, s. 2 (2).—DALYS, LTD. v. a. ——— Selling lower priced article — With higher priced brand.]—The fact that the existence of any difference between two classes of an article which pltf. makes & sells with different brands & at different prices is doubtful, or that such difference, if it exists is so trivial as not to be generally appreciable is no answer to a claim for an injunction to restrain deft. who has purchased the lower priced article from pltf. from placing upon such article without pltf.'s authority the stamp or brand which pltf. puts only on the high priced article.—INGRAM & SONS v. were not sardines, but were brisling, a Norwegian fish similar to the sprat. Resps. having sold in 1912 brisling prepared in the above manner under the description of "Norwegian sardines" were charged with an offence under sect. 2 (2) of the Act, & by way of defence relied on sect. 18 of the Act:—Held: a trade description was not "lawfully" applied to goods within sect. 18 if its use, although not involving the commission of a criminal offence, tended to mislead the public; a trade description was not "generally" applied unless it was a conventional term in general use, not only by the persons engaged in the particular trade, but by the public at large; the description "Norwegian sardines" was neither "lawfully" nor "generally" applied at the time of the passing of the Act to brisling prepared in oil & sold in tins; & resps. were, therefore, guilty of the offence charged.—*LEMY v. It was found as a fact that applts. knew that the process of coopering casks had the effect of diminishing their holding capacity:—Held: applts. were rightly convicted of applying a false trade description within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (1) (d).—*NORTH-EASTERN BREWERIES, LTD. v. SECT. 5.—DESCRIPTION OF COUNTRY OF ORIGIN.

See Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 3 (1) (b).

862. What is country of origin—Place where finished product made.]—A person had in his possession for sale margarine packed in cardboard boxes, marked with the words "French Factory." The margarine consisted of a substance manufactured from animal fat at a factory in Paris, & sent thence to an English factory where, by admixture with Danish butter & English milk, it assumed the form in which it was offered for sale:—Held: as the margarine became the finished product for the first time in England, the words

"French Factory" on the boxes was a false trade description within the meaning of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), ss. 2, 3.—BISCHOP v. TOLER (1895), 65 L. J. M. C. 1; 73 L. T. 402; 59 J. 864. ———— Tarragona port.]—R. & co. sold to H. a bottle of wine bearing a label on which was printed in large letters "Stower's Tarragona Port," followed by the words "blended with wine produced from finest foreign grapes," in smaller letters. T. Port is a wine made in the province of T., in Spain, from fresh grapes grown in that province, & is a wine having a distinct taste, bouquet, & smell. One-third of the contents of the bottle consisted of a special kind of high-priced T. Port called "Mistella," which is a very heavy wine, not fit for drinking by itself, & imported for the purpose of being blended with other wines. The remaining two-thirds were composed of a wine purchased by resps. & made from "grape must." "Grape must" is made in Greece, & consists of the concentrated juice of fresh grapes grown in Greece. It is concentrated by the evaporation of about three-fourths of the natural water contained in the grape juice. When concentrated it is exported under the control of the Greek Govt., & imported into England, where it is converted into wine by adding a ferment & water to an amount corresponding to the amount previously removed by evaporation. The wine so produced is a wine, though not of high quality. An information for selling goods to which a false trade description had been applied having been dismissed:—Held: upon the evidence it was impossible to say that the magistrate was bound to find that there was a false trade description.—*HOOPER v. Act, 1887, s. 2 (2), is not limited to cases where a person sells, or exposes for or has in his possession for sale, goods on which a false description is stamped or attached by label.—H.M. ADVOCATE v. JACOB, [1908] S. C. (J.) 90; 45 So. L. R. 852; 16 S. L. T. 320.—SCOT.

The value of these parts in their rough condition, including the mainspring, hairspring, & certain screws, was 8d. The price of these parts when finished in England was estimated to be 4s. 5d. All these parts were dealt with in this country to enable them to go into a watch, & the watch was put together here.

The magistrate held that the imported parts were of foreign origin & of such importance that a description which failed to indicate them was a false description in a material respect, & that the finishing operations in this country were not of such a character as to destroy the characteristics of the foreign country in which they were made & produced. He accordingly convicted applts. of applying a false trade description to the watch:—Held: if he had come to this conclusion as one of fact on the evidence, & had simply stated the case to determine whether there was anything in point of law to prevent him coming to such conclusion, the ct. would not disturb his decision; but if he decided upon the view that the inclusion of certain parts partly manufactured abroad compelled him as a matter of law to hold that "English" was a false description, then his decision could not be supported.—*WILLIAMSON, LTD. v. 867. "Tarragona port"—Implication of Portuguese origin.]—By the Anglo-Portuguese Commercial Treaty Acts, 1914 & 1916, the description "port" applied to any wine other than wine the produce of Portugal which, on importation into the United Kingdom, is accompanied by a certificate that it is a wine to which by the law of Portugal the description "port" may be applied, is to be deemed to be a false trade description within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28).

Resp. sold a bottle of red Spanish wine known as "Tarragona" bearing a label with the words "Tarragona Port." "Tarragona" is not port, & the wine sold was not port but "Tarragona":—Held: resp. had applied a false trade description to the wine, as the Acts prohibit the unauthorised use of the word "port" either alone or when qualified by another word.—*SANDEMAN v. What amounts to description of origin—Cigars sold in boxes with Spanish get up.]—Deft. was indicted under Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 2 (2), for having sold two boxes of cigars to which a false trade description was applied. The evidence was to the effect that the cigars in question were British made, the tobacco used being largely Havana tobacco; that the cigars were not manufactured by deft., who merely sold them, & that he did not apply the trade description. On the outside of the boxes were the words, "Flor de Creanzo," "Creanzo y Cia. Gran Fabrica de Tabacos," & other Spanish words, & the picture of a Spanish lady, & there were no English words at all, or any words indicating that the cigars were British made. For many years British made cigars had been sold under a similar get up. The jury having convicted deft. :—Held: the offence was the sale of the cigars with a false trade description, & it was not necessary to prove that the purchaser was misled; sect. 18 of the Act did not apply; & the jury were justified in convicting deft..—*R. v. 871. ———. Description added at request of customer.]—Although upon a sale of goods a purely oral indication of the country of their production will not amount to a trade description within the meaning of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), any writing or mark, however unintelligible without explanation, will, if orally explained by the vendor at the time of sale to be intended to indicate a particular country as the country in which the goods were produced, constitute a sufficient trade description for the purposes of the Act. Applt. went into the shop of resp., a dealer in foreign meat, & asked for a leg of New Zealand mutton. Resp. handed him a leg of mutton, at the same time stating that it was New Zealand meat. Resp. also handed him an invoice in which the meat was described simply as a leg of mutton. Applt. then asked resp. to mark on the invoice that it was New Zealand meat; whereupon resp. wrote on it the letters "N. M.," intending thereby to represent that the mutton was New Zealand mutton. No evidence was given that those letters bore that meaning according to any custom of the trade:—Held: under the circumstances the letters "N. M." amounted to a trade description of the meat within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 3, notwithstanding the absence of any trade custom as to their meaning.—*CAMERON v. itself, according to the proper trade interpretation of the words used, be capable of possessing the meaning that the goods were made in a particular place or country; & it is not sufficient that it is, according to the custom of the trade, commonly taken to be an indication that the goods were so made.—

cigarettes to which a false trade description namely "guaranteed hand made" was applied. The cigarettes were in fact machine made but were of equally good quality with hand made cigarettes. The magistrate held that there was no intention to deceive the buyer but only to save expense by using up a stock of old labels & that the description though untrue in fact was not a false trade description in any material respect as regarded the cigarettes sold, within Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 3, & dismissed the information. On a case stated:—Held: (1) the fact that the cigarettes sold as hand made were of as good quality as hand made cigarettes afforded no defence; (2) the description was false in a material respect & respas. having knowingly applied the false description had not acted innocently & were guilty of an offence against the Act.—*KIRSHENBOIM v. 873. "Natural mineral water"—Water restored to natural quality before bottling.]—Resps. sold bottled mineral water, which they described as "natural mineral water." The water was found in a spring several hundred feet deep. It was taken from a depth of about 60 feet, & conducted into tanks for the purpose of bottling. While in the tanks three things happened to it: (a) a small proportion of the iron existing in the water combined with the oxygen in the air, & was deposited as peroxide of iron; (b) common salt, in the proportion of 1 in 1,000 was added to the water in order to neutralise the effect of the sulphur contained in the water on the corks of the bottles; (c) a considerable quantity of carbonic acid gas escaped from the water, this was subsequently reintroduced into the water in the process of bottling, such carbonic acid gas being obtained from the spring & re-introduced under similar pressure as would prevail in the water at 60 feet, the depth from which the water was originally taken. There was no evidence given on which the magistrate could rely that the word "natural" had any special trade signification in connection with the sale of mineral waters. The magistrate came to the conclusion that the water as sold was in all essentials identical with the water as it existed in the spring at the depth of about 60 feet, & decided that the label was not a false trade description:—Held: the magistrate had come to a correct decision.—DAVENPORT v. APOLLINARIS CO., LTD. (1903), 89 L. T. 19; 67 J. P. 323; 19 T. L. R. 520; 20 Cox, C. C. 502, D. C.

875. "Soda crystals"—Generic name confined by usage of trade to particular species.]—Where the generic name of certain commodities has by the usage of the trade come to be confined to a particular species, the fact that the application of that name to another species is literally correct will not prevent it from being a false trade description within the meaning of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), s. 3 (1).

Washing soda & Glauber's salt are both salts of soda in a crystalline form; but the description "soda crystals" is by the usage of the trade of manufacturing chemists applied only to the former. Criminal liability of master for acts of servant—Effect of Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28).]—Resp. sold & caused to be delivered to applt. six casks of beer, & at the same time or immediately afterwards delivered to him an invoice describing the six casks as barrels, a barrel meaning, according to the custom of the trade, 36 gallons. Applt., finding that the measure was short, preferred an information against resp. for unlawfully applying a false trade description contrary to Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28). The justices were satisfied that short measure had been delivered, but refused to receive evidence of previous short deliveries, & considered that resp. had had no intention to defraud. They held that the delivery of the invoice was not a false trade description within the Act, & dismissed the information, but stated a case:—Held: remitting the case, without expressing an opinion whether the justices ought to have convicted or not on the evidence before them, the delivery of the invoice with the goods might, under the circumstances, be an application of a false trade description within the meaning of the statute; the justices were wrong in excluding the evidence tendered as to previous short deliveries; & the old law that a master is not liable criminally for the acts of his servant has not been altered by Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), with respect to offences thereunder except that the onus is placed on deft. of showing that he acted without intent to defraud.—*BUDD v. NOTE.—The Acts now in force as to trade designs in England are Patent & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), & Patent & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), herein referred to as the 1907 Act & 1919 Act respectively. In considering the cases set out in this Part regard must be had to their date, the Act under which they were decided & the effect of subsequent Acts.

SECT. 1.—DEFINITIONS.

879. Design.—(1) “Design” under the Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), includes everything which ordinarily falls within the word, whether “pattern,” “shape,” “configuration,” or “ornament,” & a design registered as “applicable” for the pattern, is not to be confined to the pattern only to the exclusion of other elements in it.

(2) Where an accidental mistake has been made in the die with which registered goods are marked, the proprietor will be held to have taken “all proper steps” to ensure the marking, within Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 51, if he has given proper instructions to the workman who made the die, even though the mistake may not have been detected for some time.—HEATH & SONS v. SECT. 2.—REGISTRATION OF DESIGNS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHAT DESIGNS REGISTRABLE.

A. In General.

881. General principles.—A design in order to be registrable under 1907 Act, s. 49, must be some conception or suggestion as to shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament, & be capable of being applied to an article in such a way that the article to which it has been applied will show to the eye the particular shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament the conception or suggestion of which constitutes the design. The representation accompanying an application for registration must be something in the nature of a drawing or tracing, by means of which the conception or suggestion constituting the design may be imparted to others, so that persons looking at the drawing can form a mental picture of the shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament of the article to which the design has been applied; but a conception or suggestion as to a mode or principle of construction, though in some sense a design, is not registrable.

Inasmuch, however, as the mode or principle of construction of an article may affect its shape or configuration, the conception of such a mode or principle of construction may well lead to a conception as to the shape or configuration of the completed article, & a conception so arrived at may, if sufficiently definite, be registered under the Act.

A drawing was registered as a design in respect of vehicle wheels, the novelty in which was said to consist of the disposition of the tyre rim in relation to the hub & in the cross-sectional arrangement of three sets of spokes, such disposition & arrangement being shown in the drawing, which was a cross-sectional drawing of a vehicle wheel on the longitudinal central plane, a conventional drawing such as would be used by an engineer to

PART IV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A g. Design for article incomplete in itself.—A design may be made the subject of registration, though it depict an article incomplete in itself, but which is intended to be used in combination with & as part of another article of manufacture.—WALKER, HUNTER & CO. v. FALKIRK IRON CO. (1887), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1072.—SCOT.

Sect. 2.—Registration of designs: Sub-sect. 1, A. & B.]

indicate how the wheel was to be constructed as regards the disposition of the wheel in relation to the hub & the arrangement of the spokes, but the drawing did not show what would in fact be seen if the wheel were cut on the longitudinal central plane. A competent mechanic could have easily constructed from the drawing a number of wheels whose configuration, from whatever standpoint they were looked at, would have little if anything in common except the disposition of the wheel in relation to the hub & the cross-sectional arrangement of the spokes. On the other hand, from each & every wheel so constructed a draughtsman, with a competent knowledge of the conventions of mechanical drawing, if asked to draw a cross-section on the longitudinal central plane showing this disposition of the rim in relation to the hub & the cross-sectional arrangement of the spokes, would inevitably, without actually cutting the wheel, arrive at the drawing in question. In an action by the owner of the registered design for an alleged infringement, a drawing of the machines made by defts., which were alleged to be infringements of the registered drawing, showed differences from the registered drawing, which, judging by the eye alone, were substantial differences, as a person looking at the drawings would see that the cross-sectional arrangement of the spokes was not substantially the same in each, unless he had in his mind a mode of construction rather than a conception of shape or configuration, & would not say that there was an imitation, unless he were judging both drawings by the method of construction involved rather than by the appearance they presented to the eye:—Held: either the registration was bad as an attempt to protect a mode of construction, or there had been no infringement, & the action failed.—PUGH v. RILEY CYCLE CO., [1912] 1 Ch. 613; 81 L. J. Ch. 476; 106 L. T. 592; 28 T. L. R. 249; 29 R. P. C. 190.

882. Design for patentable article.]—A manufacturer invented a new form of brick; constructing the bricks so that, by means of corresponding apertures in their sides, cylindrical passages were formed between them when they were laid together, & advantages were afforded for ventilation & other purposes, & expense was saved:—Held: the design might properly be registered under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 65, as being for “the shape or configuration” of an “article of manufacture having reference to some purpose of utility.”

Qu.: & this, whether the invention might have been the subject of a patent or not.—ROGERS v. DRIVER (1850), 16 Q. B. 102; 20 L. J. Q. B. 31; 16 L. T. O. S. 364; 117 E. R. 817. Annotations:—Consd. Re Clarke's Design, [1896] 2 Ch. 38. Refd. R. v. Bessell (1851), 16 Q. B. 810.

883. Design protected by letters patent—If no publication.]—Patent rights & copyright of design may in certain circumstances co-exist in the same person in respect of the same article. The registration of a design which secures mechanical advantages may as an anticipation prevent a subsequent grant of letters patent in respect of the same article whether appltd. be the proprietor of the design or a stranger. A grant of a patent & the publication of the patented article would prevent a design of the article being novel so as to obtain registration. Where, however, there is a provisional specification without publication of the patented article, & then registration of the design, & that is followed by the final specification, the two rights may co-exist, the right acquired by the registration of the design which was valid at the time of registration not being prejudiced by the subsequent filing of the final specification; but the right second in point of time, the copyright of design, would be held subject to the first. That would be so whether the owner of the patent & the owner of the design were the same person or two independent persons.—WERNER MOTORS, LTD. v. GAMAGE (A. W.), LTD., [1904] 2 Ch. 580; 73 L. J. 884. Mode or principle of construction.]—MOODY v. TREE, No. 996, post.

885. —(1) When I run my eye over all the exhibits which have been produced & deal with the matter as according to the decisions on the Act [Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57)] I ought to deal with them—as a matter of eyesight—I find nothing which would justify me in saying that the design which the resp. has registered is new or original within the Act (CHITTY, J.).

(2) Resps. base their defence upon this proposition that the registered design consists of an original contraction of certain movements of the lace-making machine. Upon that there cannot be any question as a matter of law it is wholly immaterial how the design is produced, by what instruments. All the ct. has to do is to look at the product & that is the design itself—and however it may have been produced to say whether it is new or original & not previously published (CHITTY, J.).—Re PLACKETT'S REGISTERED DESIGN (1892), 9 R. P. C. 436.

886. — — In 1905 a design, No. 454,848, was registered applicable to women's stays. The application for registration included the following passage:—“Statement of nature of design, shape, or configuration of corset. The novelty consists in a corset having the gores or gussets cut horizontally & from the front of the busk towards the back of the corset, as shown in the representations.” The registered sketch showed a straight fronted corset, in which the seams were not exactly horizontal, but the gussets tapered towards the front. A representation was attached to the application. An application was made for rectification of the Register by removal of the design on the grounds it was not subject-matter for registration, being a mode of manufacture; that it was not novel; & that the owner had in advertisements misrepresented his design; & had sold articles differing substantially from the registered design but marked with the registered number. On the hearing of the motion for rectification it was held, that the design as registered was for a particular form of straight fronted corsets made with horizontal gussets; that the fact that the design incidentally described a mode of manufacture did not make it any the less a design; that there was subject-matter & that the design was novel, & that it was not shown that the pictures of the design in the advertisements were not covered by the design; & that a statement made after registration by the owner of the design as to the extent of his protection ought not to affect the construction of the application or the validity of the registration. The motion was dismissed with costs. Appcts. appealed, fresh evidence being adduced by leave on the hearing of the appeal. It was held by the Ct. of Appeal that the representation attached to the application illustrated a method of manufacture, & that there was no design capable of registration, & that such method of manufacture was not novel. The appeal was allowed & an order made for the removal of the design from the Register, but the execution of the order was stayed pending a further appeal. Resp. appealed to the House of Lords.

The appeal was dismissed with costs, on the ground that what was registered was not a design within the meaning of Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 15), but an illustration of a method of manufacture.—*BAYER v. 888. —.]—An action was brought for the infringement of a registered design for a wristlet of leather. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that the design was invalid on the ground of want of novelty & want of subject-matter. The design was registered with the statement that "The novelty consists in the form of the strap a combined with the front portion b." The strap a was shown in a certain curved position which it might take up in the course of fastening the wristlet. At the trial defts. contended that, if the wristlet had any novelty, the design was merely for a method of construction, or, alternatively, it was only for the particular form shown:—Held: either the design was for a principle of construction, or, if not, it was not novel & had not been infringed.—PEARSON (E. J.) & SONS v. HARRIS (D. B.) & SONS, LTD. (1912), 29 R. P. C. 632.

889. —.]—In 1906 a design for the ornamentation of glass was registered, with a representation in the form of a photograph, taken by transmitted light, of a portion of a sheet of ornamented glass. The representation showed irregular lines enclosing darker hatched parts of irregular shape. In an action for infringement of the design, it was proved that pltfs. had produced a new & successful article of manufacture, having a frosted or crystalline appearance, & known as "arctic glass." Defts. contended that their ornamentation was different from pltfs., & that they had not infringed; that there was no sufficient registration, because there was nothing to show how the design was to be applied to the glass; that the representation, being taken through the glass, did not show the configuration of the glass surface; that the representation showed, not an article of definite outline, but merely a part of a surface, & consisted only of details; & that glass with raised surfaces was old, & there was nothing but the actual pattern that was capable of registration. Pltfs. contended that the design might be infringed although the details were not reproduced:—Held: either the registration was invalid, as an attempt to protect a mode of construction of embossed glass giving the "arctic" effect, irrespective of the design, or else there had been no infringement.—PILKINGTON BROTHERS, LTD. v. ABRAHAMS & SON (1914), 32 R. P. C. 61.

890. —.]—A design was registered in class 1

in respect of its application to a metal boiler for heating water & warming dishes & the like & for cooking purposes. The representation of the design on the Register consisted of two photographs, front & back views of a portable independent boiler. In an action for infringement of the design it appeared that the boiler consisted of a water-container round the back & sides of the fire, with a metal plate on the top & devices in front by means of which, at will, the effect of either a closed or an open grate could be obtained. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the registration was bad for ambiguity, because there was a doubt as to the nature of one of the front devices. Also, it appeared that before the registration of the design there had been kitchen ranges, fixed or portable, in which the fire could be wholly or partially closed, & that independent boilers & semi-circular or horseshoe boilers were not new, but that the boiler put upon the market by pltfs., which differed somewhat in detail from the registered design, had been the first independent boiler giving the effect of a closed or open grate:—Held: the plea of ambiguity could not be sustained & the design could not be impeached on the ground of lack of novelty or originality; pltfs. could not claim to protect a method or principle of construction; it had not been proved that there had been any actual confusion of the defts.' boilers with pltfs.' marketed boilers, & obvious imitation had not been made out.—JONES & ATTWOOD, LTD. v. NATIONAL RADIATOR CO., LTD. (1928), 45 R. P. C. 71.

891. Mechanical device.—Registration in Class 1 was obtained for two designs to be applied to "a runner or suspender for suspending curtains or the like from a curtain or like rail or bar." The first design was adapted for running on a flat rail fitted in between the upper and lower pulleys shown in the first figure. The second design was for a similar curtain hook, but only had one pulley. Both were of wire so bent as to bring the point of suspension of the curtain immediately below the centre of the pulley. Defts. had sold three types of pulleys, the first almost identical with pltfs.' first design, the second containing two pulleys of which the lower pulley was in effect merely a collar with flanges in the shape of a pulley; & the third like the second, save that the lower collar was less definitely in the shape of a pulley. Defts. denied infringement, & pleaded that the design if registerable at all, had been anticipated, that they were not novel or original, that they were not proper subject-matter for registration & that they were in substance mechanical devices:—Held: even if pltfs. were entitled to rely on the definition of a "Design" in 1907 Act, s. 93, rather than on the definition in 1919 Act, s. 19, there was no subject-matter for registration.—WILSON v. CHALCO, LTD. (1922), 39 R. P. C. 252.

892. —.]—Pltfs., who were the proprietors of a design registered in Class 1 in respect of its application to lubricators primarily for use on automobiles, commenced an action to restrain defts. from selling or exposing for sale an alleged infringement of the design. Defts.' nipple differed only from pltfs.' in that the lower hexagonal nut was slightly thicker. Defts. denied that they had infringed the design, & alleged that the design was invalid for want of novelty, & on the ground that it was not proper subject-matter for registration, & gave notice of motion to rectify the register by expunging the design:—Held: the only feature in pltfs.' design which might have been registrable was the sides of the nuts registering exactly with one another, but that as a nut was made for the purpose of being turned, it was impossible to prevent anyone from turning the nuts into any given position; & pltf.' design was in substance a mere mechanical device within the meaning of 1907 Act, s. 93.—TECALEMIT, LTD. v. EWARTS, LTD. (No. 2) (1927), 44 R. P. C. 503.

893. Catalogue of designs.—Pltf. co. which carried on the business of supplying cutter-crush machines & type & other materials used therewith, issued a catalogue consisting for the most part of a number of words which illustrated the products of the several sizes & shapes of type supplied by the Co. & customers ordered a particular class of type by referring to such words. Nearly all the words were selected by the managing director of the co. In 1922 defts. who were carrying on a similar business, circulated price lists which were practically copies of the price lists of pltf. Co. the words used in pltf. Co.'s catalogue & price lists to indicate the style of type being copied in defts.' price lists without alteration. Pltf. Co. commenced proceedings for an injunction to restrain infringement of copyright in their catalogue & passing off of goods which were not their goods as being their goods. The type sold by defts. was found to be inferior to that sold by pltf. & was sold at a lower price than pltf.' type. On the question of copyright defts. contended (inter alia) that pltf.' catalogue was a design or collection of designs capable of registration under 1907 & 1919 Acts, & not the subject of protection under the Copyright Act, 1911:—Held: (1) there had been a deliberate & concerted attempt on the part of defts. to find a market for their own goods, which differed materially from the goods supplied by pltf. Co., by means of conduct calculated & intended to induce people to believe that the goods offered by them were, contrary to the fact, the same as the goods supplied by pltf. co.: & the conduct of defts. entitled pltf. co. to an injunction:—(2) on the question of copyright the contentions put forward by defts. failed, & an injunction restraining infringement of the copyright of pltf. in their catalogue was granted.—*MASSON SEELEY & CO., LTD. v. 895. Distinction between.—The registered proprietors of a design for a tile, brought an action for infringement thereof under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 58. Defts.' tile, of which pltf. complained, although resembling pltf.' registered design in most respects, differed from it in many details. Pltf. proved purchasing one hundred tiles from defts.:—Held: (1) defts.' tiles were not an obvious imitation of pltf.' registered design; (2) defts.' tiles were a fraudulent imitation of pltf.' registered design.

(3) It is clear to my mind that pltf.' design was a new combination—a new arrangement of well known parts. It was not what I think the Act of Parliament means by an original design—that is to say suppose there had never been any ornamental tiles & a designer had designed this very design, that would have been original (MANISTY, J.).—*SHERWOOD & COTTON v. 896.—(1) C. registered a design for a "lamp for electric lighting, applicable for its shape." It was, in fact, a design for a lamp shade, consisting of a reflecting screen which had been commonly used for gas lights, & a ventilating top not materially differing from those which had been used before for gas, except that a chimney which was required for gas lights, but not for electric lights, was omitted:—Held: what C. had registered was substantially the old form of lamp shade with the omission of the chimney, which was useless when the shade was to be applied to electric lights, & there was no such originality or novelty in the design as to make it a proper subject of registration.

(2) I have no doubt that a combination of old shapes may result in a new or original design for shape; & if that is the result such design will be protected if registered under the Act. Nor do I say that even the omission of something from an old shape may not result in a new or original shape which may be protected. But when, as here . . . the new shape of an article is exactly like the old shape except that the useless upper part is omitted, I cannot say that the shape of what is left is new or original, or that the residuary shape has not been previously published (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(3) It is not easy to determine what distinction, if any, is . . . to be drawn between novelty & originality; but if there is any difference the design need not be both new & original (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(4) The design must be new & original with reference to the kind of article for which it is registered, meaning by kind of article, not the class of article mentioned in the schedule to the rules, but the kind of article having regard to its general character & use. A design may be new for a coal scuttle but not for a bonnet. On the other hand a design for a shade of a gas lamp can hardly be new if it was old for an oil lamp (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re CLARKE'S DESIGN, [1896] 2 Ch. 38; 65 L. J. Ch. 629; 12 T. L. The brambles were arranged in concentric circles round the six poles. Concentric brambling round six poles & name circles round two poles had been previously employed, but never name circles round six poles. The H. M. & co. manufactured a ball having six poles at the extremities of axes at right angles through the centre of the ball, & concentric brambling round these poles. The first circle of brambles

898. Question of fact.—It is a question for the jury whether a design is a new & original design. It is not to be withdrawn from them & decided as a question of law by the ct. not to be a "new & original design," because it is shown that the design is composed of a simple combination of two sizes of a previously well-known pattern.

A pattern, called the "honeycomb pattern," consisting of a certain cellular arrangement of the surface in cells of a uniform size had been for some time well known & applied to woven fabrics. Pltf. designed a pattern in which large & small honeycomb cells were arranged, so that a border of the larger cells surrounded an enclosed portion of the smaller cells:—Held: the jury were warranted in finding this to be a new & original design.—HARRISON v. 900. —.] — C., the owner of a design, registered for shape or configuration, for corsets, brought an action for infringement & moved for an injunction. Deft. moved to rectify the Register by expunging C.'s design. In previous corsets the busks or pieces of steel were either sewn into the front of the corset or were laced in, so as to be easily removable by running lacing at the outer margin of the busks. In the former case the corset was sometimes fastened together by lacing the two inner margins of the busks; in the latter the corset was fastened by hooks & eyes. In C.'s corset the busks were laced in & thus easily removable, but the lacing was diagonal & was at the inner margin of the busks, & when closed this diagonal lacing gave the appearance of the corset being laced together, though the corset was really fastened by studs & clasps. C. in selling his corsets, placed on them a ticket with the words "New method for removing & refitting busks for repairs, etc.":—Held: there was no practical difference in appearance or shape between the old laced corset & C.'s design, the eye is the test of a design, & so far as design, within Patents, Designs & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), was concerned there was no novelty or originality in C.'s design sufficient to justify registration.—COOPER v. SYMINGTON (1893), 10 R. P. C. 264.

901. Evidence of novelty—Immediate large sale.—The owner of a design for water closet basins having brought an action for infringement, deft. moved to rectify the Register by expunging the design as not novel or original. The motion was adjourned, to come on as the trial of the action without pleadings:—Held: on the evidence, & especially having regard to the fact that directly the design was put on the market it acquired a large sale, the design was novel, useful, & had been infringed.—TYLER & SONS v. SHARPE BROTHERS & CO. (1893), 11 R. P. C. 35.

904 1. General rule.—Variations which are mere trade variants without invention, originality or novelty, the introduction or substitution of which in a design is not sufficient to make the design new or original, are not proper subject-matters for registration.—KAUFMAN RUBBER CO., LTD. v. MINER RUBBER CO., LTD., [1926] 1 D. L. R.

903. —.] — A design was registered in 1910 in two separate classes to be applied to switch boxes for use in electrical installations, & primarily intended for use in motor cars. The design was of a box with a vertical front & a sloping top, the whole surrounded by a beading; in the top there were two dials with a representation of a push plug between them, & on the upper part of the vertical front there was a row of tumblers for switches, six in number, set into a plate attached to the vertical front, & at the bottom of the right hand side of the box there were two plug holes. The switches were, in fact, intended for the dynamo of the motor, for each of its two head & two side lights, & for its rear light. The owners of the design brought an action for infringement of it, in which defts. set up the defences of want of novelty or originality, & non-infringement, & that pltf. had placed the registered number of the design upon articles not made in accordance with it:—Held: (1) there was no novelty in the design in respect of shape, or in the placing of the dials, the beading was treated by pltf. as unimportant & the placing of the plug holes could not entitle pltf. to claim novelty for the whole design, & the claim to novelty really rested on the feature consisting of placing upon the vertical front the row of six tumblers; (2) the ct. was bound, apart from admissions or contentions of either party, to determine whether pltf. had in fact established their claim or novelty; & (3) the improper marking was inadvertent & confined to very few boxes & this defence failed.—VANDERVELL & CO. v. LUNDBERG & SONS (1915), 33 R. P. C. 60.

(b) Necessity for.

904. General rule.—Distinction between the two Acts relating to the copyright of design (5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, & 6 & 7 Vict. c. 75). The first applies to new designs for the ornamentation of articles, the second to new designs of articles of utility.

A design of a carriage was registered under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 75. The inventor claimed four things as new, & as conducive to the "utility" of the design. There was no novelty as to three of them, & they did not contribute to the "utility." The fourth tended to its utility, but was the mere extension of a well-known principle:—Held: the claim to monopoly could not be supported under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 75, & the design was not protected under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100 as an ornamental design, it not having been registered under that Act.

It is impossible to say that the application of the same thing for the same purpose can be made the subject of registration as a new & original design (ROMILLY, M.L.).—WINDOVER v. SMITH (1863), 32 Beav. 200; 1 New Rep. 349; 32 L. J. Ch. 561; 7 L. T. 776; 9 Jur. N. S. 397; 11 W. R. 323; 55 E. R. 78.

design was good subject-matter, which was doubted, & although the Judge was satisfied that pltf. had independently invented the design, on the evidence it had been used before pltf.'s registration. Semble: no part of the description of a design as registered can be rejected.—SMOUT v. SLAYMAKER & Co. (1890), 7 R. P. C. 90.

906. —[In an action for infringement pltf. had registered a design No. 402,223, for caps in Class 10, registering for shape & pattern only. The caps put on the market under licence from pltf. differed in the proportionate size of the parts from the design as registered. These had been copied by defts., who moved to rectify the register by expunging the design. Defts.' case was (a) the design was not sufficiently indicated by the registration; (b) if it were sufficiently indicated, the caps made & marked thereunder did not correspond with the design & therefore defts. by copying these caps had not infringed; & (c) there was no novelty in the subject-matter of the design. In support of the plea of no novelty, evidence of general knowledge of similar caps in the trade was relied on, & three copies of caps made previously to the registration were also produced.—Held: the design was sufficiently indicated by the registration, & the articles sold were substantially in accordance with the design as registered, but there was evidence of prior user & the design was not novel. Judgment was given for defts. in the action, & the Register was ordered to be rectified by expunging the design.—Re MANCHESTER'S DESIGN, MANCHESTER v. UMFREVILLE & SON (1907), 24 R. P. C. 782.

907. —[Pltfs. were the proprietors of the copyright in a registered design for the bottom part of the frame or spring of a cycle saddle which embodied the principle of a patent granted for "truss beams" in 1890, & in which the two bottom wires & the two top wires were close together & supported each other, & were fastened together at the front & back. The pairs of wires opened in the centre, running parallel for some distance with a view to being joined together by a "boss" fitting to the L bar of the cycle. The wires were kept in their relative position by an arch at the rear. Defts. manufactured cycle saddle frames, in which the two top & bottom wires brought together at the ends supported each other with a sliding space in the centre for the admission of the "boss." An action was brought for the infringement of pltfs.' registered design.—Held: eliminating the functions which the articles were intended to perform & looking at the registered design & defts.' saddle spring, as a result of that view defts.' spring did not constitute an infringement of pltfs.' registered design. The judge stated that if he had held that defts. had infringed, he was prepared to hold that pltfs.' registered design had been anticipated.—LEATHERIES, LTD. v. LYCETT SADDLE & MOTOR ACCESSORIES CO., LTD. (1909), 26 R. P. C. 166.

908. —[—(1) If the registration was valid at all, it must be taken in an extremely narrow & definite way, & it would not be an infringement unless the totality of the design, as registered, has been infringed; it is no infringement of a registered design to take a part out of that registered design & with an addition to make the total not identical with the registered design (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).

(2) I think that it is most important that the ct. should lay down that novelty or originality must be something substantial, & that where there is nothing excepting just that variation which every skilled workman would make between the articles that he makes for different customers, the law should not hamper him by saying that it may make him guilty of infringement of rights acquired by registration (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).

(3) In order to render valid the registration of a Design under 1907 Act, there must be novelty & originality, it must be a new or original design. To my mind, that means that there must be a mental conception expressed in a physical form which has not existed before, but has originated in the constructive brain of its proprietor, & that must not be in a trivial or infinitesimal degree, but in some substantial degree. The intention of the Act is to protect a person who has conceived & expressed in a physical form, the idea of something which is new or original as a design (BUCKLEY, L.J.).—*SIMMONS v. 914. Application of old design to analogous article.]—The 1907 Act, s. 49, provides for the registration of "any new or original design not previously published in the United Kingdom"; & the Act gives protection to a design so registered. The word "original" in that sect. contemplates that the designer has by the exercise of intellectual activity conceived an idea, which has not previously occurred to any one else, of applying a particular pattern or shape or ornament to the particular article to which he suggests that it shall be applied. If that state of things be satisfied, then the design may be "original" although the actual pattern or shape or ornament under consideration be old in the sense that it has existed previously with reference to another article.

Pltfs. were the owners of a registered design in class 3 for a pattern or ornament of hand grip for cycle handles. The design consisted of an engine turned pattern in wavy lines applied to the hand grip, & broken up into panels by deep longitudinal grooves, the hand grip terminating in a ring separating the panels from the smooth end of the cylindrical handle bar. The engine turning was of a common pattern & none of the other details of the design were new. In an action for infringement, the judge held that the design was "new & original" having regard to the kind of article for which it was registered:—Held: there was no novelty or originality in applying to a cycle handle a form of decoration which, as was proved, was in common use upon other articles of a cylindrical shape.—*DOVER, LTD. v. 915. Combination of old designs forming new & original design.]—A case stated by order of a judge showed that a conviction had taken place under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 3, for unlawfully applying an original design for ornamenting a button; that the design consisted of two parts, each in itself a well-known design for ornamenting buttons; & that there was conflicting evidence before the magistrate as to the novelty of the design:—Held: as a new & original combination might be the result of simultaneously applying two old & known designs to the ornamenting of a button, a rule for quashing the conviction ought to be discharged.—*R. v. 919. —[—]—In an action to restrain the infringement of a design registered in class 13, "printed or woven designs on textile piece goods," pltf. complained of infringement by certain dusters made or sold by deft. alleged amongst other things (a) that pltf.'s so-called design was no design within the meaning of Patents, Designs & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57); (b) that dusters, though woven in lengths consisting of sets of twelve, were comprised in class 14, "printed or woven designs for handkerchiefs or 'shawls'" & not in class 13; (c) pltf. was not the proprietor of the design & therefore not entitled to register; (d) pltf. had not, since registering, complied with the requirements of sect. 51 as to marking the goods to which the registered design had been applied; (e) deft. had not infringed:—Held: deft.'s contention was right on each of these points, & the action must be dismissed with costs.—*HOTHESALL v. H., previously to registering his design, & while perfecting it, consulted D., with whom he had business relations, as to the design, & sent him a sample for his inspection before registration. This sample was slightly altered by D. & returned. Another one was sent to D. which was paid for by D. after H. had registered his design. B., by his defence, alleged that the design was not novel or original, that H. had published it before registration, & that the registration was bad because the articles were marked Regd. instead of Rd., & he denied infringement:—Held: though no part of the table was novel in itself, considered as a whole the design was novel & original, & this was confirmed by the conduct of deft. himself in inserting in his catalogue a picture of the design taken bodily from D.'s catalogue, the design was not previously published, the registration was good, & deft. had infringed.—*HEINRICH v. A writ was issued on Nov. 21 against B. only, but no further step was taken. On Nov. 30, the writ in the present action was issued, & leave was obtained to serve notice of motion, for Dec. 3, for an injunction to restrain defts. from infringement, & to stay the delivery of the goods already shipped. It is said that the design is not new or original. Defts. denied infringement, alleged that pltfs. were not the proprietors of the design, that it was published prior to registration, & that there was no novelty:—Held: pltfs. were proprietors of the design, it was not published prior to registration, it was a new & original design, & defts. had infringed.—NEVILL v. BENNETT (JOHN) & SONS (1898), 15 R. P. C. 412.

924. —.]—Pltfs. had obtained registration for a design of a wallpaper of a type known as the "floral bedroom stripe." The design consisted of an arrangement of floral baskets, blossoms, & leaves, garlands or wreaths, & stripes. Defts., in pursuance of a custom in the wallpaper trade, made & sold a "follower" wallpaper in general imitation of pltfs.' design but differing from it in certain details of its composition. Defts. contended that pltfs.' design was neither new nor original, & they relied on a number of earlier designs each containing some of the same ingredients as pltfs.' design. They also denied that their design was an infringement of pltfs.:—Held: although pltfs. had made use of old materials for their design, they had arranged these old materials in a new & original combination, & pltfs.' design was a new & original design, & the defence of invalidity therefore failed; & as to infringement, defts.' design, although differing in certain details from pltfs.' was in substance a fraudulent or obvious imitation of it, & pltfs. were entitled to an injunction.—WALLPAPER MANUFACTURERS, LTD. v. DERBY PAPER STAINING CO. (1925), 42 R. P. C. 443.

925. Combination of old articles to produce new article.—D. registered a design under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 65. By the description, it appeared to be a design for ventilation by opening a hinged pane of a window by means of a screw: & it was stated that the part or parts of the design which were not new or original were all the parts, if taken per se & apart from the purposes thereof, & that what was claimed as new was the general configuration & combination of the parts. The utility of the design was in fact not produced by the shape of any of the parts, but only by the mode of putting them together:—Held: not a proper subject of registration, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 65 not applying to designs which have reference to a purpose of utility through the combination of parts independently of their shape & configuration.—R. v. BESSELL (1851), 16 Q. B. 810; 4 New Sess. Cas. 692; 20 L. J. M. C. 177; 17 L. T. O. S. 104; 15 J. P. 533; 15 Jur. 773; 117 E. R. 1092.

to form a badge. The badge was then registered under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100:—Held: this union did not amount to a new design within the above statute; & an injunction to restrain the manufacture & sale of a similar combination was accordingly refused.—MULLONEY v. STEVENS (1864), 10 L. T. 190.

928. —.]—The registered proprietor of a design registered in class 3 in respect of its application to a combined press for neckties or the like & box to contain collars & other articles, commenced an action for infringement of the design, which was of a box of common pattern with a lid composed of a tie press of a well known type in common use. Deft.'s box differed in several respects:—Held: there was no novelty or originality in the design, but if it was a design within the definition contained in 1919 Act, s. 19, there were six small differences between deft.'s article & pltfs.' design & as an exact reproduction was necessary, there had been no infringement. The action was dismissed with costs, & a certificate that the particulars of objection were reasonable & proper was granted, & a threats action was dismissed without costs.

If a design consists of a description of the article itself as a particular arrangement of old & well known things, & none of the features described is in the least degree new, there can be no novelty or originality & the registration is invalid.—REPETITION WOODWORK CO., LTD. & HILTON v. BRIGGS (TRADING AS LIFORD OFFICE EQUIPMENT MANUFACTURING CO.) (1924), 131 L. T. 556; 41 R. P. C. 449.

929. Necessity for distinct difference.—A design is not a proper subject of registration under the Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), unless there is a clearly marked & defined difference involving substantial novelty between it & any design previously in use.

A design for a shirt collar was registered, the advantages claimed for which were the height of the collar above the stud which fastened it in front, the cutting away of the corners in a segment of a circle, & the absence of a band. A collar was shown to have been previously in use which had no band, & in which the corners were cut away in arcs of circles; but the cutting away was not so wide, & the height above the stud was not so great, as in the registered design:—Held: the registered design was not new or original within the meaning of the Act, & must be removed from the Register.

The meaning of the words "novel & original" is this, that the design must either be substantially novel or substantially original having regard to the nature & character of the subject-matter to which it is to be applied (FRY, L.J.).—LE MAY v. WELCH, Re LE MAY'S REGISTERED DESIGN (1884), 28 Ch. D. 24; 54 L. J. Ch. 279; 51 L. T. 867; 33 W. R. 33; 1 T. L. R. 34, C. A.

930. —.]—Pltfs., the owners of a registered design for gentlemen's scarves commenced an action for infringement against defts., & moved for an injunction. Defts. denied infringement, & moved to rectify the Register by striking off pltf's.' design. The hearing of the motions was treated as the trial of the action. Defts. alleged that pltf's.' design was not in any way new or original, & had been anticipated by several scarves, & that it practically consisted in a variation of pleating, which was not registrable.—Held: a design for such an article of dress as a tie to be registrable, must have a clearly marked & defined difference from that which had gone before; pltf's.' scarf did not substantially differ from a previous tie, & was consequently not new; & to hold that the pltf's.' design was registrable would be to hold that the difference of a few stitches constituted a proper subject-matter of registration.—*SMITH v. 932. —.]—In 1910 registration in class 1 was obtained for a design consisting of a drawing of a finger for electric controllers. In an action for infringement of the design defts. alleged anticipation by a controller finger having the same parts as the design, but having two of them at an angle different from the angle between the corresponding parts of the design. Pltf's. gave evidence to prove the utility of a finger in the form of the design, in that a finger of that form could be fitted into a smaller controller case, thus effecting an economy of space. Defts. contended that evidence as to the utility of the design was inadmissible, but that, even if that were not so, there was no such economy of space as was alleged.—Held: there was no advantage, qua design, in forming the parts at the particular angle shown in the design; the design, as a whole, was substantially identical with the alleged anticipation, & the alteration that had been made from the latter in arriving at the form of the design was not sufficient subject-matter for a design.—*ALLEN WEST & Co., LTD. v. 933. —.]—Registration in class 3 was obtained for a design "applicable for the surface pattern of india rubber pads or plates for heels of boots & shoes." The design consisted of a pad in the shape of the heel of a boot or shoe having a plain central depression that might be filled in with leather or other substance, & ornamented on the surrounding portion with cross lines & being thicker at the back than at the front. The proprietor & licencees of the design brought an action for infringement of it. Defts. had sold rubber heels of the same form as the registered design, except that the ornamentation of the portion surrounding the depression was different from that in the design, & that the variation in thickness was absent. It was proved that, from a date prior to that of the registration, defts. had sold two forms of rubber heels similar in form to the registered design, but having the surrounding portion plain, & in the one case, a plain central depression, & in the other case, a central portion with a pattern at a slightly lower level than that of the surrounding portion. Defts. contended that, if the parts of the design were important elements of novelty, defts.' rubber heels had not those details, & there was no infringement; or, if the parts were not important, the design differed so little from the prior forms of heels that it was not new or original. At the trial it was held that the importance of the parts of a design is dependent on the character of the design; & that there was no substantial novelty or originality in pltf's.' combination of old parts.—Held: a design cannot be rendered new or original merely by a change of the mode of construction of an article; the fact that registered designs are kept secret makes it necessary for the ct. to take special care that no design shall be considered new or original unless it is distinguished from what has previously existed by something different from ordinary trade variants; that there was no evidence as to the novelty or originality of the greater thickness of pltf's.' heel at the back than at the front, a feature that was not present in the alleged infringement, although it was evidently regarded by pltf's. as an essential feature of their design; that the central recess in that design was old & always intended to be filled with leather or a like substance; & the object of the registration of the design had been to get control of the manufacture of heels with a central recess, however it was filled up.

This strikingly illustrates . . . the difficulty of the task which is imposed on a ct. dealing with a registered design when the person registering it has not availed himself of his right to file with his application a statement of the matters which he claims, constitute its novelty. . . . Under existing legislation the Comptroller has the right to require such a statement to be lodged, & my experience of the present & other like cases leads me to hope that he will freely avail himself of this power in any case where doubt is likely to arise (LORD MOULTON).—*PHILLIPS v. 934. —.]—Pltf's., who were the proprietors of a design registered in class 1 in respect of stove thermometers, commenced an action to restrain defts. from selling or offering for sale an alleged infringement of the design. Pltf's.' thermometer had an inlet tube bent at a right angle & a projecting & inclined flat scale face, the novelty claimed being "the stove thermometer having the scale face A projecting & being inclined as shown." The only substantial difference between pltf's.' design & the alleged infringement was that defts.' thermometer had a V-shaped scale face. Defts. denied that they had infringed the design, & alleged that the design was neither new nor original, & did not constitute valid subject-matter for registration.—Held: all the elements in pltf's.' design, except the means for securing the thermometer to the stove, were old, & all pltf's. had done had been to apply ordinary trade variants or trade adjustments well known & common for the purpose of making an instrument useful for the purpose for which it was intended; the fact that pltf's. had produced an article of commerce, the utility of which had been demonstrated, was wholly immaterial, & the design was not new or original; having regard to the extreme slightness of the differences between the design & the thermometers which had preceded it, there was sufficient distinction between defts.' article & the design to prevent the former being an infringement, even if the design were valid, & the action must be dismissed.—*NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA v. This was shown to M., who, having approved of it, gave an order on behalf of Messrs. O. for 1,200 yards of the lace, & took away part of the sample. It was suggested by pltf. that the order was conditional, namely, the pattern to be first registered. M. however denied this. The lace was delivered after the registration:—Held: the publication to M. was not confidential, only for the purpose of obtaining his advice, but he & pltf. dealt commercially for the purchase & sale of the lace, & that M. retained the sample for his employers; & accordingly the registration was vitiated by the prior publication, it being immaterial when or how the design first came to the knowledge of defts.—*WINFIELD & SON v. 941. Consideration by Comptroller—Refusal to prior applicant not material.—The Assistant Comptroller refused to register a design on the ground that the office had already refused registration to an earlier appct. for practically an identical design, & that it would be a hardship on the previous appct. to register the design, the subject of the present application:—(1) Held: there having been no publication of the previous application, the fact that it had been refused by the Comptroller's office was not a good ground for refusing the present application; (2) as the previous appct. had not appealed against the decision of the Comptroller's office, it would be no hardship on him to grant the present application.—Re BRAMPTON BROTHERS, LTD.'S APPLICATION, [1926] Ch. 255; 95 L. 942. — Judge of novelty.—An application was made for the registration of a design in class 3 applicable to golf balls. There was a well-known marking of a golf ball, called the "Silver King," consisting of an arrangement of square & other spaces separated by raised bands. The design was admittedly identical with that marking, except that, in the design, the bands were indented along the centre of their course. The application papers bore the following indorsement. "The novelty of the design lies in the pattern of the golf ball as shown in the representations." Appcts. contended that the design might be regarded as a series of frames around the spaces. The Assistant Comptroller decided that the "Silver King" marking anticipated the design, with one exception consisting of a series of indented lines that appeared on the bands & did not appear in any other golf ball marking, & that the application might be granted with an amended indorsement as follows. "The novelty lies in the configuration or pattern of the golf ball having the indented lines as shown in the representations." Appcts. contended that the proposed amendment did not set forth what they claimed to be their novelty of pattern, namely, "The surface pattern comprising a plurality of rows or rings of frames (say a) in relief round the ball with sunken areas (say b) within the frames & crossing grooves (say c), between the frames as shown in the representations." SUB-SECT. 3.—EFFECT OF REGISTRATION.

A. What Registration Protects.

944. Design registered for pattern, shape & configuration—Design as a whole protected.]—

(1) Where a design is registered as applicable to pattern, shape & configuration, the registration applies to the design as a whole, & it is protected although in one of those particulars it may not be novel.

Pltfs. registered a design for an upright hexagonal metal stove, the sides of which had the representation in metal work of a church window, of a particular style of architecture, with tracery above & below, the design being registered as applicable to pattern, shape, & configuration. Defts. produced a hexagonal upright stove with a design of a church window, of a different style of architecture, with different tracery, but the general appearance of the stove was very similar to that of pltfs.' stove:—Held: defts.' stove was an obvious imitation of pltfs.' stove & an infringement of his copyright.

(2) The owner of a registered design is not deprived of his right to protection merely because he places on the articles which he sells, besides the registered number of his design, other numbers which ought not to be there.

(3) Where a design is registered, & before the expiration of the term of protection the same design with an unimportant variation is registered, the original design may be copied as soon as the original term of protection expires, provided the variation is not copied.—*HARPER (JOHN) & CO., LTD. v. 945. Design consisting of several parts registered as whole pattern—Parts not severally protected.]—(1) The same nicety is not required in registering patterns or designs as in describing inventions sought to be protected under the Patent Laws. The provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, & 21 & 22 Vict. c. 70, are complied with by a person who leaves with the Registrar copies of his design, though without any written description specifying precisely what is the extent of his claim. If what he claims as his design consists according to the pattern of different parts, any one of which might be deemed "a design," his registration of the whole pattern amounts to a claim of the combination, & not to any of the parts thus combined, any one of which, therefore, taken separately is not protected by the Registration. A. registered as a "design," within class 12, sect. 3, of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, a pattern of a woven fabric. He gave no written description of his claim. The design consisted of six pointed stars on an Albert chain, arranged in a particular manner, & shaded, & he claimed, in his particulars in the action, "the particular collocation of the shaded & bordered stars upon the ornamental chain surface, as shown in the registered pattern, thus forming together the ornamentation of the woven fabric":—Held: the design, in respect of the combination, had been duly registered, & the pattern, as a combination, was protected.

946. — []—C. was the proprietor of three registered designs (No. 500,272, No. 511,323, No. 511,326) for sideboards. S. & B. had copied in one sideboard, with immaterial modifications, the glass & arrangement of the back of No. 511,326, adding thereto a pediment copied from No. 511,323, & in another sideboard had copied, with immaterial modifications, the glass & arrangement of the back of No. 511,323, adding thereto a pediment copied from No. 511,326, & in a third sideboard S. had copied the glass & back arrangement with pediment from No. 500,272, with immaterial modifications, in fact copied from No. 511,323. The carcasses were not imitations of defts.' designs. The designs had been registered as a whole. In a threats action brought by S. & B., C. counter-claimed for infringement of the registered designs:—Held: the sideboards complained of contained imitations of parts of the registered designs, but the general designs were distinct, & there had been no infringement.—*SACKETT & BARNES v. 947. Manufacture during period of protection—For sale after protection expires.]—A person having invented a design, & registered it under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, & 8 & 7 Vict. c. 65, obtained an injunction against another person who had manufactured with that pattern, but did not intend the same for sale until after the expiration of pltf.'s term of protection, restraining deflt. generally, & ordering all articles manufactured & things used for the manufacture to be delivered up to be destroyed.—*MACRAE v. 948. Manufacture in United Kingdom—For sale abroad.]—Pltfs. were proprietors of a design registered in respect of a set of type metal letters, the claim being for the pattern. Defts. were manufacturers of matrices or moulds in which types are cast, & had recently sold & delivered to the India Office in London matrices for casting type for purposes of sale in India in accordance with pltfs.' registered design. It was admitted that the matrices were intended for shipment to Madras,

& that the design would not be applied to any type in the United Kingdom:—Held: although the copyright in the design afforded pltf's. no protection in India, still the acts of defts. in this country were in contravention of the concluding words of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 15), s. 60 (1) (a).—*HADDON (JOHN) & CO. v. SECT. 3.—“PROPRIETOR OF A NEW AND ORIGINAL DESIGN.”

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHO IS A PROPRIETOR.

See 1907 Act, s. 93.

949. Author — Person drawing original rough sketch.—This was a motion to expunge three registered designs for the bodies of perambulators, which came on for hearing together with the trial of an action for the infringement thereof. The designs were protected, & the action was brought both on account of shape & pattern. It was established that the pattern was old & had not been infringed, but that the shape of the sides & toe of the body was new for perambulators. It was held on the motion, that the designs were novel & that the registrations were good, the fact of two being duplicates, registered for shape & pattern respectively, making no difference, even though the pattern was old; & that the person who drew the original rough sketch of the shape desired, which coupled with verbal instructions proved sufficient for the workman to work by, was the author of the design. The motion was refused with costs:—Held: in the action, a perambulator, having an end & sides shaped substantially like those in the designs registered, was an infringement, although different in ornament & detail of shape, & an injunction was awarded against infringement, but as pltf's. failed to prove infringement in regard to pattern as alleged, no costs were given to them in the action.—PEARSON v. MORRIS WILKINSON & CO. (1906), 23 R. P. C. 738.

950. Person acquiring design — Contractor for purchase of goods.—Pltf's. registered, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, a design consisting of a double card basket, formed of a combination of two baskets, admitted to be separately old in design. Pltf's. were not the designers, but had contracted to purchase the articles in Germany, & imported them to England:—Held: upon motion for an injunction to restrain the sale of an imitation basket, the articles were not new or original within the meaning of the Act, & pltf's., not being the designers, & not having purchased the design for value, were not entitled to the protection of the statute.—LAZARUS v. CHARLES (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 117; 42 L. J. Ch. 507.

951. — With exclusive right of sale.—A partial assignment of, or licence to use, a design under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 6, must be in writing, & can only be made by a registered proprietor. By a verbal contract made in July, 1877, C., an American manufacturer, purported to sell to pltf. the exclusive right to sell in England an article newly designed & then about to be manufactured, & also to obtain such protection for the same as he could do under English law, it being stipulated that pltf. should obtain the article exclusively from C.: by the same contract C. agreed to sell to pltf. the first twenty cases of the article for the price agreed upon, which was to cover both the right & the goods. In Sept. 1877, the cases were delivered in England to pltf., who paid the money due under the contract. Meanwhile, in Aug. 1877, pltf. had obtained registration of the design under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, & the copyright therein was granted to him for the term of three years. In an action to restrain the alleged infringement by deft. of pltf.'s copyright:—Held: on the evidence, pltf. had not acquired under the contract the right to apply the design to a manufactured article so as to entitle him to register it in his own name under the Act; pltf.'s right, if any, to protection could not have accrued till the completion of the purchase.—JEWITT v. ECKHARDT (1878), 8 Ch. D. 404; 26 W. R. 415.

952. — — — — ——In May, 1885, G., who was acting as the sole agent & consignee in the United Kingdom, during the year 1885, of toys manufactured in the United States by an American co., & consigned to him by them, registered in his own name the designs in accordance with which some of such toys were manufactured. The co. had authorised him to register the designs in his own name, but had not assigned to him the designs, or the right to apply them to goods, the only arrangement between them & G. being that G. should sell in the United Kingdom goods manufactured & consigned to him by the co.:—Held: G. was not the proprietor of the designs within Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 61, & the registration in his name was therefore wrongful, & must be expunged.—Re GUTTERMAN'S REGISTERED DESIGNS (1885), 55 L. 953. — Licencee with sole right of sale.—The registered proprietor of a design applicable to lace goods, registered under the Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), verbally agreed with pltf's. to supply to them all the goods manufactured by him according to the design, & to give them the exclusive right of selling such goods. On demurrer to a claim by pltf's. to recover damages against a third person for applying the design to lace goods, & selling goods to which it had been applied, without the licence or written consent of the registered proprietor or of pltf's.:—Held: the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action, because pltf's. were not the registered proprietors of the design, & the only right of action in respect of the injuries complained of was that given by Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 59, to the registered proprietor exclusively.—*WOOLLEY v. A. Deposit of Specimens.

See 1907 Act, s. 54 (1) (a); Design Rules, 1920, rr. 20–29.

B. Marking of Articles.

(a) Necessity for.

See 1907 Act, s. 54 (1) (b); Design Rules, 1920, r. 63.

954. What must be marked—Book of illustrations of design.—An inventor of new designs published & sold them in a book registered under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, & containing a notice that persons wishing to manufacture them for the purpose of sale must have the inventor's permission:—Held: such publication & sale did not amount to a licence to sell articles to which the designs had been applied.—DE LA BRANCHARDIERE v. ELVERY (1849), 4 Exch. 380; 18 L. J. Ex. 381; 154 E. R. 1260.

955. — Pattern pieces.—The proprietor of a design applied to paper hangings, registered according to the provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, published pattern pieces, containing the whole design, not bearing the letters "Rd." & the proper number, as prescribed by sect. 4: the ordinary practice in the trade was to sell hangings in larger pieces, but to mark patterns such as those which were published:—Held: he was not protected by the Act against parties copying the design from such pattern pieces, & publishing articles with such design applied to them.—HEYWOOD v. POTTER (1853), 1 E. & B. 439; 22 L. J. Q. B. 133; 20 L. T. O. S. 207; 17 Jur. 528; 1 W. R. 127; 118 E. R. 501.

956. — Articles sold abroad.—The copyright of a registered design is lost, if the proprietor, English or foreign, sell the registered article abroad without the letters "Rd." being attached thereto, as required by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 4.—SARAZIN v. HAMEL (No. 2) (1863), 32 Beav. 151; 1 New Rep. 253; 32 L. J. Ch. 380; 7 L. T. 660; 9 Jur. N. S. 192; 11 W. R. 326; 55 E. R. 59.

Annotations:—Distd. Fielding v. Hawley (1883), 48 L. T. 639. Mentd. Bromley v. Williams (1863), 11 W. R. 392.

957. — Articles sold in unfinished state.—(1) W., the registered proprietor of certain designs for lace, verbally agreed with W. & co. to sell them all lace manufactured by him according to the designs in the "brown" or unfinished state, & that W. & co. should have the exclusive right to sell lace manufactured according to the designs in the finished state. It was arranged that W. & co. should register the designs in W.'s name, & should mark the lace before it went on the market. W. & co. paid W. for the lace they took from him. W. & W. & co. commenced an action against B. for infringement of these designs. Deft. pleaded that the designs were not novel, that pltf. W. had delivered on sale articles to which the said designs had been applied without causing the articles to be marked as registered, & that W. & co. had no right of action. The action was set down & judgment given for deft. on this last point.

(2) On Mar. 10, 1892, about a week before the date of the assizes at which the action was to be tried, deft. discovered further particulars & gave information of these to pltf., telling him that he would give evidence of these at the trial. Pltf. objected. Whereupon deft. took out a summons for leave to deliver further particulars, & the judge at the assizes, to whom the summons was referred, gave such leave unconditionally. Pltf. appealed to the Div. Ct., who refused his application.

Pltf. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal, contending that a rule had been laid down in Morris, Wilson, & Co. v. Coventry Machinists' Co., No. 1012, post, that the practice in patent actions in such cases was to be followed, namely, that pltf. ought to be allowed a certain time after the delivery of the fresh particulars in which to elect whether he would discontinue on certain terms as to costs:—Held: the judge had an absolute discretion which was not, & could not be, fettered by any rule of practice, 958. — Articles sold to licensee for re-sale.

This was an action for infringement of a registered design of the pattern of a telephone transmitter with a receiver. Defts., by their defence, pleaded that A. & B., by whom the design was originally registered, had, before the assignment of the design to pltf., sold to defts. a certain number of telephones of pltf.'s design & pattern for the purpose of being resold by defts., which telephones were not marked as prescribed by Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 51. Defts. also alleged that the A. co., of which A. & B. were directors, granted defts. a licence to manufacture & sell telephones, which were in part made of pltf.'s pattern & design, without any stipulation that such telephones should be marked with a mark or figure denoting that the design was registered; & defts. had, to the knowledge of A. & B., manufactured & sold telephones of such design or pattern under the said licence without any such mark or figure. Defts. contended that on these facts the copyright in the design had ceased:—Held: at least one case was proved of a sale by A. to defts. of a telephone which was not marked, & probably others by A. & B.; it was clear that there was acquiescence by both A. & B. in sales by defts., under the licence, of unmarked articles; by such conduct A. & B. had lost their copyright under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 51, unless they could show that they had taken all proper steps to ensure the marking of the article; A. & B. had certainly failed to show that; & the action was dismissed, with costs.—WEDEKIND v. GENERAL ELECTRIC CO., LTD. (1897), 14 R. P. C. 190.

(b) Place of Mark.

959. Article consisting of more than one part—Marking may be on any part.—A butter dish under Copyright (Designs) Act, 1842 (c. 100), is properly stamped by the stamp being on the dish alone, & not on the cover, though the cover is separate & may be the chief place where the design is shown.—*FIELDING v. 961. Mark must be on part of article for which design registered.—Semble: Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 51, requires the marking of an article to be, if possible, on the actual part to which the design is applied.—Re MORTON'S DESIGN (1899), 17 R. P. C. 117.

962. ——In 1902 pltf. registered a design in class 1 for a lamp head to be attached to arc gas lamps, the design being for shape & configuration. Defts., having in 1904 manufactured a lamp head of a similar shape, this action was commenced by pltf. to recover penalties under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 58. Pltf. did not affix the registration mark to the lamp head, but to a metal ring at the base of the glass globe some little distance from the lamp head. Defts. alleged (a) that pltf.'s design was not novel; (b) there was no infringement; (c) the mark as applied by pltf. was insufficient, having

964. Effect of mistake in marking by manufacturer or workman—Where proper instructions given by proprietor.]—Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 51, applies to the delivery on sale of articles to which a design registered under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, has been applied, & the marking of such goods since the Act of 1883 came into operation is regulated by that Act. Consequently, the proprietor of a design registered under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, is in a proper case entitled to the benefit of the proviso contained in sect. 51, which relieves him from the forfeiture of his copyright resulting from the omission to mark the articles with the prescribed mark, if he shows that he “took all proper steps to ensure the marking.”

The proprietor of a registered design instructed the manufacturer, who made for him the articles to which the design was applied, to stamp the proper mark upon them, & furnished him with a die for the purpose. By inadvertence the manufacturer marked some of the articles with a mark which belonged to another design registered by the same proprietor, the copyright of which had expired, using for the purpose by mistake an old die which remained in his possession, & the proprietor, after Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 51), came into operation, sold some of the articles thus wrongly marked without observing the error. The letters Rd. formed part of both the marks:—Held: the proprietor had not forfeited his copyright, but he was protected by the proviso in sect. 51.—WITTMAN v. OPPENHEIM (1884), 27 Ch. Pursuers registered a design for the shape of a kitchen-range fire-door with a moulding on the top which had the effect of closing the range to cold air. Defenders manufactured a range fire-door with a moulding on the top which had the same effect:—Held: (1) the Ct. of Session in considering whether there had been an infringement of the copyright in the design for the shape of the fire-door were wrong in taking into account the question whether defenders’ design accomplished the same useful object (i.e. that of excluding cold air) as the design of the pursuers; (2) there had been in fact an obvious imitation of the registered design & therefore an infringement of the copyright.—*HECLA FOUNDRY CO. v. various prior publications set forth in the particulars of objections, & that there was no similarity between pltf.'s & defts.' designs:—Held: pltf.'s registered design was not new & original, & also, even if it was, there was not sufficient similarity between the two designs to enable pltf. to succeed, & there was therefore no infringement.—GILLARD v. WORRALL (1904), 22 R. P. C. 76.

976. —[—]—It is the duty of a ct. of justice to decide cases according to the truth & fact, & it is not bound to accept any fact as true merely because it is admitted between the parties to the action. Therefore where, in an action to restrain the infringement of a registered design, deft. has admitted the novelty & originality of pltf.'s design the ct. is not precluded from inquiring whether the design is in fact novel & original, & if it is of opinion that it is not so, giving judgment for deft. on that ground.

The principles by which the ct. is guided in dealing with patent cases are not applicable to the cases of registered designs, & a design must be an exact reproduction of the registered design to come within the Act; a merely colourable alteration is sufficient to take it out of the Act.—*GRAMOPHONE Co., LTD. v. Deft. denied infringement & alleged that the design was not new or original at the date of registration by reason of prior publication, prior user, & common knowledge:—Held: defts.' apparatus was not an exact copy or fraudulent imitation of pltf.'s design; pltf.'s design had not been anticipated & was a new design; the action failed on the issue of infringement; the defence failed on the issue of invalidity.—*JACKSON v. 980. —[—]—Registration in class 1 was obtained for a design in respect of a radiator for motor vehicles. In an action for infringement it was proved that the radiator was in fact fitted, & was extensively sold to be fitted, to Ford motor cars, & that defts. had originally sold for Ford motor cars a form of radiator without ribs at the top, such as existed in pltf.'s radiator, & that defts.' said radiator had not seriously competed with pltf.'s radiator. Subsequently, defts. began to sell a form of radiator for Ford motor cars having ribs at the top, & pltf.'s sales fell off. A traveller for pltf.'s radiator stated in evidence that, on seeing some of defts.' radiators, he had mistaken them for pltf.'s radiators. Defts. contended that there could not be a monopoly for putting a ribbed top on a radiator for a Ford motor car, & pltf.'s design was not new or original, having regard to certain prior users:—Held: the form of defts.' radiator was identical in substance with pltf.'s design, & the prior users were not; pltf.'s design was new & original, & had been infringed.—CARTWRIGHT v. COVENTRY RADIATOR Co. (1925), 42 R. P. C. 351.

981. —Omission of novel part of design.—W. the proprietor of a registered design for a tin oil can for cyclists, with rounded edges at the top & bottom, & other details, having discovered that A., whom he had at one time employed to make the cans for him, was infringing the design, complained. A., after some correspondence, wrote a letter expressing his regret that he should have infringed the design, in any way & thereby undertook in the future not to manufacture, sell, or offer for sale, any cans similar to, or only colourably differing from W.'s.

W., subsequently discovering, as he alleged, that A. was again infringing, commenced proceedings against him, & moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain A. from infringement, & from a breach of his undertaking.

The cans manufactured by A. were in all respects similar to W.'s except that the edges at the top & bottom were sharp. A. did not dispute the validity of W.'s design, but contended that the only novelty in W.'s can was the rounded edges, & that he, A. did not infringe:—Held: the only novelty in pltf.'s design was the rounded edges, & A. did not infringe.—WALKER & Co. v. SCOTT (A. G.) & Co., LTD. (1892), 9 R. P. C. 482.

982. —[—]—S. registered a design consisting of a conical tower in the form of a lighthouse with a spiral slide round it, the design being intended to be applied to a means of popular amusement called by S. a "Helter Skelter." S. brought an action against W. for infringement of this design & obtained an interlocutory order for an injunction. W. afterwards made alterations in his tower, & as altered it had a machiolated tower instead of a lighthouse. A conical tower with a slide round it was old for the purpose. Pltf. contended that deft.'s tower, as altered, was still an infringement of his registered design & applied to commit deft., & obtained an order for committal, but the order was suspended on certain conditions:—Held: deft.'s tower, as altered, had not the only novel feature of pltf.'s design, namely, the lighthouse, & did not infringe pltf.'s design.—STAPLES v. WARWICK (1906), 23 R. P. C. 609, C. A.

C. Obvious or Fraudulent Imitation.

985. Distinction between obvious & fraudulent.—An article is an obvious imitation when it is apparent to the eye that it has been copied consciously or unconsciously from the design. The phrase "obvious imitation" covers cases of fraudulent copying, though it is not confined to such cases. & it seems clear that the legislature in using the phrase "fraudulent imitation" is contemplating an article that is fraudulent without being obvious. It would therefore seem to be contemplating a case in which the difference between the article & the design are obvious, & in which recourse must be had to extrinsic evidence to establish the fact of deliberate copying. In such a case the existence of comparatively unimportant differences from the design sufficient to prevent the imitation from being obvious is not a fact of which the imitator can avail himself & may indeed be one of the elements of the imitator's fraud. — ROSE v. PICKAVANT (J. W.) & Co., LTD. (1923), 40 R. P. C. 320.

986. Conscious imitation — Producing substantial similarity.—Pltfs. registered & sold a design in braid, applied to a boy's jacket. Defts. sold jackets with a design in braid applied to them, which jackets were substantially of the same shape as pltf.'s. The designer of defts.' ornamented jackets had previously seen pltfs.' article:—Held: defts. had made a "fraudulent imitation" of pltfs.' design within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 7.

A fair imitation of a design is not prohibited by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 7, but, under the words "an such design, or any fraudulent imitation thereof, there may be a case where, although there are slight variations, the "design" itself has been applied; fraudulent imitation" is equivalent to conscious imitation, where, that is, a man, having the design before him, knowingly imitates, & that imitation is not sufficiently original to be protected as a fair imitation. — BARRAN v. LOMAS (1880), 28 W. R. 973.

987. — — — — — Both pltfs. & defts. were calico printers. Pltfs. had registered four designs, & some months after registration discovered that goods bearing designs similar in effect to theirs were being sold by defts. Defts.' designs did not actually reproduce the minutiae of pltfs.' designs, but they were a combination of similar drawings so arranged & coloured as to produce a similar effect. Defts. admitted that they had submitted pltfs.' designs to their artist in Paris so that he might, whilst producing the same effect, which was the fashion in vogue, avoid imitating the minutiae of pltfs.' designs. The question arose whether a registered design, consisting of a dominant & of subordinate parts so arranged as to produce a certain general effect could be infringed by a design producing a similar effect, although such design imitated neither the dominant nor the subordinate parts of the original & registered designs. It was contended that general effect could not be registered:—Held: defts.' design was in a legal sense a "fraudulent & obvious imitation" within Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 58, as the general effect of defts.' design was a reproduction of that of pltfs., & could not have been produced without copying the ideas of pltfs. & the ct. would grant an injunction against defts. until the trial.—*GRAFTON v. 989. — — — — — The proprietor of a registered design for a dinner set in porcelain, brought an action against a person who was selling a dinner set in earthenware, alleging that deft.'s design was an imitation, & gave notice of motion for an interlocutory injunction. The nature of pltf.'s design was stated to be "richly embossed shape." Deft. gave notice of motion to strike pltf.'s design off the Register. By arrangement the motions were heard on affidavit evidence & treated as the trial of the action. The dishes, etc., of the two sets were nearly of the same size, & were both elliptical in shape. The ornamental decoration was, in the opinion of the judge, dissimilar:—Held: assuming deft. had imitated pltf.'s design in desiring to rival it, there was no such similarity as to amount to an infringement, & deft. not pressing his motion, the action & motion to strike off were both dismissed.

The two things are, according to my eye, quite different. There are some resemblances, & [counsel] says: "We know that they had our dish before them & were aware of it, & no doubt they imitated in the sense of wishing to rival them & bring out something which would attract public attention & become fashionable." That, of course, may be conceded; but where did the similarities come from? It is for defts., according to him, to explain when once the similarities are established, the want of good faith on their part. "It is not," he says, "my business to show the presence of bad faith." I demur to that unless you establish such similarities as of themselves constitute an infringement (KEKEWICH, J.). — DEMARTIAL & CO. v. BOOTH (1892), 9 R. P. C. 409.

992. Adoption of general idea — Difference in treatment.—This was an action for infringement of a registered design for lace. Pltfs.' design consisted of a scallop or border formed of roses at intervals, connected by arcs of five little rings with open-work centres; inside this was a flowing backing consisting of a continuous branch of coral, the centre line being open work, a branch extending to each rose, & there being also a little detached branch of coral inside the general line & between

PART IV. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.—C.

9861. Conscious imitation—Producing substantial similarity.—Pltfs. were registered owners of an industrial design for a cook-stove, called the "Royal Favourite, 9-25," which, as a special article of their manufacture, had become well known to the trade. Defts. procured one of such stoves, caused a model to be made from it, & with some minor alterations, chiefly in the ornamentation, manufactured a stove called the "Royal National, 9-25," & subsequently registered it as an industrial design. In an action by pltfs. for infringement, & for an order to expunge defts.' design from the Register, the weight of evidence established that defts.' design was an obvious imitation of that of pltfs.:—Held: defts. should be enjoined from infringing pltfs.' design, & the registration of defts.' design should be expunged from the Register.—FINDLAY v. OTTAWA FURNACE & FOUNDRY CO., LTD. (1902), 22 C. L. T. 200; 7 Exch. C. R. 338.—CAN.

m. Fraudulent imitation.—The ct. will restrain the imitation of a trader's distinctive device & get up where the imitation is calculated to deceive. Where the imitation is fraudulent the ct. will not scrutinise the small each rose. The design was placed on a ground work of point de Paris lace. Defts.' design alleged to be an infringement had a scollop consisting of a large circular design formed of six little rings surrounding an oval, all with open-work centres, in place of pltf.'s roses, connected by open-work arcs; inside, a flowing backing of regularly shaped branch work, more like foliage than coral, the ends of the branches not being abrupt, with a branch extending to each rose, but no detached branch. The whole was placed on a similar ground work to pltf.'s. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that pltf.'s design was not novel or original, but this latter defence at the trial was only alleged as to the details of the design, not to the whole combination:—Held: pltf.'s design was novel & valid, but had not been infringed, the differences being so considerable that the one could not be mistaken for the other. The action was dismissed with costs, except those of the issue of novelty, which were given to pltf's.

The general idea of the design is old; that is to say, the design of a scalloped border with a flowing backing, & even the class of border & the class of backing is old in each case, & even a coral backing with a scalloped border was not novel. . . . The design is good, in my opinion, because it is a special & very pretty example of the general idea that I have referred to. It is a valid claim for a combination, & as so treated, it appears to me to be original, & as I have said, extremely pretty one too. But, this being so, in my opinion there has been no infringement. The design of defts. is not, in my opinion, an imitation of pltf.'s design, treated, as I have said it ought to be, as a combination design. The differences are so considerable that, in my opinion, no one could, or would, mistake one design for the other or confuse the two. . . . It appears to me that the resemblances, so far as they exist, are only in those general ideas of pltf.'s design, which were, as I have said, common & old; & this view of mine is really in accordance with the expert evidence, taken as a whole (ROMER, J.). BIRKIN & Co. v. PRATT, HURST & Co., LTD. (1895), 12 R. P. C. 371.

993. —.—.—[This was an action for infringement of a registered design for tombstones. Pltf.'s design showed a stone 2 feet 5 inches high & 2 feet 9½ inches in width, having on either side an octagonal pinnacle supported by a black porcelain pillar, with moulded brass & caps & three black studs or buttons. Deft.'s stone, which was plain, was of the same width as the pltf.'s but was 1 foot 6½ inches higher. There was a pinnacle on each side of the headpiece supported by a black porcelain pillar, but the pinnacles were oblong two sided instead of being octagonal:—Held: there was no infringement, & though defts. might have imitated pltf.'s general idea, they had not taken his registered design.—HOLDEN v. HODGKINSON BROTHERS (1904), 22 R. P. C. 102.

SUB-SECT. 2.—INFRINGEMENT BY RETAIL DEALER.

994. Necessity for knowledge of registration.—The owner of certain registered designs brought an action claiming an injunction & damages for infringement, & for having sold & exposed for sale goods bearing some of these designs or colourable imitations thereof, against defts., who were not manufacturers but agents for the sale of goods on commission. The main defence relied on was that defts. had sold no goods to which any design of pltf. or any imitation thereof had been applied, knowing that the same had been so applied, without the consent of pltf., it was admitted that defts. had sold goods bearing designs similar to certain of pltf.'s designs without such knowledge:—Held: defts. had not sold with knowledge that the designs were registered, or that they had been applied without the consent of the registered proprietor; there was no intention to sell or expose for sale proved on the part of defts. since they acquired such knowledge.—SMITH v. ROBERTS (LEWIS & Co.) (1888), 5 R. P. C. 611.

995. —.—.—[This was an action for infringement of a registered design for powder puffs. Deft. admitted that he had purchased three puffs infringing the design, one of which he had sold to an unknown customer, & another to pltf., on which occasion he first was informed that the puffs were an infringement. Deft. then at once promised to sell no more, & removed the third puff from his shop window; but deft. declined to give a formal undertaking demanded by pltf.'s solr. not to sell any more. Pltf. then commenced an action. Pltf. took out a summons for judgment under R. S. C., Ord. 32, r. 6, contending that as deft. admitted that he had still an infringing article in his possession, he ought to have given the undertaking, & that pltf. was therefore entitled to an injunction. The action was dismissed, with costs.—JAN v. GROSSMAN & SKFWES (1895), 12 R. P. C. 537.

SUB-SECT. 1.—JURISDICTION.

996. County court.—M. registered as a design a picture of a basket, stating that his claim was for the pattern of the basket, consisting in the osiers being worked in singly & all the butt ends being outside. M. commenced an action in the county ct. for infringement of this design. The action was tried before the judge & a jury. Deft. alleged the design was not novel, & was not a proper subject of registration. The jury found a verdict for pltf. on the question of novelty, but on the application of deft. for a new trial, the judge, doubting whether the design was a proper subject for registration, gave deft. leave to appeal:—Held: what pltf. had registered was, in reality, a process or mode of manufacture, & was not a design within the meaning of the Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57).—*MOODY v. designs registered in class 15 for cloth for fancy vestings, brought an action for infringement. On their forms for application pltf's. stated as follows: "The novelty being the arrangement of stripes between the edges of the piece & the ground pattern, as shown in the representations." Def'ts. pleaded non-infringement, prior user, the want of novelty, & denied that pltf's. were the authors of the registered designs. At the trial pltf's. set up a broad claim for cloth having woven borders between the ground pattern & the plain margins at the edges of the cloth, with the novel feature of an additional border & plain margin on one side only of the ground intended to be cut off & used for pocket bindings:—Held: as regards the feature of the designs alleged at the trial to be novel, namely, the additional border, pltf's. were not the authors thereof, & fancy vestings with a plain margin & a composite stripe border were not new at the date of registration, & pltf's. could not claim this broad feature as a novelty, & there was no substantial novelty or originality in any of the designs. The action was dismissed with costs.

(2) Def'ts. by their defence denied that any of the designs were new or original, & they denied infringement, & under orders made in the action upon pltf's. application, they furnished two sets of particulars of the want of novelty, anticipation & prior user alleged. There was not any cross application by def'ts. to rectify the Register, but as the action has been conducted throughout by both parties upon the footing that all the defences raised could be dealt with in the action I have determined to deal with it in the same way without raising any objection of form (SWINFEN EADY, J.).—*DOBLE v. The author of the design moved to vary the register by removing the agent's name & substituting his own name as the proprietor of the design. The agent did not appear, & as it appeared by the evidence that it was a case of mistake & not fraud on the part of the agent, the order was not opposed by the Comptroller. The order was made, but no order was made for costs except as to the Comptroller's costs.—Re GROCOTT'S DESIGN (1899), 17 R. P. C. 139.

1002. Manufacture exclusively outside United Kingdom.—Cancellation postponed to allow manufacture within United Kingdom.]—Applications were made under 1907 Act by B. to cancel the registration of two designs (Nos. 614,643 & 615,469) registered by T. for filing wires for use in connection with loose leaf binders or files, on the ground that the designs were used for manufacture exclusively or mainly outside the United Kingdom. The applications were opposed by D. who had acquired the copyright in the designs by assignment from T. It was admitted that as regards design No. 615,469 there had been no manufacture either in the United Kingdom or abroad at the time of the application. As regards No. 614,643 it appeared that the design had been used for manufacture exclusively outside the United Kingdom at the date of the application, but it was contended that satisfactory reasons had been given for non-use in the United Kingdom up to that time, & that, as to the future, arrangements had been made for manufacture to an adequate extent in this country. The arguments in support of this contention were (a) that D. was entitled to a reasonable time to commence work in this country & that period had not been exceeded, (b) that the impossibility of getting the necessary machines for manufacture earlier was in any case a sufficient excuse for not commencing work at an earlier date, (c) that D. had made all reasonable efforts to get such machines, & that in fulfilment of an agreement made between D. & T. the designs had, in fact, been assigned to D. before the commencement of these proceedings, while the first two machines were delivered within a fortnight of the filing of the application, & (d) that there was, in fact, at the time of the hearing, adequate manufacture of the design in the United Kingdom:—Held: (1) as regards design No. 615,469 there was no manufacture anywhere at the date of the application, & consequently the application failed. (2) As regards design No. 614,643 although the design was used for manufacture exclusively outside the United Kingdom at the date of the application, the proprietor of a design was entitled to a reasonable time to commence working in the United Kingdom, & as before the date of application arrangements had been made which, when completed, would result in an adequate manufacture of the design in the United Kingdom, the proper order was that the registration should be cancelled, not forthwith, but six months from the date of the order, unless in the meantime it was shown to the Comptroller's satisfaction that the design was manufactured to an adequate extent in the United Kingdom.—Re TIMMLER'S DESIGNS (1914), 31 R. Defts. alleged that the design was not new or original & called evidence to show that a similar design had been previously published. The jury found that there had been no prior publication. Judgment was given for pltf. for £100 & an injunction.—RIVETT v. GRIMSHAW (1894), 11 R. P. C. 351.

1008. —.]—This was an action for infringement of a registered design for lace. Defts. did not say that pltf.' design was not new & original, but they alleged that, by reason of the publication of other lace designs, pltf.' design could not be widely construed & held to cover the design of defts.' lace:—Held: on a comparison of the two designs, defts.' design was a clear infringement.

Order made for an injunction, with costs, setting off any costs incurred on account of a claim by pltf. to a narrow width of lace, which was abandoned, & a penalty of £10, defts. undertaking to deliver up all infringing lace.—OLIVER & Co. v. THORNLEY & Co. (1896), 13 R. P. C. 490.

1009. Penal action—Interrogatories not allowed.]—By Patents, Designs & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 58, which prohibits infringements of copyright in registered designs, it is enacted that "any person who acts in contravention of this sect. shall be liable for every offence to forfeit a sum not exceeding £50 to the registered proprietor of the design, who may recover such sum as a simple contract debt by action":—Held: a sum so forfeited must be taken to be a penalty, & pltf. in an action to recover such a sum is not entitled to interrogate deft. as to the infringements charged.—SAUNDERS v. WIEL, [1892] 2 Q. B. 321; 62 L. J. Q. B. 37; 67 L. T. 207; 40 W. R. 594; 8 T. L. R. 650; 36 Sol. Jo. 501; 4 R. 1, C. A.

1010. —.]—The registered proprietors of a design commenced an action for infringement, claiming an injunction, damages or alternatively penalties; & delivery up. Pltf., however, under an order elected to claim penalties & not damages, & amended their statement of claim accordingly. Deft. denied infringement & alleged the invalidity of the design. Pltf. then applied for leave to deliver interrogatories. Some of the proposed interrogatories related to the acts complained of & others to the issue of novelty.

The application was adjourned into ct.:—Held: the action was substantially an action to recover penalties, & leave to deliver interrogatories was refused.—TITUS ASTLE, LTD. v. MANSFIELD (1905), 22 R. P. C. 356.

SUB-SECT. 5.—IN RESPECT OF THREAT OF LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

1011. Common law action—On proof of mala fides—& resulting damages.]—Declaration in case stated that pltf. was a printer of silk goods, & had delivered to deft. a lot of such goods, in which were woven fabrics of silk, printed by pltf. with a design for the ornamenting of them, which had been published by pltf. to deft. & others; & pltf. was about to print other fabrics of silk with the same design, & to publish the same in the way of his trade for gain; of all which deft. had notice: but deft., contriving to deceive, injure & defraud pltf., & induce him to desist from printing more with the design & to deprive him of the gains he would have made & to cheat him of the benefit of the design, & to acquire the same for the sole benefit of deft. & to put pltf. to expense, falsely, fraudulently & deceitfully represented to pltf. that in the lot there was a copy of a registered pattern:—Held: the declaration showed a cause of action, it appearing that deft. had knowingly uttered a falsehood with the design to deprive pltf. of a benefit & acquire it to himself, & the damage naturally flowing from pltf.'s belief & the innuendo was unnecessary, & could not therefore be the ground of an objection to the declaration.—*BARLEY v. SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1017. Right of trader—No right to pass off goods as those of another.]—Declaration stated that plffs., manufacturers of cutlery, were accustomed to mark their knives with certain marks denoting their manufacture, & that defts., intending to injure plffs., did fraudulently impose similar marks on knives made by defts., to induce the public to believe that the knives made by defts. were manufactured by plffs., etc.:—Held: it was properly left to the jury to consider, whether there was such a resemblance between defts.' marks & those used by plffs., as was calculated to deceive the public; & whether defts. used the marks with an intention to deceive.

No person has a right to sell his own goods as & for goods manufactured by another person.—RODGERS v. NOWELL (1847), 5 C. B. 109; 17 L. J. C. P. 52; 10 L. T. O. S. 88; 11 Jur. 1039; 130 E. R. 816.

1017 i. Right of trader—No right to pass off goods as those of another.]—The principle on which the ct. protects trade marks is, that it will not permit a person to sell his own goods as the goods of another; a person, therefore, will not be allowed to use names, marks, letters, or other indicia, by which he may pass off his own goods to pur-

SECT. 7.—OFFENCES.

See 1907 Act, s. 89.

1016. Pirating design—What must be proved.]—A conviction under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, ss. 7 & 8, for exposing to sale an article of manufacture to which a registered design had been applied, did not state that deft. had received knowledge that the consent of the proprietor had not been given to such application. The conviction & depositions taken before the magistrate were removed in this ct. by certiorari. The depositions left it uncertain whether it had been proved before the magistrate that deft. had received the notice required by the statute, or only notice that the proprietor had not consented to the exposure of the article for sale; but it was stated in the affidavits that a sufficient notice was, in fact, proved before the magistrate:—Held: the conviction was bad; & there were no satisfactory materials to enable the ct. to amend the conviction under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 7.—R. v. WELCH (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 105; 15 J. P. 338.

as to obviate any reasonable probability of misunderstanding or deception.

(2) There is another way in which goods not plffs.' may be sold as & for plffs. A name may be so appropriated by user as to come to mean the goods of plffs., though it is not, & never was, impressed on the goods, or on the packages, in which they are contained, so as to be a trade mark, properly so called, or within the recent statutes. Where it is established that such a trade name bears that meaning, I think the use of that name, or one so nearly resembling it as to be likely to deceive, as applicable to goods not plffs.', may be the means of passing off those goods as & for plffs.' just as much as the use of a trade mark; & I think the law, so far as not altered by legislation, is the same (LORD BLACKBURN).—*SINGER MANUFACTURING CO. v. 1031. ———.]—John Brinsmead & Sons, Ltd., the well-known pianoforte makers, brought an action against Edward George Stanley Brinsmead, a pianoforte manufacturer, & Waddington & Sons, Ltd., pianoforte dealers, to restrain them from passing off pianos made by Stanley Brinsmead as & for the pianos of pltf. co., & they also charged defts. with conspiring together to so pass off the pianos. Pltf. co. put on the fall of their pianos the words "John Brinsmead & Sons, London," in capital roman letters surrounded by lines. On the fall of the pianos made by deft. there appeared in a running hand the name "Stanley Brinsmead" with a broad dash at the foot of the "d" coming back under the whole of the name, & the word "London" in printed roman characters underneath. In the curls of the initial "S" in small letters were placed the names "Edward" & "George." The evidence showed that a "Brinsmead Piano" meant to the trade & to the public a piano made by pltf. co., & that the Christian names used by pltf. co. & that of deft. were not generally known. It also appeared that deft.'s pianos were cheap instruments, & had a sale amongst a different class of people from that to which pltf. co.'s new pianos were sold. Defts. Waddington & Sons, Ltd., previous to & at the trial offered to submit to an injunction restraining them from passing off if the charge of conspiracy were withdrawn, which offer was not accepted by pltf. co. The evidence against Waddington & Sons, Ltd., showed that they had advertised pianos of deft. Brinsmead as "Brinsmead" by itself, & had represented to customers that one of such pianos was a "Brinsmead" piano. It was held that deft. Brinsmead had put his name Stanley on his pianos as prominently as the word "Brinsmead" & had not attempted to imitate the mode in which pltf. co.'s name was used, & that he had not acted dishonestly, notwithstanding that he knew that he was deriving some advantage from the fact that his name was the same as that of well-known manufacturers; that the charge of 1038. —[J]—Pltf. co. had an old established business & reputation in a preparation of meat juice, which was mainly used by invalids, though sometimes by others, & was always sold under a title including the name "Valentine." Deft. co., which was promoted by deft. C. R. Valentine, who was also managing director of the co, manufactured & sold extract of meat made by a different process from that of pltf's. & put up in a manner invented by deft. C. R. Valentine, which extract was intended to be used mainly as a food, but also by invalids. The only complaint made by pltf. co. was in regard to the name Valentine, the use of which, it was contended, must of necessity lead to deception. It was argued that, even in the absence of fraud, which was alleged, pltf's. were entitled to an injunction. Defts. contended that, inasmuch as deft. co. were working under a patent granted to deft. Valentine, which he had sold to the co., & as deft. Valentine took an active part in the management of the co., they were within their legal rights. It was held at the trial, that defts. had not been guilty of fraud, & that pltf's. were not entitled to an injunction:—Held: deft. C. R. Valentine had attempted to get the benefit of the reputation of pltf.'s article; defts. had so put their goods on the market that they would be mistaken for the goods of pltf's., & pltf's. were entitled to relief.

The action is for passing off, & the main defence set up by Mr. Upjohn was that the basis of the claim for passing off was the identity of the name of deft. & the name of pltf's.; & that, so long as deft. used his own name, & that was the real source of the deception, his position could not be impugned. Now from that proposition I absolutely dissent. If you introduce into it that which has been found as a fact in the case, & which was proved, perhaps, more clearly by Mr. Upjohn's own witnesses than by anybody else, namely, that the name, which does form the basis of the deception, has acquired a secondary significance, & means only, in the markets where this product is sold, the juice or extract manufactured by pltf's., it does not seem to me to matter a pin's point whether the deception arises from the use of a name which is, as it happens, the name of deft., or whether it arises from the use of any other description which in a sense, may be accurate of that which he sells. For, if the thing which he sells has come to be known in the market as meaning something made by somebody other than himself, it is impossible for him to sell it simpliciter by that name, although it be his own, without misleading purchasers (COLLINS, L.J.).—VALENTINE MEAT JUICE CO. v. be restrained from carrying on trade in his own name; but he must take reasonable precautions to clearly distinguish his goods from those of pltf's., & to prevent the public being misled into the belief that the business carried on by him was that of pltf's.—CASH (J. & J.), LTD. v. 1040. —[J]—J. Goddard & Sons of Leicester brought an action against The Watford Co-operative Society for an injunction to restrain defts. (inter alia), "from selling or supplying in response to orders for 'Goddard's Plate Powder' any plate powder not manufactured by pltf's. without clearly ascertaining that it was not the pltf.'s plate powder that was required." Pltf's. & their predecessors in business had continuously, since 1840, sold plate powder made in accordance with a secret formula invented by one Joseph Goddard, under the name "Goddard's Plate Powder" or "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder." Defts. claimed to be entitled to sell, in response to orders for "Goddard's Plate Powder," a plate powder manufactured & supplied to them by one Rosina Goddard. The said Rosina Goddard had succeeded to the business originated by her father, who in or about 1856 had commenced to manufacture plate powder according to a secret recipe of his own invention & to sell it under the name of "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder." In an action commenced by pltf's. in 1916 in which the said Rosina Goddard was a deft. it had been held that "Goddard's Plate Powder" & "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder" had acquired a secondary meaning & meant pltf.'s plate powder; & that that position was not affected by the user of Rosina Goddard or her predecessors which up to within a short time of that action had been insignificant; & that in its origin the use, by the said Rosina Goddard's father, of his own name & his description of his preparation as "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder" had been honest & that the said Rosina Goddard had sufficiently distinguished her goods from the goods of pltf's. & had not threatened or intended to do anything beyond what had been done by her predecessors in business, & that pltf's. could not complain of that:—Held: the two sets of findings of fact in Goddard v. Hyam, No. 1032, ante, as regards the meaning & use of the expression "Goddard's Plate Powder" or "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder" & as to the distinction between the goods were wholly distinct; upon their admission defts. must be taken to have admitted that these terms in 1917 meant & only meant in the trade the plate powder made by the Leicester firm; & in these circumstances the evidence called by pltf's. was principally relevant to proving that the secondary meaning attaching to these expressions had continued to the present time; upon the evidence "Goddard's Plate Powder" meant pltf's. plate powder universally throughout the country except for the few people who were satisfied to accept Miss Goddard's plate powder; her use of the expression "Goddard's Plate Powder" put a difficult onus upon a person who attempted to prove that it had acquired a secondary meaning, but, if that was established, then, for the purpose of a passing off case it was in exactly the same position qua passing off as a fancy word which originally had its own primary distinctive meaning; an order for "Goddard's Plate Powder" was an order for pltf.'s powder unless it was proved that the customer was referring to some less known plate powder which had a concurrent sale; because Miss Goddard had been held in Goddard v. Hyam, No. 1032, ante, entitled to sell her goods in the particular way mentioned, it did not in the least follow that a person purchasing her goods was entitled to hand them over the counter simpliciter & without explanation in response to an order for "Goddard's Plate Powder," which primarily meant pltf.'s goods; pltf's. were entitled to an injunction restraining defts., their servants & agents from selling or supplying in response to orders for "Goddard's Plate Powder" or "Goddard's Non-Mercurial Plate Powder" any plate powder not manufactured by pltf's. without clearly ascertaining that it was not pltf's. plate powder that was required or making it clear that the plate powder supplied was not pltf's.—GODDARD v. WATFORD CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY (1924), 41 R. P. C. 218.

1041. ———.]—An action was brought for (inter alia) a declaration that pltf's. were entitled to use the word "Jaeger" upon, & in connection with, articles of clothing & analogous goods, & to carry on business in the sale of the goods under the style of "Prof. Dr. G. Jaeger," provided that they took reasonable precautions clearly to distinguish the goods & business from the goods & business of defts. Defts. counterclaimed for an injunction to restrain pltf's. from passing off their business or goods as those of defts., by the use of the name "Jaeger." At the trial, pltf's. asked for the declaration, qualified by the insertion, after the word "Jaeger," where it first occurred, of the words "as part of their business name." In 1883, Prof. Jaeger had authorised the formation of deft. co., & had conceded to it the sole right in this country to use his name & trade mark, & to sell articles, called "normal articles," of clothing made in accordance with the system of sanitary clothing originated by him, & he had undertaken to guarantee the quality of the articles made by his concessionaires in Germany. Defts. had undertaken to obtain normal articles from the concessionaires & to pay to Prof. Jaeger a royalty on all normal articles used in their business, but not manufactured by the concessionaires. From 1886, Prof. Jaeger had, under a firm name registered in Germany, carried on some business there in the sale of normal articles, & in 1907 he had constituted certain members of his family partners in the firm, the name of which had previously been changed to "Prof. Dr. G. Jaeger." On the outbreak of war in 1914, the agreements between Prof. Jaeger, pltf. firm, & the concessionaires on the one hand, & defts. on the other, had been determined. At the time, about one quarter of the goods sold by defts. were being obtained from the concessionaires, the remainder being manufactured in this country. Defts. continued to carry on the business, without paying any royalty. In 1920, three years after the death of Prof. Jaeger, pltf's. & the concessionaires demanded that defts. should cease to use the word "Jaeger" as part of their name, but defts. claimed to be entitled to continue to use the name, & disputed the right of pltf's. to trade in this country under a name of which "Jaeger" formed part. In 1924, pltf's. opened, in London, an office & then a retail shop; they invited defts. to take proceedings to test the right of the parties, & in default of proceedings by defts., they brought the action. Defts. alleged that pltf.'s firm had been guilty of fraud in trading under its name for the purpose of passing off its goods as deft.'s & they made a counterclaim for an injunction to restrain pltf's. from passing off by the use of the name "Jaeger." Pltf's. claimed, in addition to the declaration, injunctions to restrain defts. from denying the rights of pltf's., & from prosecuting an application for registration of the name trade mark "Jaeger" until judgment had been entered in the action:—Held: the injunction granted against pltf's. must be modified so as to safeguard the right of pltf.'s to trade in their firm name.—JAEGAR v. JAEGAR & CO., LTD. (1927), 44 R. P. C. 437, C. A.

1042. Right of assignee of business.]—Prior to 1819 F. Truefitt commenced a hairdressing business which was continued by his widow & his son Walter Truefitt until the death of the latter in 1900, when deft. C. J. Edney, who was a hairdresser & "hair specialist," purchased the business, goodwill, stock-in-trade, & assets, including expressly the right to use the name "Walter Truefitt" or "Truefitt." In 1819 P. Truefitt, a relative & former partner of F. Truefitt, commenced a similar business in the neighbourhood, & was succeeded by his son H. P. Truefitt, who was also a "hair specialist." In 1880 H. P. Truefitt, sold his business to pltf. co., of which he became the managing director. In 1902 pltf. co. & H. P. Truefitt brought an action against deft. for an injunction restraining him from carrying on business as a hairdresser & "hair specialist" under the name or style of "Truefitt." At the trial the case was narrowed down to the question of fact as to whether on three specific occasions deft. had represented himself to be pltf. H. P. Truefitt, & that his business was the business of pltf. co.:—Held: no case of fraudulent misrepresentation by deft. had been made out, & the action must be dismissed. Satisfactory evidence of transactions of the nature of "trap orders" should show that pointed attention was called to what was being asked.—TRUEFITTS (H. P.), LTD. & TRUEFITTS v. EDNEY (1903), 20 R. P. C. 321.

See Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58).

1043. 1044. ———. Trader using surname with addition of Christian names—All Christian names or initials must be used.]—A trader trading under a business name consisting of his surname together with the addition of his Christian names or initials must, in order to be exempt from registration under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), use all his Christian names or the initials thereof. It is not a compliance with the exception contained in sect. 1. of the Act for him to trade under his surname together with one only of several Christian names or one initial.—BROWN v. THOMAS & BURROWS (1922), 39 T. L. R. 132, C. A.

1045. What is sufficient description of business—Bookmakers described as "accountants."]—Pltf's. a firm of bookmakers, made an application for registration under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58). In their application they included in their statement of particulars required by the Act a description of the general nature of their business as "accountants." In this action they claimed from the debt. £907 17s. 11d., the amount, with interest, of five cheques drawn by him upon his bank payable to pltfs. & delivered by him to them in payment of bets which he had lost to them & which had been dishonoured on presentation, & a further sum of £13 18s. 10d., the amount of a cheque paid by pltfs. to debt. for bets won by him from them & duly paid by pltfs.' bankers on presentation by debt.'s bankers to them. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to recover the £13 18s. 10d. under Gaming Act, 1835 (c. 41), s. 2 as money received by debt. to the use of pltfs.:—Held: pltfs.' description of their business as "accountants" was not sufficient to satisfy Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 3 (1) (b).

Semble: pltf. had not made "default" within the meaning of Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 8 (1), inasmuch as "default" in the sub-sect. means not furnishing a statement of particulars at all, as distinguished from furnishing insufficient particulars. —O'CONNOR & OULD v. RALSTON, [1920] 3 K. B. 451; 90 L. J. K. B. 261; 124 L. T. 508; 36 T. L. R. 768.

1046. What constitutes default.—Insufficient description of business.—O'CONNOR & OULD v. RALSTON, No. 1045, ante.

1047. Effect of default.—Limited to parties to contract.—Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 8 (1), provides that where a person who is required to be registered under that Act makes default in so doing "the rights of that defaulter under or arising out of any contract made or entered into by or on behalf of such defaulter in relation to the business in respect to the carrying on of which particulars were required to be furnished at any time while he is in default shall not be enforceable by action or other legal proceeding either in the business name or otherwise."

By an assignment dated Jan. 9, 1917, claimant, who carried on business in a name other than his true name but was not registered under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), purchased the goodwill of the business and stock-in-trade of one R., & thereupon entered into occupation of the premises where R. had carried on business & where, till a few weeks before July 4, 1917, his name continued to appear over the premises, although in fact his connection therewith ceased in Jan. On June 12, 1917, the stock-in-trade so purchased was taken in execution at the instance of a judgment creditor of R., & being claimed by claimant, an interpleader issue was tried on July 4, 1917, in which claimant produced the assignment of Jan. 9. It was contended by the execution creditor that claimant was precluded by Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 8 (1), from enforcing any right to the goods. The county ct. judge gave judgment for claimant & his decision was affirmed by the Div. Ct.:—Held: Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 8 (1), did not preclude claimant from enforcing her right to the goods, for her right at the time of the claim rested on her common law title by possession & did not arise under or out of the assignment.

Semble: Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), s. 8 (1), is limited to prohibiting the enforcement of contracts, coming within its scope, as between the immediate parties thereto.—DANIEL v. ROGERS, [1918] 2 K. B. 228; 87 L. J. K. B. 1149; 119 L. T. 212; 62 Sol. Jo. 583, C. A.

A person, who was required under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), to be registered, furnished to the Registrar on Mar. 16, 1917, a written statement signed by him, in compliance with sect. 3, but the written statement was false in a material particular to his knowledge. Pltfs., however, in using their trade mark, put in the coats of arms & used it in the form in which they had originally applied for registration. U. Melachrino, who was a brother of one of pltfs., M. Melachrino, & who had been formerly employed by pltfs. as their servant or assistant, entered into an agreement with one Poulides to act as manager of a cigarette business for Poulides, to be carried on under the style of The Melachrino Egyptian Cigarette co., & the new firm commenced business in premises in the immediate* neighbourhood of pltf.'s premises, & solicited customers of pltf.'s firm, & made use of labels in imitation of those used by pltfs. Pltfs. brought an action & moved for an interim injunction:—Held: defts.' business was in fact the business of Poulides, & U. Melachrino could not sell his name to Poulides for the purpose of enabling him to carry on a rival trade, & the less so because the purpose was that of carrying on a rival trade fraudulently, & therefore pltfs. were entitled to an injunction restraining defts. from carrying on business under the name of Melachrino & co., or of Melachrino.—MELACHRINO (M.) & CO. v. A. In General.

1063. ——— Name of new article.]—(1) Pltf. manufactured a fluid which he sold under the name of "Aromatic Bitters," & it was described by this name upon the wrappers of the bottles in which it was sold. It became, however, generally known in the market by the name of "Angostura Bitters," it having been originally manufactured at the town of Angostura in Venezuela. The name of this town was afterwards by a decree of the state, changed to Ciudad Bolivar. After this change had taken place, deft. began to manufacture in the same town a different fluid, which he at first sold under the name of "Aromatic Bitters," but, having been restrained in an English colony from using that name, he adopted the name "Angostura Bitters," & placed it upon the wrappers of his bottles, also registering his wrappers at Stationers' Hall. His wrappers were very similar to those of pltf., but they contained a statement that the fluid was prepared by deft. After this pltf. adopted the name "Angostura Bitters," & placed it upon his wrappers, & he brought an action against deft., claiming an injunction to restrain him from imitating pltf.'s wrappers, & from using the name "Angostura Bitters." At the time when the action was brought pltf. had ceased to carry on his manufacture at Ciudad Bolivar:—Held: upon the evidence, deft. had been guilty of an attempt to deceive, & though he could not be restrained from using the name "Angostura Bitters," in case he should ever discover pltf.'s secret, & manufacture the same fluid, yet he must be restrained from using the name so as to deceive the public into the belief that his fluid was pltf.'s.

(2) It was alleged by deft. that pltf. was disentitled to relief, because, at the time of the trial, he was using wrappers which contained a misrepresentation. Pltf. did not begin to use those wrappers until after the action had been brought:—Held: there was in fact no misrepresentation in the wrappers in question, but, even if there had been, a misrepresentation not made till after the commencement of the action would not have affected pltf.'s title to relief.

(3) It is to be observed that the person who produces a new article, & is the sole maker of it, has the greatest difficulty, if it is not an impossibility, in claiming the name of that article as his own, because, until somebody else produces the same article, there is nothing to distinguish it from. No distinction can arise from using the name of the class so long as the class consists of only one species, for then the name of the species & the name of the class will be the same (FRY, J.).—SIEGERT v. FINDLATER (1878), 7 Ch. D. 801; 47 L. J. Ch. 233; 38 L. T. 349; 26 W. R. 459.

1064. ——— Long user.]—Pltfs., a firm of pyrotechnists, & their predecessors in business had for nearly fifty years, namely, since 1860 down to 1910, been making & selling fireworks under the description "Crystal Palace Fireworks" they having throughout that period the exclusive right of giving firework displays at the Crystal Palace. In 1891 they had registered as an old trade mark in connection with fireworks the words "Crystal Palace." They had also registered two other trade marks consisting of representations of the Crystal Palace. They used the term for all their goods of the firework class. It was not limited to the displays that they gave at the Crystal Palace. Their goods were asked for as "Crystal Palace Fireworks" & were supplied under that name. Pltfs. having ceased to have the contract, defts. another firm of pyrotechnists, obtained in the year 1910, the right to give firework displays at the Crystal Palace, & thereupon they sought to describe their fireworks as "Crystal Palace Fireworks" with the addition of their own name:—Held: pltfs. having for nearly fifty years applied the words "Crystal Palace" to their goods, it was irrelevant to consider whether they had still got the right to give displays of fireworks at the Crystal Palace; the use of those words did not imply that they had; & therefore they were from using the said trade name.—FERNE v. WILSON (1900), 26 V. L. R. 422.—AUS.

"Universal Winding Machine" brought an action against defts., who were manufacturers of looms, winding & other textile machinery, to restrain them from passing off their machines as & for pltf's. by the use of the term Universal as part of the name. It appeared that Letters Patent had been granted in respect of the machines manufactured by pltf's, which had expired in 1906. Defts. had called their machines by various names until 1912, when they adopted the name "Universal." Defts. contended that the term was an ordinary English word which had not acquired a secondary meaning, that it was a descriptive word, & further, that it was always used by them in conjunction conspicuously with their own name & address, & therefore could not lead to confusion or passing-off:—Held: defts. were entitled to make & advertise for sale Universal Machinery by the names "Universal Wind" or "Universal Machine" or "Universal Winding Machinery," & their machinery was sufficiently distinguished from the machinery of pltf's.—UNIVERSAL WINDING CO. v. MATTERSLEY (GEORGE) & SONS, LTD. (1915), 32 R. P. C. 479.

B. Local Name.

1073. Right acquired by long user—Though locality of manufacture changed.—A name may become a trade denomination & as such the property of a particular person who first gives it to a particular article of manufacture. The employment of the name by another person for the purpose of describing an imitation of that article, is an invasion of the right of the original manufacturer who is entitled to protection by injunction.

W. bought the business of Glenfield starch making, & advertised his starch for more than twenty years by that name. The word Glenfield was the place where the starch was first made, but afterwards it was made by W. elsewhere. C. bought a small place at Glenfield, & made starch, & used labels imitating W.'s, & calling the place of making it Glenfield. People were likely to be deceived in thinking C.'s starch was the same as W.'s:—Held: W. was entitled to an injunction to prevent C. from using the word "Glenfield" on his labels of starch.—*WOTHERSPOON v. The monks for many years had manufactured by a secret process a liqueur known as "Chartreuse." The business & property of the monks were sold by the liquidator to a co. which made & sold a similar liqueur under the old name "Chartreuse." The liquidator procured the insertion of his name as owner of certain trade marks & labels formerly employed by the monks:—Held: the liquidator & his assignees were not entitled to the use of the word "Chartreuse" as descriptive of the goods made by them & the monks were entitled to have the liquidator's name as owner of the trade marks & names expunged from the register.—*LECOUTURIER v. 1077. —[.]—The original factory of china & porcelain known as "Worcester" or "Worcester China" was founded at Worcester in 1751. From 1786 to 1801 there were two factories & firms, from 1801 to 1840 three factories & firms, & from 1840 to 1889 two factories & firms engaged independently in this manufacture at Worcester. Since 1889 plfts., who claimed to be the successors of all the above-mentioned firms, had been the only manufacturers of china or porcelain in Worcester until 1897, when one Locke, who had been in their employment, set up a new manufactory. In 1898 Locke sold his business to deft. co. It appeared that there were no natural advantages, in the way of soil or water or otherwise, attaching to the city or county of Worcester making it specially suitable for the manufacture of china & porcelain, & that the productions of the Worcester makers had never been confined to any special types, but had included specimens of all classes of such wares & all descriptions of design, subjects, & colouring. It also appeared that from some time prior to 1889 plfts. had used, as generally as possible, the word "Royal" as well as "Worcester" in connection with their goods; & since, in 1889, they acquired the works & business of Grainger, the last surviving of the above-mentioned firms, they had kept those works as a separate establishment, & had described products therefrom as "Grainger's Worcester China." In two actions brought by plfts. against deft. co. & against a retail dealer who sold the products of deft. co. as "Worcester China":—Held: (1) between 1889 & the commencement of sales by Locke & deft. co., the word "Worcester," as applied to current trade productions in china & porcelain, acquired & had a secondary meaning as denoting goods made by plfts. at one or other of their manufactories to the exclusion of all other manufacturers of china or porcelain & similar articles; (2) plfts. were not disentitled to relief either by reason of previous manufacturers having made at Worcester china now known as "Worcester" or by the fact that some of their goods were described as "Royal Worcester" or "Grainger's Worcester China"; (3) although no actual instance of deception had been proved, the acts of defts. were calculated to deceive purchasers & the public into the belief that their goods were those of plfts.—WORCESTER ROYAL PORCELAIN Co., LTD. v. Subsequently, defts. made & sold an artificial mineral water, being the chemical equivalent of the natural water, under the name & description of "London Apollinaris Water, possessing all the properties of the natural water."—Held: plfts. were entitled to an interim injunction, to restrain the use of the words "London Apollinaris Water," or of any other name of which the word "Apollinaris" so formed part as to be calculated to mislead the 1082. —[—]—The P. co. had registered a trade mark consisting of an oblong label with a panoramic view of London looking across Blackfriars Bridge with St. Paul's Cathedral prominent in the centre. On the right-hand side of the label was a double circle containing a ship in full sail. The P. co. used this as a label with the addition of the words "London Candles" in large letters printed across it for many years in the Morocco market. They designated their staple candles for that market "London Candles" & these candles were, at least to a large extent, known to customers by the native equivalent for these words. The candles were made up into packets wrapped in coarse blue paper with two orange labels, one being that described above, & the other an oval label bearing the words "London Candles." Wrapping candles in blue paper, with round & oval orange labels, was common to the trade. In 1906 O. & T. began to sell candles in the Morocco market, & a year later, after using a series of labels, each of which resembled the P. co.'s registered label more or less closely, they began to use an oblong label showing a panoramic view of a town looking across a bridge to a domed building similar to St. Paul's Cathedral. On the right hand side of the label was a circle containing a teapot with the words "Berrad Brand" (anglice teapot brand). The words "London Candles" were printed on the label in the same type & position as in the P. co.'s label. The get-up of the packets was the same as that of the P. co. The P. co. sought to have O. & T. interdicted from using these labels:—Held: (1) O. & T.'s label was an infringement of the P. co.'s registered trade mark; (2) at common law, O. & T.'s label, taking the words "London Candles" without regard to their meaning as part of the pictorial design, was a colourable imitation of the P. co.'s label, & O. & T. had been guilty of passing-off in using it, particularly in connection with the same get-up as that of the P. co., though that by itself was common to the trade; (3) the words "London Candles" had acquired a secondary meaning in the Morocco market in connection with the P. co.'s candles; & O. & T. were not entitled to use those words without clearly distinguishing their goods from those of the P. co.—PRICE'S PATENT CANDLE CO., LTD. v. 1083. Whether user permissible by rival trader—User with distinguishing mark.—In 1887, B. & co. commenced to sell Indian cigars under the brand "Flor de Dindigul," & had since sold the same in large quantities. The cigars were often asked for & sold as "Dindigul" cigars; the name "Dindigul" had not prior to B. & co.'s use been used as part of the name of a cigar. In 1897 H. commenced to sell cigars under the brand "Cigarro de Dindigul." B. & co. commenced an action against H. to restrain H. from using in connection with cigars the words "Cigarro de Dindigul," "Dindigul," or "Flor de Dindigul," & also from using off his goods as the goods of B. & co. B. & co. alleged that in deft.'s shops deft.'s cigars had been sold in response to orders for "Flor de Dindigul's" cigars. Deft. claimed the right to use the name "Cigarro de Dindigul," on the ground that Dindigul was a district in India in which the tobacco was grown of which his cigars were made. B. & co. moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: B. & co. were entitled to an interlocutory injunction restraining deft. from using the name of "Flor de Dindigul" or "Cigarro de Dindigul" as the brand or title of any cigars not being pltf.'s cigars, & from supplying any cigars not being pltf.'s cigars in response to orders for "Flor de Dindigul" cigars, & from using the name "Dindigul" in connection with the sale of cigars not being pltf.'s cigars without clearly distinguishing such cigars from pltf.'s cigars; but the Order was not to prevent deft. from describing any cigars sold by him which were in fact made of "Dindigul" tobacco as being so made.—BEWLEY & CO., LTD. v. brushes in the United States & other countries of the world. Pltfs.' trade in the United Kingdom commenced, though on a small scale, in 1895, & continued on about the same scale until the outbreak of war; during the war there were restrictions on importation of the goods into the United Kingdom, & immediately after the war circumstances outside pltfs.' control militated against any large number of shipments by them, but from 1921 pltfs. started an advertising campaign in this country & thereby largely increased their sales here. In 1920 pltfs. discovered that defts. were manufacturing tooth brushes under the name "Prophylactic" & under a similar get up, & commenced an action for passing off. Defts. alleged that the word "Prophylactic" was common to the trade & that none of the features alleged by pltfs. to be distinctive of his goods were in fact distinctive:—Held: in this country the word "Prophylactic" was descriptive of a particular shape & make of tooth brush, & was open to every manufacturer or trader who in fact dealt in tooth brushes made according to that shape & pattern; pltfs. had no exclusive right to use the word "Prophylactic"; the elements found in both pltfs.' & defts.' cartons were all more or less in common use in the trade, & on the facts pltfs. had failed to establish that there was such a get up of defts.' goods, or of the packets in which they were contained, as to lead to the results of which pltfs. were apprehensive; there had been a user by others of the factors or elements of which pltfs. mainly complained for a length of time & in circumstances which at this date disentitled them to the relief claimed, & defts. had acted in a legitimate way & honestly, & the action must be dismissed with costs.

1093. ———.—J.—W. B., an American firm, began to sell corsets in this country in Feb. 1901, under the title of "Erect Form Corsets." Their sales prior to action were not large. In Feb. 1902, they commenced an action against W. R. to restrain him from passing off his corsets as theirs by the use of "Erect Form," & in Apr. 1902, they commenced a similar action against H. S. & co. The two actions were in the list for trial on the same day, & were in effect tried together:—Held: "Erect Form" as applied to corsets was a descriptive term, & had not acquired a secondary signification as denoting pltf.'s corsets, & the term had been in fact first used in this country by defts. S. & co.

It seems to me unless & until you have either shown that the words are not, properly speaking, descriptive, or that the trade has been so large in extent & so widely known, the difficulties in proving which are almost insuperable, that the primary signification in respect of the goods in question is lost & the secondary signification has attached to those words that they mean goods made by pltf., instead of the primary signification, you cannot succeed. In this case it is absolutely impossible for anyone to hold that pltf. have carried on business in such a way or to such an extent as to have any reputation at all at the time of the issue of this writ in England as attaching to these words (FARWELL, J.).—WEINGARTEN BROTHERS v. ROSENTHAL, WEINGARTEN BROTHERS v. SHERWOOD & CO. (1904), 21 R. P. C. 212.

At the trial he abandoned his case as to the last two titles:—Held: pltf. had failed to establish that the title "White Viennese Band" had acquired a secondary signification as denoting his band only, & no case of passing off had been established out against defts.—*WURM v. 1095. ———.—Name originally distinctive—Descriptive by common user.—*Pltf.*s., in an action for passing off had long sold their pencils, which were polished a dark brown, in two qualities, stamped in gold & silver letters respectively, with the inscriptions, "E. Wolff & Son's Selected Spanish Graphite *II. B.," & "E. Wolff & Son's Penny Spanish Graphite *IIB." About 1871 they had used raw graphite imported from Spain, but the supply of suitable material from that country had long since given out, & pltf. had subsequently prepared a blend of materials obtained elsewhere. Principal defts. were a German firm, who had supplied or were supplying different retail traders in England with pencils similarly got up, polished, & stamped, the stampings including the terms, "Spanish Graphite," "Spanish Cedar," & "Selected Graphite." It appeared that between 1874 & 1884 pltf. had regularly supplied their pencils to a trader whose name was put on in the place of their own in front of the words "Spanish Graphite," not only on the pencils but also on small show cases; but this practice had been subsequently stopped. It also appeared that in 1883 defts. had supplied pencils stamped "Spanish Graphite" to the English market, & that three other makers had done the same between that year & the date of the trial:—Held: pltf. were not entitled to an injunction to restrain the manufacture or sale of any of the pencils complained of.—*WOLFF & SON v. Pltf. brought an action against the defts (a) for infringement of the trade mark "Gripe Water," & (b) to restrain the sale of any goods except pltf.'s under that name, & defts. moved to have the trade mark expunged from the Register:—Held: on the evidence pltf. had failed to prove that the words "Gripe Water" now meant pltf.'s goods & therefore they were not entitled to succeed in their claim for passing-off, but defts. were not entitled to have the trade mark expunged from the Register as at the time of registration it was in fact distinctive, & pltf. were entitled to an injunction to restrain infringement of the trade mark.—*Re WOODWARD'S TRADE MARK, WOODWARD, LTD. v. Pltf. had for some years made belting & sold it as "Camel Hair Belting," a name which had come to mean in the trade pltf.'s belting & nothing else. Defts. began to sell belting made of the yarn of camel's hair, & stamped it "Camel Hair Belting" so as to be likely to mislead purchasers into the belief that it was pltf.'s belting, endeavouring thus to pass off his goods as pltf.'s:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an injunction restraining deft. from using the words "camel hair" as descriptive of or in connection with belting made or sold or offered for sale by him & not manufactured by pltf. without clearly distinguishing such belting from pltf.'s belting.—REDDAWAY v. 1099. — Necessity for proof of identification.]

—Pltfs. Fels & co., were the manufacturers in America of a cold water household soap which from its commencement in 1894 they had sold under the name "Fels-Naphtha," naphtha being in fact an important ingredient in the soap from its special cleansing qualities. They commenced substantial sales of their soap in England in Feb. 1900, under the above name, but it appeared that dealers & customers had frequently, while pltfs.' soap was the only soap of the kind on the market, designated this soap by the simple names "Naphtha" or "Naphtha Soap." In the latter part of 1902 defts. commenced to manufacture & sell a similar soap, which was put upon the market as "Christopher's Naphtha Soap"—Chrstr. Thomas & Brothers, Id., Bristol. There was a conflict of expert evidence of analysts with respect to the presence of naphtha in defts.' soaps, all the analysts called for pltfs. alleging that it did not contain naphtha but only contained a distinct chemical substance called naphthaline:—Held: the word being a descriptive term as applied to pltfs.' soap, pltfs. had not discharged the onus of proving the identification of the name "Naphtha Soap" with themselves, which they must do in order to ask the ct. to find that defts. had intended passing-off; & the presence of naphtha in defts.' soap was irrelevant.—FELS v. 1101. Name in general use among manufacturers & dealers—Whether right of inventor prejudiced.]

—(1) A fancy name which designates a particular kind of article may be in general use in price lists which circulate between manufacturers & retail dealers without prejudicing the right of the inventor to the exclusive use of the fancy name as a trade mark in the sale of the article to the public.

belting made of camel hair, designating it as camel hair belting without clearly distinguishing it from the belting of pltfs. so as to be likely to mislead purchasers into the belief that it was pltfs.' belting, endeavouring thus to pass off their goods as pltfs.'—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an injunc-

as "Boiled in silver pans." Defts. were retail grocers trading at many shops in Wigan & Chorley, who, being already supplied with jams by one of the four manufacturers, in 1900 issued in their district a circular advertising "Silverwell Silver Pan Strawberry, 10½d.," with their name, "O. & G. Rushton, Ltd." appearing in many places on such circular, & a large window poster including the words "Silver Pan." It appeared that, while pltf.'s goods had been advertised in the Wigan district & were known in Chorley, they had not there enjoyed the extensive sales which elsewhere had made their reputation. In an action to restrain defts. from passing off their goods as the goods of pltf.'s, defts. in the meantime having succeeded in expunging pltf.'s trade mark from the Register:—Held: the word "Silverpan" was a fancy word identified with pltf.'s firm & no other firm throughout England, & especially in that portion of Lancashire immediately contiguous to the Wigan district; defts. had not by their mode of printing the circular & poster sufficiently distinguished their jams from those of pltf.'s, & they must be restrained accordingly.—*FAULDER (HENRY) & Co., LTD. v. 1104. —[Prior to the year 1886 a combined mowing & reaping machine had been manufactured by a firm of R. & C. at certain works, & after the death of C. by R. alone & R.'s exors. The device of a crown had been affixed to the machine & the name "Crown" had been used in connection with it. In 1886 an agreement was entered into between R.'s exors. & pltf., under which pltf. became lessee of the works & bought the stock-in-trade, patterns, etc., at a valuation, which was in fact taken on the footing of a sale for use in a going concern. The lease was subsequently renewed, & until 1898 pltf. carried on business at the works as a branch of his Carlisle business & manufactured the same machine, using the device of a crown & later the word "Crown" on it, & he used both name & device continuously in connection with the machine & to denote his goods: & he also called the works "Crown Works." In 1898 on his lease coming to an end, pltf. removed the branch to Carlisle & continued the use of the name & device of a crown on & in connection with his machine. R.'s son thereupon commenced to carry on a business of the same nature at the works & in 1900 he issued advertisements containing the device of a crown & the words "Crown Combined Mowing & Reaping machine" & describing himself as "Late R. & C." & in subsequent advertisements & bill headings he applied the name "Crown" to the works & used the expression "Established 1875." Pltf. commenced an action to restrain deft. from using the word "Crown" & from passing off his goods & business as the goods & business of pltf. Deft. alleged that pltf. had not acquired the goodwill of the business, & that the reputation in the name "Crown," which he had during the twelve years acquired, if any, enured for the benefit of the reversioner, & that the right to use the patterns determined with the lease:—Held: pltf. in 1886 had acquired the right to represent himself as carrying on the old business, to use the patterns & device of a crown & to describe the machine as it had been described; even if this were not so pltf.'s goods had become known by the name & device of a crown; pltf.'s rights did not come to an end on the determination of his lease; & pltf. was entitled to the relief sought except as to the name "Crown" in connection with the works.—*RICKERY v. 1106. Name originally distinctive of brand—Meaning subsequently extended to description of size & shape.]—For many years the brand name "La Corona" or "Corona" had been used by pltf.'s & their predecessors. It was not disputed that when used as a brand those words indicated cigars of pltf.'s manufacture. More than thirty years ago pltf. introduced a new size name "Coronas." Cigars of the Corona brand & Coronas, or Corona, size were known as "La Corona Coronas" or "Corona Coronas." This size name was adopted by other manufacturers & had for many years been used as a size name. In July, 1922, deft., in complying with a request for "some cigars, Coronas," supplied cigars of the Partagas brand & Coronas size. Deft. claimed the right in response to a request for a "Corona Cigar," or any similar request so phrased as not to indicate whether the word "Corona" was used to refer to brand or to size, to supply a cigar of any brand provided it was of the Corona size. In an action brought by pltf. claiming an injunction to restrain deft. from selling, or supplying, or offering or exposing for sale, or passing off, or inducing or enabling others to pass off, cigars not of pltf.'s manufacture as or for pltf.'s "La Corona" brand of cigars by the use of any words consisting of or containing the word "Corona" as a brand name, & from selling or supplying, in response to orders for "Corona" cigars, cigars not of pltf.'s manufacture:—Held: the words "a Corona cigar" being on the evidence proved to be ambiguous in meaning, deft. if he exercised the right which he claimed, would, in the majority of cases of a request for "a Corona cigar" be passing off goods not manufactured by pltf. as goods of their manufacture.

Pltf. were entitled to an injunction restraining deft. his servants & agents from selling or supplying a cigar not of the Corona brand, unless it was first ascertained that the customer did not require a cigar of the Corona & no other brand, or it was made clear to him by word of mouth or otherwise that the cigar supplied was of a brand other than pltf.'s brand.—*HAVANA CIGAR & TOBACCO FACTORIES, LTD. v. But where the class of goods is a patented article no such protection will be afforded; for the name becomes identified with the goods, not because they are pltf.'s but because he alone, as patentee, can make & sell them; & if the goods are the same, but made or manufactured in a totally different way from a totally different natural source, so that there is no infringement of the patent, a third party may use the name

They respectively consisted of (a) a device, being the representation of a magnolia flower, without any words added thereto; (b) the same device, with the addition of the words "Magnolia Anti-friction Metal," the exclusive right to the words anti-friction metal being disclaimed; & (c) the word "Magnolia" alone:—Held: for years before the patents for the manufacture of Magnolia metal were taken out, & before the trade marks were registered, the word "Magnolia" had been treated, with or without additions thereto, as the name of an article manufactured by a secret process, & therefore presumably incapable of appropriation by being registered as a trade mark; & for these reasons, marks (b) & (c) had been wrongly registered.—Re MAGNOLIA METAL CO.'S TRADE MARKS, [1897] 2 Ch. 371; 76 L. 1109. —[—]—Pltfs. in 1893 granted a sole licence to manufacture closets, under a patent to S., who afterwards transferred his business to a limited co. The licence terminated in 1898. In the five years S. & his successors manufactured closets under the licence some of which were sold by pltfs. & some by S. & his successors. The former were sold as "Turrit" & the latter as "Capstan." The word "Capstan" with the device of a capstan, was registered as a trade mark by S. by arrangement with pltfs. The registration was for the whole of class 16, but the trade mark was only used on closets made under the licence until a few months after the determination of the licence, when the co. began to sell closets of a slightly different pattern as "Capstan No. 2." Pltfs. thereupon brought an action to restrain the co. from selling any closets of their manufacture under the title of "Capstan" & from in any other manner passing off their goods as goods constructed under the licence of pltfs. Pltfs. moved for an interlocutory injunction, & also moved to expunge the trade mark from the Register on the ground that "Capstan" was the name of a patented article, & on the ground that the co. were no longer able to manufacture "Capstan" closets, & therefore their goodwill in such closets having determined the trade mark had determined also:—Held: both motions failed & must be refused.—*FREEMAN BROTHERS v. 1112. — Language of patent ambiguous.—In 1872 an inventor took out a patent in the United States for a product from petroleum "named by me 'vaseline.'" In 1874 he took out a patent in England for a similar product which he described as "a material which I term 'vaseline.'" In 1877 he registered the word "vaseline" in England under Trade Marks Registration Act, 1875 (c. 91), s. 10 as an old mark. On an application to remove the mark from the register:—Held: the language of both patents being ambiguous, as it might mean either that the name was given to the substance manufactured by the inventor or to the substance made according to the process described, the onus of proof was on appt. for the removal of the trade mark to show that it meant the latter; he had not discharged that onus & the mark ought not to be removed.—Re CHESEBROUGH'S TRADE MARK "VASELINE", [1902] 2 Ch. 1; *sub nom. they guaranteed for twelve months by undertaking to supply any purchaser with a new corset in case of complaint within that period. The corset was sold in a box bearing a printed label with the words "Guaranteed Corset" in large & conspicuous type, & in smaller type the words, "This corset is guaranteed to wear twelve months."

Defts., a rival firm of corset manufacturers, subsequently introduced a cheaper & inferior corset, the wear of which they also professed to guarantee for twelve months, & which they sold in a box bearing a printed label with the words "Guaranteed Corset" in large type, & words in smaller type similar to plffs. In an action by plffs. for an injunction:—Held: the word "guaranteed" was not so distinctly & exclusively applicable to plffs.' corset as that the ct. would restrain defts. from using the same word in connection with their corset.—SYMINGTON & Co. v. FOOTMAN, PRETTY & Co. (1887), 56 L. T. 696; 3 T. L. R. 488.

1115. "Post Office Directory."—Plff. was the registered proprietor of the copyright of a directory entitled the "Post Office Directory of the West Riding of Yorkshire," & he had for several years published "Post Office Directories" of other counties. Defts. published a directory for the town of B., which is within the West Riding, intitled "The Post Office Directory," but it was not similar to plff.'s directory in price or appearance. There was no evidence to satisfy the ct. that the words "Post Office" in connection with directories had become necessarily connected in the minds of the public with the name of Kelly:—Held: plff. had no right to the exclusive use of the words "Post Office Directory" & his claim for an injunction was refused.—*KELLY v. Concurrent user by two firms—Discontinuance of user by one.—Where there has been a concurrent user of a trade name by A. & B., but the user thereof by B. has practically ceased for some years, & A. has in the meantime acquired a large sale for his goods & a reputation in the market under the trade name, so that the name has become associated solely with the goods of A., B. may not afterwards revive the use of the name in his business in such a way as to pass off his goods as those of A.—*DANIEL & ARTER v. In 1896 an English syndicate called the "Stewart Electrical Syndicate Ltd." began to sell in England lamps made to their order by the American co., & sold by them under the name "Stewart Arc Lamps." In 1903 the syndicate was wound up, & in 1904 the receiver sold its goodwill & its rights to the use of the word "Stewart" in connection with the goods by auction to defts., who continued the sale of the goods under that name. Plffs., having commenced to sell similar goods under the name "Stewart," sought an injunction to restrain defts. from selling them under that name; defts. thereupon counterclaimed for similar relief:—Held: the word "Stewart" as associated with the goods in question was the sole property of the syndicate & its successors defts., & plffs.' action was accordingly dismissed, & an injunction granted to restrain plffs. on defts.' counterclaim.—*DEFRIES (J.) & SONS, LTD. & HELIOS MANUFACTURING CO. v. SECT. 5. — PASSING OFF.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1120. What amounts to passing off—Defamation distinguished.—Where, by the use of a name or otherwise, an article of manufacture is held forth to the public by one party in such a manner as to induce them to believe it to be the manufacture of another party, whose reputation in that respect stands high, & so as to diminish the profits of that party, an injunction will be granted to restrain such unfair dealing; but where the vendor of an article leads the public to believe that the article is prepared, or at least the sale of it by him approved & sanctioned by another party, whose authority would be a sufficient guarantee for its usefulness, but who, in fact, neither prepared nor sanctioned the sale of the article, & who is not in the habit of preparing or selling the same, or a similar or any article of the kind, that is no case for an injunction, but is, if anything, a defamation or libel case.—*CLARK v. to his reputation. In summing up, the judge directed the jury that if they came to the conclusion that any one reading the story would think pltf. a mere commonplace scribbler they could give him damages for libel, &, further, that on the claim for passing off, if they thought the facts proved & that damage must certainly ensue though it was not capable of present proof, they could find for pltf. with damages.—*RIDGE v. SUB-SECT. 2.—BY MISUSE OF TRADING NAMES OF BUSINESSES.

A. In General.

1122. When use restrained—Name calculated to deceive.—It should never be forgotten in these cases that the sole right to restrain anybody from using any name that he likes in the course of any business he chooses to carry on is a right in the nature of a trade mark, that is to say, a man has a right to say, "You must not use a name, whether fictitious or real, you must not use a description, whether true or not, which is intended to represent, or calculated to represent, to the world that your business is my business, & so, by a fraudulent misstatement, deprive me of the profits of the business which would otherwise come to me." That is the principle, & the sole principle, on which this ct. interferes. The ct. interferes solely for the purpose of protecting the owner of a trade or business from a fraudulent invasion of that business by somebody else (JAMES, L.J.).—LEVY v. WALKER (1879), 10 Ch. D. 436; 48 L. J. Ch. 273; 39 L. T. 654; 27 W. R. 370, C. A.

1123. Use of trade name of plaintiff.—In England the assumption of a name, the patronymic of a family, by a stranger, who had never before been called by that name, is not the subject of a civil action, as by the English law there is no right of property in a person to the use of a particular name, to the extent of enabling him to prevent the assumption of his name by another. Aliter, as to the exclusive use of a name in connection with a trade or business, which right is recognised, & a party assuming it colourably or otherwise, being an invasion of another's rights, is a fraud, for which a remedy lies either at law or equity.—*DU BOULAY v. Dunlop, who had carried on a motor & cycle repairing business in partnership for some years, turned the business into a limited co. under the name of the "Dunlop Motor co.":—Held: a co. trading under the name of the "Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre co.", whose principal business was the manufacture of tyres for motors & cycles, who also dealt in various accessories for use in connection with motor cars, was not entitled to restrain them from using the name "Dunlop" in their business.—*DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD. v. 1130. —]—Pltfs. had carried on for some years at No. 22 Pall Mall, under the style of "The Guinea Coal co.," a large business, which had a considerable reputation. In Mar. 1869, deft., who had been their manager, set up a rival business in Beaufort Buildings, Strand, under the name of "The Pall Mall Guinea Coal co.," & at the end of Aug. removed it to No. 46 Pall Mall. On Nov. 24 pltfs., finding that many persons had been misled into giving orders to deft. in the belief that his concern was that of pltfs., filed their bill to restrain him from trading under the above style or any other colourable imitation of pltfs.' business style. Deft., among other grounds of defence, alleged that pltfs. had knowingly & habitually sold short weight, & that they had no exclusive right to the name "Guinea Coal co.," which was used by various other establishments about London. The Vice-Chancellor granted an injunction restraining deft. from using the name "The Pall Mall Guinea Coal co." in Pall Mall:—Held: (1) although pltfs. had no exclusive right to the name, the injunction had been properly granted, on the ground that deft. had no right to use the name in such a way as to lead persons to believe that his business was that of pltfs., & therefore there was no objection to confining the injunction to the use of the name in a particular place, inasmuch as its tendency to deceive greatly depended on the place where it was used; (2) there had been no such delay as to take away pltfs.' right to an injunction on interlocutory application; for in such cases a pltf. is not bound to come to the ct. until he has had time to obtain evidence that persons have been actually misled by the acts complained of, & the delay, even if unexplained, would not have been fatal to pltfs.' case, as the injunction asked for was of such a nature that deft. could not be injured by the delay in asking for it.—LEE v. A bootmaker having a shop running up Bedford street, with the front & entrance to the Strand, wrote up over his shop the words "Civil Service Boot Supply." The Civil Service Supply Assn. were at that time building a large store at the other end of Bedford street, in which when finished they opened a general shop, & they afterwards opened a boot & shoe shop in Tavistock street, which was not far off. One of the customers of the Assn. had gone to the shop of the bootmaker, mistaking it for that of the Assn. The Assn. brought an action to restrain the bootmaker from using the words:—Held: under the circumstances there was no intention on the part of the bootmaker to deceive, & no rational person would have been deceived by the words so used.—CIVIL SERVICE SUPPLY ASSN. v. 1136. —]—E., trading as the Buttercup Dairy Co., carried on business in Scotland & the North of England, having a large number of shops in which he sold, among other things, margarine. The business was well known, & the trade in margarine was very considerable. The Buttercup Margarine Co., Ltd., was incorporated in Nov. 1916, & proposed to carry on a wholesale business in, among other things, margarine made by a special process. They stated that they did not intend to sell such margarine as "Buttercup Margarine," but under a special name not yet decided on. They were not yet in a position to start business. They had adopted their name innocently. In an action by E. to restrain the Buttercup Margarine Co. Ltd. from using that name, held, that the use of deft. co.'s name was either calculated to deceive & so divert business from pltf. to deft. co., or to occasion a confusion between the businesses; & that this was sufficient to entitle pltf. to relief. An injunction was granted to restrain the deft. co. from using or carrying on business under the name Buttercup Margarine Co., Ltd., or any other name colourably resembling pltf.'s trade name, in connection with the manufacture &/or sale of butter substitutes, & dairy & farm produce of all kinds, or otherwise from carrying on such business under any title or description so as to mislead or deceive the public into the belief that deft.'s business is the business or a branch or department of the business of pltf.—*EWING v. 1137. ———— [Pltf. co., incorporated in 1902, acquired the business of a firm which had carried on business as the Albion Motor Car co. in a large way as makers of engines & chassis of commercial & other motor cars, their goods being identified & known to the trade by the name "Albion," for which they had two trade marks. If pltf. were ordered to supply a motor car the body of the car would be supplied by other makers, & the car sold under pltf.'s responsibility. Deft. co. was incorporated by four persons in May, 1910, to take over the business of a carriage & motor body builder carried on at Albion Gardens, Hammersmith. Defts. did not make motor cars or manufacture engines or chassis. Pltf. alleged that the use of the word "Albion" in the title under which deft. co. was incorporated was calculated to deceive & lead to the belief that deft. co. was a branch of or connected with pltf. co., & they requested deft. co., as carrying on a business substantially the same in character as pltf. co.'s business, to cease the use of the word "Albion" in connection therewith. This deft. co. refused to do, & pltf. brought an action claiming an injunction:—Held: deft. co.'s business had not been proved to be the same class of business as that of pltf. co., yet the probability of confusion between the two cos., both being connected with the motor car industry, was proved; an injunction was granted, delivery up & damages being waived; deft. co. was given two months to change its name.—*ALBION MOTOR CAR CO., LTD. v. 1140. ———— [—]—From 1888 the D. P. T. co., Ltd., & their predecessors in title used the name "Dunlop" in connection with the goods of their manufacture. Such goods consisted of pneumatic tyres for cycles & other accessories such as pumps, inflators, etc. The name "Dunlop" had become identified with the goods of the D. P. T. co., Ltd. F. traded as the D. L. co., & dealt in oils & lubricants for cycles & other cycle accessories, but not the same class of accessories

as the D. P. T. co., Ltd. The word "Dunlop" was used prominently on all the goods of deft. The D. P. T. co., Ltd., brought an action to restrain defts. from so trading:—Held: there was evidence that F. was using the word "Dunlop" because it suggested pltf. co., & pltf. were entitled to an injunction.—DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD. v. DUNLOP LUBRICANT CO. (1898), 16 R. P. C. 12.

1141. ———— [—]—Appls., in an action for infringement of trade mark & passing off, had in the year 1906 purchased from the inventor's widow the trade mark, goodwill & business, with the sole right to make "Stent's Dental Impression Composition." The composition was commonly sold in round tablets, appls.' being of a reddish colour with the word "Stent's" in a panel on them across a sunk disc engine-turned. Resps. manufactured & sold round composition tablets of the same general nature as those of appls.' with the name "Stent's" across a sunk disc engine-turned on them, & the initial "G." above. The other features were dissimilar from those of appls.' tablets. These had been sold by resps. & their predecessors for thirteen years at least. The word "Stent" had for thirteen years at least been also used by one H. C. Stent on similar tablets to the knowledge of appls. or their predecessors, but the initials "H. C." were on the tablets. The persons making resps.' composition had no connection with the name "Stent," & there never had been a "G. Stent" who dealt in such composition. Appls. claimed injunctions against the infringement of their trade mark which was a representation of their tablet, & against the use by resps. of the word "Stents" & the selling by resps. of a dental composition so got up as to deceive purchasers into the belief that it was of appls.' manufacture. It was held at the trial that, on the evidence, the word "Stents" by itself had come to distinguish appls.' goods; the name used by resps. being that of a rival trader the intention which must be imputed to them was that of gaining some reputation, not their own, by the use of that name which must have been originally used by them with a fraudulent intent; there was some possibility of deception; & appls. were entitled to the injunctions asked & to an order for delivery up on oath or destruction of infringing articles & to the costs of the action:—Held: (1) the infringement of the trade mark being negatived by the evidence of persons from the limited class of people to whom the goods were tendered that none of them would be deceived, the House of Lords would not take the contrary view; (2) as to passing off, although when an intention to deceive is proved, no ct. would be astute in concluding that a dishonest deft. had been unsuccessful in his fraudulent design, yet that such a charge ought to be explicitly pleaded & also proved by evidence. In this case it had not been proved that defts. necessarily acted dishonestly in using the word "Stents," & no witness had said that he had been or would be deceived.—ASH (CLAUDIUS) SON & CO., LTD. v. INVICTA MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. (1912), 29 R. P. C. 465.

1142. Use of name closely resembling trade name of plaintiff—Use causing confusion.]—Pltf., Paul Poiret, who had been with Worth, in the year 1903 set up business on his own behalf in Paris, & built up a great reputation & business as a costumier, dressmaker, designer of ladies' dresses & as a theatrical costumier. He exhibited dresses in London in 1909 & had many customers in England, selling by himself or an agent in England, but had no place of business there. On the outbreak of war he was called up for military service, & his premises were taken over by the French Government as a factory for making soldiers' shirts. He did not resume his business until June, 1919. Deft., Alexander F. Nash, in Feb. 1914, set up in business, eventually as a costumier, dressmaker, & theatrical costumier, in London under the name of Jules Poiret, & he, under that name & subsequently a co. called Jules Poiret & Co. Ltd., promoted by him in 1917 & with which no person named Poiret had any connection, carried on business & acquired considerable custom & reputation as a theatrical costumier & ladies dressmaker. He alleged that when he adopted that name he had never heard of Paul Poiret or his business. Pltf. alleged that the acts of deft. had attracted custom & led customers to believe, by the use of the name Poiret, that the business was the same as, or a branch of, that of Paul Poiret, & thereby caused damage to pltf. & deceived the public, & he commenced an action against the co. & Nash to restrain their use of the name Poiret. Deft. denied the allegations & alleged that pltf.'s business had ceased during the period of the war, & that pltf. was guilty of laches in that, although he was given notice that deft. Nash had commenced business under the surname of Poiret, he failed to take any action in the matter:—Held: (1) deft. had taken the name of Poiret knowing of the reputation in dressmaking gained by it in Paris & in England & desiring to get the benefit of that reputation in the English market, & confusion had arisen with private customers & in the press solely due to the use by deft. of the surname of Poiret; (2) notwithstanding pltf. Paul Poiret had no place of business in London, he was entitled to the protection of his goods & reputation acquired in this country; (3) the continued use by the defts. of the name Poiret in the business would lead to confusion in the trade & among private customers; (4) there had been no laches on the part of pltf., & defts. had not acquired in the circumstances any concurrent right to the use of the name Poiret. An injunction was granted restraining defts. from using the name Poiret with or without the name Jules in connection with the manufacture, sale, advertisement or business of selling dresses, milliner, costumier or designer of dresses, with an inquiry as to damages & costs.—POIRET v. POIRET (JULES) LTD. & NASH (1920), 37 R. P. C. 177.

1143. Use of telegraphic address.—The short address "Street, London," was used for many years in sending telegrams from abroad to Street & Co., of Cornhill. A bank adopted by arrangement with the Post Office the phrase "Street, London," as a cypher address for telegrams from abroad to themselves:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to restrain the bank from using such cypher address.—STREET v. UNION BANK OF SPAIN & ENGLAND (1885), 30 Ch. D. 156; 55 L. J. Ch. 31; 53 L. T. 262; 33 W. R. 901; 1 T. L. R. 554.

1144. Use of name of third person.—F. sought to restrain C. & V. from using the name "Richter Concerts," or from representing themselves as owners of the undertaking known by that name, or from representing that they were carrying on the "Richter Concerts" in succession to F.'s series; & also to restrain V. from acting in the matter as agent for C. F. alleged that he engaged Dr. Richter to conduct concerts, & in 1879 had originated the "Richter Concerts"; & that no concerts had ever been given under that name excepting by him. It appeared that C. had announced a series of "Richter Concerts," & that V., notwithstanding a written agreement to act as F.'s agent, had held himself out as the agent of C. It was contended by F. that he had acquired the right to the exclusive use of the term "Richter Concerts," as a "trade name," by having originally introduced the name & obtained a list of subscribers, & by the introduction of original features as to price & music. Dr. Richter had declined to act any longer as the conductor of F.'s concerts, & had made arrangements with C.:—Held: it required a strong case to be made out to sustain a claim to the exclusive use of another person's name as a trade name; no such case had been established in the present instance; & there was no ground for saying that the term "Richter Concerts" had become dissociated from Dr. Richter himself, who was at liberty to carry his services to any market he chose.—*FRANKE v. In one action defts. were makers of soap which they were in a habit of sending out to retailers in boxes having the retailers' names & addresses on them. Pltfs. complained that in several instances the get up of such boxes containing shaving sticks, by reason of their resemblance in colour & shape to the maroon coloured, dome topped, tin lined boxes of pltf's., were calculated to deceive. They alleged that such get up was distinctive of their goods. Deft. in the second action, whose name was Williams, was a customer of pltf's.; he had obtained from the other defts. the boxes of which complaint was made in the second action. Defts. alleged that the shape & colour of the boxes complained of were common to the trade, & that in every case the names & lettering on the boxes clearly distinguished them from pltf's.' boxes. It was held at the trial, that the shape & colour of the boxes were common to the trade, & that pltf's. had established no monopoly in regard to them; that pltf's.' shaving stick was known as "Williams' shaving stick" & that the name "Williams" was distinctive of their shaving sticks: that the boxes complained of were all sufficiently distinct from pltf's.' boxes when really looked at; & that, as to deft. Williams & with reference to allegations made against him, there was no intention on his part of passing off his goods as those of pltf's.—*WILLIAMS (J. B.) Co. v. 1159. ———. ———.]—Long before 1868 the business carried on by pltf. co. was founded at Liverpool for the purpose of carrying on the business of coal merchants, factors & dealers, colliery proprietors, & forwarding agents. In 1868 the firm name of "Dutton, Massey & Co." was adopted. In 1922 pltf. co. was formed & acquired that business. In 1906 a London branch was started for the purpose of carrying on the business of metal & general merchants in London.

 It became a separate firm, which continued under the old name, & in 1921 it passed to a trustee of a deed of assignment. Early in 1922 the London business was sold & transferred to a co. registered under the name of "Dutton, Massey & Company (Eastern), Ltd." Subsequently the latter co., with the sanction of the Board of Trade, changed their original name by eliminating therefrom the word "Eastern," & in Oct. 1922, they opened an office in Liverpool under their name Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., & advertised themselves in the "Journal of Commerce" as general export merchants, coal, shipping & forwarding agents.
 Pltf. co. commenced an action for an injunction restraining deft. co. from representing or doing anything calculated to cause confusion & lead to the belief that the business carried on by them was that formerly carried on by Dutton, Massey & Co. of Liverpool, & from using the name Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., so as to induce such belief.
 Evidence of actual confusion was given at the trial:
 —Held: the word "Eastern" had been dropped by deft. co. for a fraudulent purpose, & the sanction of the Board of Trade to the change had been obtained by fraudulent means, & deft. co. must in the circumstances of the case be restrained by injunction (a) from using the name of Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., or any other name of which the words Dutton, Massey formed a part in the businesses of coal merchants, factors & dealers, colliery proprietors, shipping & forwarding agents, & from in any other manner representing or causing or procuring to be represented or doing any other thing which was calculated to lead to the belief that they had been or were carrying on the business or were the successors in business of the late firm of Dutton, Massey & Co. of Liverpool, coal merchants, etc., & (b) from using in any business the name of "Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd.," or any other name of which the words "Dutton, Massey" formed part without, in such name, sufficiently distinguishing their name from the name of pltf. co.—DUTTON, MASSEY & CO. (LIVER-

(1904), Ltd., commenced an action to restrain a co. which had been recently registered under the name of the London Daimler Co., Ltd., from using the word Daimler either in its name or in connection with motor cars. In an action, brought in 1901, by the predecessors of pltf. co.
 it was held that the word Daimler indicated a system & that a Daimler motor indicated a certain form of motor; but pltf. alleged that that word had since acquired a secondary meaning indicating pltf. co. & its cars. About 37 per cent. of pltf.'s sales were effected in London, where they had show rooms. It did not appear what name defts.
 were going to give to their cars, but in a letter they said that their cars would be known as the "London Daimler," whereas pltf. were of Coventry:—Held: the word "Daimler" no longer indicated a type or system of motors: the name London Daimler Co., Ltd., was calculated to deceive & to cause confusion between the two cos., & pltf. were entitled to an injunction as to the name of deft. co. although not in so wide a form as that claimed.—DAIMLER MOTOR CO. (1904), LTD.

 defts. from passing off cutlery not being their name Joseph Rodgers Simpson & Son, or any other name comprising the name "Rodgers," so as to be calculated to deceive. They alleged that deft.

 was using the said firm name so as to suggest that the first name in it was Joseph Rodgers. Deft. was on his knives using the device of a crown which was placed over the name Rodgers, in which position the pltf. had a crown on their knives, they having also the words "Cutlers to Her Majesty," Deft. alleged that his son, who was thirty-one years of age, assisted him in his business, but deft. also alleged that he had used the said firm name on knives twenty years previously. Deft. was carrying on a grocer's business, but he was also, as pltf., alleged that they had recently ascertained, selling knives marked as above mentioned. Deft. claimed that he had the right to use the name Joseph Rodgers Simpson & Son, & contended that his use of it was fair:—Held: deft. had made use of the fact that the middle word in his name was Rodgers in order to use it in a way calculated to

She carried on the business of working the collieries & selling the coal in her own name, adding to it on her wagons & bill heads the words "R. Collieries." Defts., from 1868, carried on at R. the business of coal merchants as the "R. Coal co.," having depots at various railway stations in the south & west of England, at which they sold different kinds of coal. They became in 1876 the lessees of & worked a colliery outside the parish of R., but in a district or basin in which coal was raised similar to that raised within the parish, coal raised in the district, but outside the parish, being known in the market as R. coal. In 1873 defts. began to sell coals at G., in Surrey, by means of a local agent, & in 1875 they bought the goodwill of a retail coal dealer named C. at G., who had become bkpt. They then advertised themselves in the Surrey newspapers, & otherwise in the neighbourhood, as "The R. Colliery Proprietors & Factors, Coal & Coke Merchants (late C. & co.)," & offered to supply coal of every description direct from the collieries:—Held: (1) defts. were not entitled to use the name "The R. Colliery Proprietors," unless & until they should acquire a colliery within the parish of R., or to use any style implying that their coal came from the parish of R., unless & until they should become authorised to sell coals raised from a colliery within that parish; (2) the acts of defts. being Pltfs. claim an injunction restraining defts. from carrying on business or registering any co. under this title or name, or under any title containing the word "Hopton." . . . They are not entitled to restrain the use of the word "Hopton" as part of defts.' business style or as part of the name of any co. they may register, but, inasmuch as "Hopton Wood" & "Hopton" in connection with "stone" mean really the same thing, some confusion may not improbably arise if defts. carry on business, or form a co. under, or with, a title of which the word "Hopton" is the first word. On this ground, I suggested in the course of the trial that if they, defts., carry on business as the "New Hopton Stone & Marble Quarrying Co.," or formed their proposed co. under the name of the "New Hopton Stone & Marble Quarrying co., Ltd.," all danger of any such confusion would be avoided (PARKER, J.).—HOPTON WOOD STONE FIRMS, LTD. v. Subsequently a trade grew up in this country in British-made boots & shoes made after American models & methods, & it became a common practice to call such goods "Anglo-American" or "British American." Defts., who had several shops in or near London & dealt in such goods, in the year 1906 determined to confine their business in one of their shops to such goods, & in Apr. 1907 commenced to use the trade name the "Anglo-American Shoe Co." at that shop. In May, 1906, the co. went into voluntary liquidation, & the liquidator sold the assets to the promoter of a second co., also called "Mrs. Pomeroy, Ltd." Deft. commenced a similar business under the name of "Mrs. Jeannette Pomeroy," upon premises in a close proximity to the premises where she had formerly carried on, & where the new co. continued to carry on, the business. The second co. commenced an action for an injunction to restrain deft. from carrying on business under any style of which the name "Pomeroy" formed a part, & from representing or inducing the belief that she was connected with the business of pltf.'s or that formerly carried on by the first co., & from derogating from her grant of the goodwill of the business sold, from soliciting former customers, & for other relief. Pltfs. alleged that, on the transfer to the first co., deft. had, in addition to executing an agreement, executed a deed by which she assigned the goodwill of her business & the exclusive right to use the name of "Pomeroy." 1184. — Different class of goods sold by assignee.]—Pltf., who sold pills, which had a wide reputation as Holloway's Pills, commenced an action to restrain deft. from passing off his pills as pltf.'s & from using the name Holloway in connection with pills, & moved for an interlocutory injunction. Deft. had some years previously bought a business from a man named Holloway, it & alleged that he had the right to use the name; was contended on his behalf that, in any case, & he should not be restrained from using the name in connection with pills except so as to cause deception.—Held: deft. had not shown that his predecessor had dealt in pills; on the facts proved deft. had acted fraudulently, & an interlocutory injunction should be granted in the form asked.—HOLLOWAY v. CLENT (1903), 20 R. P. C. 525.

1185. — Business purchased with fraudulent intention.]—Pltfs. & their predecessors had carried on the business of needle manufacturers for about a hundred years under the style of "Abel Morrall" & their needles had acquired a great reputation & were sold & bought as "Abel Morrall's" or "A. Morrall's" or "Morrall's" or "Morralls' Needles" as was admitted by defts. during the trial. In 1891, pltfs. purchased the goodwill of the business of Joseph Mogg & Joseph John Richard Mogg trading under the styles of "Joseph Mogg & Co." & "Joseph J. R. Mogg & Co." & the market for the needles now sold by pltfs. under these names was in Ireland & Scandinavia, where they were well known as "Mogg's Needles." In 1900 deft., who had started business in 1893, in the same neighbourhood, purchased for £88 from one Jabez Yardley Morrall, a man in a small way of business, his goodwill & stock-in-trade, the latter having been just valued at £36 the deed of assignment binding him not to authorise his name to be used for the purpose of a needle manufacturer by any other person or persons. In 1897 by a similar transaction deft. had purchased from one William Mogg his machinery with the goodwill of his business & use of his name, it appearing that beyond the manufacture of crotchet hooks he did nothing to needles beyond packing them in paper. Pltfs., having brought an action against deft., under his trading style of T. H. & Co., for an injunction & other relief.—Held: the purchases from Jabez Yardley Morrall & William Mogg were not bona fide transactions, but were colourable devices for giving deft. some appearance of weight to use their names in order that by using surnames where different initials were insufficient to distinguish the goods & businesses, he might obtain trade intended for pltfs.; & this was sufficient fraud to enable the ct. to inquire into the motives of such transactions, even where it was the man's own name that had been purchased, irrespective of goodwill.—MORRALL (ABEL), LTD. v. HESSIN & CO. (1903), 20 R. P. C. 429, C. A.

1186. ——Pltfs., Mappin & Webb, Ltd., incorporated in 1898, were the successors in business of two old-established firms of Mappin Bros. & Mappin & Webb. Deft. L., a London retailer, sold goods similar to pltfs.' but made by one B., who was alleged, without strict proof, to have bought the business in Sheffield of one Theophilus Mappin, trading as Mappin & Sons. The goods sold by deft. were marked "Mappin & Sons," & bore price tickets with such phrases as "Mappins' A1 Quality." Deft.'s salesmen had represented that the goods were the same as pltfs.' Separate proceedings were pending against B.—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an injunction restraining deft. from selling goods not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for such goods.—MAPPIN & WEBB, LTD. v. LEAPMAN (1905), 22 R. P. C. 398.

1187. — Name used fraudulently.]—In Mar. 1904, Joseph Rodgers & Sons, Ltd., of Sheffield brought an action against F. M. Hearnshaw & W. F. Hearnshaw to restrain them from passing off their goods as & for the goods of pltfs. Pltfs. were a co. whose predecessors in business had carried on the same business as manufacturers of cutlery for over two hundred years, & their cutlery was well known by the style of "Rodgers' Cutlery" throughout the world. In Feb. 1889, defts. bought the business of Rodgers Bros., established in 1883, which was that of edged tool manufacturers, from the survivor of two brothers named Rodgers. In July, 1902, defts. commenced to manufacture cutlery, & in 1903 for the first time opened separate works for cutlery & described themselves as "Cutlery Manufacturers." As manufacturers & wholesale dealers they traded as "Hearnshaw Bros." or "Henry Brown & Sons & Co." They sold their goods labelled with the words "Rodgers Bros., Sheffield, manufacturers of celebrated cutlery, tools, etc.," & marked them with a trademark "John Bull" & the name "Rodgers Bros." which they had acquired with the business purchased from Rodgers Bros. No case of actual deception was proved.—Held: the name of "Rodgers" was known universally as referring to pltfs.' goods, & the manufacture & sale of goods as carried on by defts. was calculated & intended to deceive, & the name Rodgers Bros. was used for the purpose of enabling retailers to commit fraud.—JOSEPH RODGERS & SONS, LTD., v. HEARNSHAW & HEARNSHAW (1906), 23 R. P. C. 349.

1188. — Use calculated to deceive.]—Defts. Dodd's Drug Stores, Ltd. were successors in business to Richard Jefferson Dodd, & in an action brought by him & a co., which he had formed, an Order was made by consent restraining deft. co. from using as part of its name or upon its shops, etc. the word "Jefferson" or any other name or word, not being part of its registered name, calculated to induce the belief that deft. co. was carrying on the business of pltf. co. or of pltf. Richard Jefferson Dodd, but the injunction was not to prevent deft. co. from representing that it was the successor in business of pltf. R. J. D. & also restraining deft. co. from using the words "Dodd's Female Pills" & as to the name, complaining of the use of the name "Jefferson Dodd" on the lower fascia of a shop with the words "Successors to" on the window so as, as they alleged to be almost unnoticeable, & of the same words on a fanlight with a similar addition, & also of the use of "J. Dodd"—Held: "Dodd" was part of the registered name of deft. co. & "J." was neither a name or word, so that the use of neither of these was forbidden by the injunction, & as regards the fanlight the assertion was a proper one, but as regards the use of "Jefferson Dodd" on the fascia it was calculated to induce the belief that deft.

Leaving their employ, he set up business on his own account as a coal merchant, under the style of "N. from C. & co.," which he habitually used in advertisements, letterpaper & coal waggons. Upon his death, within a year, his widow continued the business under the same style. C. & co. commenced an action for an injunction to restrain her from so doing, but were refused such injunction, & the action was dismissed with costs.—RICKETT, COCKERELL & Co., LTD. v. Such statements, even if false, are puffing assertions, which cannot be restrained at the suit of a private person unless it appears that they tend to the passing off of one man's goods or business as another's, or amount to a holding out of pltf. as a partner, so exposing him to liability, or tend to disparage pltf.'s goods, & cause special damage.—CUNDEY v. 1195. Use of name by former agent.]—Where articles of a particular kind have become generally known in commerce under the name of the original manufacturer, or patentee as the case may be any person has a right after the expiration of the patent to manufacture such articles & sell them under that name; but he may not by inscribing the name, as a proper name, on his shop front or otherwise lead the public to believe that he is selling as agent for the original manufacturer.

Deflt. was the agent of the co. & as their agent he also represented himself as having the depot of Wheeler & Wilson's sewing machines. He had the name of "Wheeler & Wilson" as the names of the persons carrying on business on his door as the business designation; & then they are minded for reasons satisfactory to them to deprive him of the agency & they do so. After that he persists in a series of advertisements by which it is perfectly clear he intended to represent himself as still having the same connection with Wheeler & Wilson's sewing machine co. as he had before, that is to say not as being a person who is selling machines manufactured upon the principle patented by Wheeler & Wilson but as a person carrying on exactly the same kind of business with the same kind of relation to the manufacturer of the article as he had before, that is representing himself as continuing that agency. That is in my opinion a gross fraud upon pltf's. & an unjustifiable falsehood which the ct. will restrain (JAMES, V. C.).—WHEELER & WILSON MANUFACTURING CO. v. SHAKESPEAR (1869), 39 L. J. Society of India, Ltd., claiming an injunction, to restrain defts. from using the name or stamp of A. & N. C. Society, Ltd. either with or without "of India," or any other stamp or name so closely resembling the name of plfts. as to lead to deception, & moved for an interlocutory injunction. It appeared that on certain corks defts. had omitted part of their full name, using the words, The A. & N. C. Society, Ltd., round the edge of an oval & the words, "of India" in the middle. The corks were sent out to India & some had been used in bottles of wine. It was proved that the full title of defts. was put on a capsule, & on a label, which were placed on each bottle:—Held: there was great probability of confusion, & an injunction was granted, & it was ordered that the stamp should be erased from the corks already in use.—ARMY & NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. ARMY, NAVY & CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY OF INDIA, LTD. (1891), 8 R. P. C. 426.

1199. ———.]—The Army & Navy Co-operative Society, Ltd., which had been incorporated for thirty years, commenced an action against a recently incorporated co. called Army, Navy, & Civil Service Co-operative Society of South Africa, Ltd., to restrain it from using that name, & moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: defts.' name was calculated to deceive, & a delay of three months since the incorporation of deft. co. was sufficiently explained. An interlocutory injunction was granted, but words were directed to be inserted in the order permitting deft. co. to use its name for a short period provided it added that it had no connection with plft. co. Defts. appealed. On the hearing of the appeal defts. undertook to change their name to Naval, Military, & Civil Service Co-operative Society of South Africa, Ltd., & the appeal was dismissed with costs, the hearing of the motion being treated as the trial.

Now in what case would it be wrong? Plfts. have no right to the words "Army & Navy," or the words "Co-operative Society," or any combination of those words. Their right lies in this, that they may sue if deft. is fraudulently adopting a name for the purposes of pretending that his trade is their trade, & if he be not fraudulent at all, still plfts. may sue "in property" if he is adopting a name the result of which will be that deft. will be taking plfts.' property in the sense that persons will go to deft. to trade with him when they meant to go to plfts., meaning to trade with them. Whether the fancy name adopted is one which will have that result or not is purely a question of fact in all these cases, & in the present case the question to be examined is, as a matter of fact, have defts. taken this name either fraudulently or so as to infringe plfts.' rights of property (BUCKLEY, J.).—ARMY & NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. ARMY, NAVY & CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY OF SOUTH AFRICA, LTD. (1902), 19 R. P. C. 574, C. A.

Certain directors or officers were joined as defts. Defts. had applied to register "Plasmonoid" as a trade mark in certain classes, including 3 & 41. Plfts. had opposed such applications by deft. co. to register, & one had been refused, whilst the decision in the other had been postponed. Plfts. moved for an interlocutory injunction. Defts. contended that owing to the different natures of the goods & the differences in get-up, no deception was probable:—Held: an interlocutory injunction should be granted substantially restraining defts. from carrying on business in foods or preparations for human consumption under the name "Plasmonade, Ltd." or any other name or title of which "Plasmon" formed part, & from any name of which "Plasmonade," "Plasmonoid," or "Plasmon" with or without any suffix formed part for food preparations, & from passing off their goods as those of plfts.—*INTERNATIONAL PLASMON, LTD. v. On Mar. 3, 1908, the Midland Insurance Co., Ltd., was incorporated with objects which included insurance of the nature undertaken by the Royal Insurance Co., Ltd., & the Royal Insurance Co., Ltd., commenced an action against the new co. & its directors to restrain them from using the name Midland Insurance Co., alleging that it was calculated to deceive. 1206. ———.]—The Reliance Rubber Co., Ltd., & its predecessors, had been dealing in rubber goods since 1889. It had a large business in pneumatic tyres & in small solid tyres for trolleys, perambulatores, & the like. All those goods had for many years been sold under the name “Reliance.” The co. had also a small trade in solid band tyres for motor vehicles. Until 1922 the name “Reliance” had not been used in the rubber trade except in connection with the business of that co. Before 1922 there existed a co. trading in rubber tyres & rubber trolley wheels, & having a name in which the word “Simplex” formed the principal feature. That co. went into liquidation & its undertaking & assets were acquired by the Reliance Tyre Co., Ltd., which had been formed for the purpose. The last-named co. sold solid tyres, but did not appear to sell pneumatic tyres. In Nov. 1922, the Reliance Rubber Co. endeavoured, without success, to induce the Reliance Tyre Co. to change its name, & in July, 1923, commenced an action to restrain the use of the name. At the trial, pltfs. adduced evidence of confusion arising from defts.’ use of the name. Defts. alleged that the name had been chosen in ignorance of the existence of pltf. co., & that the cause of defts. reluctance to change the name was their expectation that a change would have resulted in the loss of a certain contract. Defts. relied also on delay, but pltfs. established that any delay was in part due to circumstances beyond their control.—Held: (1) assuming an original innocent adoption of the word “Reliance,” defts.’ conduct after complaint had been such as to debar it from asserting their subsequent innocence; (2) the use of the name by defts. was calculated to deceive; (3) as to the alleged delay, there was nothing that would, on an application for final judgment, disentitle pltfs. to relief. Judgment was given for pltfs., with costs, & injunctions were granted to restrain defts. from using the name in carrying on business, & from selling tyres under that name. It was ordered that defts. should be allowed six weeks in which to change the name, but that there should not be a suspension of the injunction in regard to the selling of tyres.—RELANCE RUBBER CO., LTD. v. RELIANCE TYRE CO., LTD. (1924), 42 R. P. C. 91.

1207. ———.]—Pltf. society, the Society of Motor Manufacturers & Traders, Ltd., was incorporated in 1902 & had become a very well-known society & acquired a world-wide reputation. The primary purpose of the society was the encouraging, promoting, & protecting in the United Kingdom & elsewhere the interests of manufacturers & traders in motor vehicles of every description. Deft. co., Motor Manufacturers’ & Traders’ Mutual Insurance Co., Ltd., was incorporated in 1924 for the purpose of carrying on the business of insurance against damage caused to motor cars, motor cycles, or vehicles of any description. Pltf. society took no part whatever, direct or indirect, in the promotion or incorporation of deft. co., but was purely a trade protection society, & did not itself engage in or carry on any manufacture or trade, but claimed in this action an injunction to restrain deft. co. from carrying on business under the name of Motor Manufacturers’ & Traders’ Mutual Insurance Co., Ltd., or any other name comprising the combination of words “motor manufacturers & traders,” or other similar combination of words calculated to cause confusion or to deceive or mislead the public or members of the motor trade into the belief that deft. co. was promoted by, or was connected with, the business of pltf. society, & damages. Pltf. society alleged that they would suffer damage to their business reputation if deft. co. were to be wound up or dispute its policies of insurances, & that they might desire to promote a co. for the insurance of motor vehicles & use the name taken by deft. co. No charge of fraud was made against deft. co.:—Held: the business of deft. co. being altogether different from, & in no way competing with, the business of pltf. society, & the name of pltf. society being descriptive & consisting entirely of words in ordinary use in the English language, & there being no suggestion that the public would mistake deft. co. for pltf. society, deft. co.’s name was not calculated to deceive & so cause damage to the business reputation of pltf. society in the manner alleged; & deft. co. was not liable to have its business stopped unless it changed its name, merely because a thoughtless person might unwarrantably jump to the conclusion that it was connected with pltf. society.—MOTOR MANUFACTURERS & TRADERS’ SOCIETY v. MOTOR MANUFACTURERS’, ETC., INSURANCE CO., [1925] Ch. 675; 94 L. J. Ch. 410; 133 L. T. 330; 41 T. L. R. 483; 42 R. P. C. 307, C. A.

Edgumbe Rendle & Co.” His son, John Edgumbe Rendle, having failed in his business of a bookseller, was taken into his father's glass roofing business, & entered into an agreement not to carry on any opposition business. The father died, having by his will given the son an interest in the glass roofing business. The son then started business on his own account under the name of "J. Edgumbe Rendle & Co." He got into financial difficulties, & made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors of his business & of all his property. A co., of which he was the promoter & manager, was subsequently registered under the name of "J. Edgumbe Rendle & Co., Ltd.," to carry on the business of glass roofing in opposition to W. Edgumbe Rendle & Co. The trustees of the will of the father thereupon applied to the ct. for an injunction to restrain the co. & their manager from carrying on the business of glass roofing under the name of "J. Edgumbe Rendle & Co., Limited," or any other name calculated to mislead the public into the belief that such co. was carrying on or had succeeded to the business of W. Edgumbe Rendle & Co.:—Held: an injunction must be granted as the son, who was not at the time carrying on the business of glass roofing he having assigned all his interest to his creditors, had no right to lend his name to a co., which name from its being so like one already attached to an established business, would be calculated to deceive.—RENDLE v. EDGUMBE RENDLE & CO., LTD. (1890), 63 L. T. 94.

1211. — Deception of persons of ordinary intelligence.—A co., formed in the year 1907 & called Buttons, Ltd., carried on business in Birmingham, where it had works & manufactured buttons, including covered buttons, & it was in the habit of covering buttons with material supplied by customers. In 1918 deft. co. was formed under the name Buttons Covered, Ltd., with a small capital & it carried on business in Birmingham, its main business consisting in covering buttons with material supplied by customers. An action was brought by the first-mentioned co. to restrain deft. co. from using the name Buttons Covered, Ltd.:—Held: a person of ordinary intelligence would not be likely to confuse the name of deft. co. with that of pltf. co., & the action failed.—BUTTONS, LTD. v. BUTTONS COVERED, LTD. (1920), 37 R. P. C. 45.

1212. — Whether injunction against directors.—Pltfs. since 1920 had carried on business in Stafford as manufacturers of wood heels for shoes under the firm name of Heels, & were commonly known as Heels of Stafford. Deft. co. was incorporated on Oct. 14, 1926, under the name Stafford Heels, Ltd., to carry on the business of manufacturers of heels for shoes in Stafford. Pltfs. sought an injunction to restrain deft. co. & its directors from carrying on business under the name Stafford Heels, Ltd., or any other name calculated to mislead the public into the belief that the business of deft. co. was the business of pltfs. so as to cause confusion between the two businesses:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an injunction against deft. co., but as against the directors the action failed.—HEELS v. STAFFORD HEELS, LTD. (1927), 44 R. P. C. 299.

SUB-SECT. 3.—BY MISUSE OF TRADE NAMES OF BUSINESS PREMISES.

1214. When use restrained—Name calculated to mislead—Separate assignments of business & site.—(1) A firm of distillers, whose principal business was in gin, were the owners of premises which had for many years been known as the Black Swan Distillery, & had on the front the sign of a black swan. They were also the owners of a trade mark registered in class 43 for spirits, the principal feature of which was a black swan. They conveyed the freehold of the premises to B., & subsequently assigned the goodwill of their business & the trade mark to N. B. was a whisky distiller, & continued to call the premises by the name of the Black Swan Distillery & to use the sign of a black swan on the premises, & used the words Black Swan Distillery extensively in advertisements. He did not use the premises as a distillery, but as offices & stores, his distillery being in Scotland. N. commenced an action to restrain B. from representing that he was carrying on the business formerly carried on by the vendors:—Held: pltfs. had not established that the acts of B. were calculated to mislead.

(2) As a general rule the owner of land or buildings of any kind may affix to it any name he pleases, but the ct. will interfere if a particular name be affixed with the view of making a dishonest reputation which would cause damage to another, as, for example, if it were used for the purpose of representing that a business carried on there was the business of another, or even if, without any dishonest intention the user were such as actually or probably to mislead (STERLING, J.).—NICHOLSON v. BUCHANAN (1900), 44 Sol. Jo. 408; 19 R. P. C. 321.

1215. — Use on circulars & labels.—R. & J. P., Ltd., a co. which specialised in the manufacture of English deer leather, had a factory known as W. Miles, at G. The co. brought an action against J. P., who had been a member of the firm of R. & J. P., predecessors in the business of pltf. co., & had been chairman of the directors of pltf. co. from 1895 to 1906, complaining of certain circulars & labels sent out by him. It appeared that he had, since Aug. 1917, carried on a similar business at R. St., London, but those premises being taken over by a govt. dept., he had taken a house & premises at H. Hill, & had named them "W." & had carried on business on part of the premises, & issued circulars & labels complained of with the name "W." as part of his new address. The circulars & labels were sent to stewards & keepers from whom pltf. had been in the habit of purchasing skins & hides, & pltfs. alleged that such circulars & labels were calculated, & had in fact, cause deception or confusion:—Held: the circulars & labels were calculated to mislead people first instance.—PERRY v. TRUEFIT (1842), 6 Beav. 66; 49 E. R. 749.

1223. —]—No trader is justified in taking the peculiar symbol, device, or mark by which another trader distinguishes his goods on the market, & so attracting custom to himself from his rival.

Applts. sold their goods in boxes, with the name of the article printed in a particular manner on a "scroll." Resps. sold precisely similar goods under the same name, also printed on a similar scroll, with the addition of their initials "C. B." There was no evidence that any customers were in fact deceived, & after the commencement of the action resps. discontinued the use of the scroll:—Held: applts. were entitled to an injunction to restrain resps. from using the scroll in connection with their goods, & to an account of profits derived by resps. from the sale of goods in boxes distinguished by the scroll.—WEINGARTEN BROTHERS v. BAYER & Co. (1905), 92 L. T. 511; 21 T. L. R. 418; 22 R. P. C. 341, H. L.

1224. —]—P. Bros. sold waterproofs as "Mattamac" which word was their registered trade mark. They sent test or trap orders to V. & co. for "Mattamac" goods which V. & co. executed by sending their own goods without explanation. P. Bros. brought an action against V. & co. for an injunction. Defts. contended that the persons giving the orders ought to examine the goods supplied to see if they bore the name "Mattamac" & if they had done this they would not have been deceived:—Held: an injunction should be granted with costs, to restrain defts. from selling or offering for sale any waterproofs not being plfts.' goods as "Mattamac," & from in any way passing off waterproofs not being plfts.' goods as & for plfts.' goods.—PEARSON BROTHERS v. 1217. — Use by former agent for long period.]

—Prior to a date in 1901, the trade reputation of plfts. was so connected with the words "The Goupil Gallery," that a rival trader might have been restrained from calling his premises "The Goupil Gallery." Deft. having on that date purchased from plfts. the premises known as "The Goupil Gallery," but not the goodwill of the business, & having agreed with plfts. that he was to be their sole agent for the sale of plfts.' pictures for five years, & also to be at liberty to trade there in pictures on his own account:—Held: in the absence of stipulation respecting the use of the words "The Goupil Gallery," that in 1907 the trade reputation of deft. was so connected with the words "The Goupil Gallery," that he could not be restrained from so calling his premises after his agency had ceased, & on the principles applied in passing-off cases, plfts. were not at liberty to call new premises, used for the same trade purposes as defts.' premises, "The Goupil Gallery."—BOUSSOD, VALADON & Co. v. MARCHANT (1907), 97 L. T. 301; 23 T. L. R. 681; 21 R. P. C. 665; on appeal, 24 T. L. R. 111, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 4.—BY MISUSE OF TRADE NAMES OF GOODS.

A. Right of Action.

(a) In General

1218. General rule.]—(1) The ground on which the ct. protects trade marks is, that it will not permit a party to sell his own goods as the goods of another; a party will not, therefore, be allowed to use names, marks, letters, or other indicia by which he may pass off his own goods to purchasers as the manufacture of another person.

(2) If pltf. coming for an injunction in such a case appears to have been guilty of misrepresentations to the public the ct. will not interfere in the

it can or may be so used in connection with the goods to represent them as the goods of pltf. In applying the test in a "passing off" action, whether or not the goods of defts. have been represented as the goods of somebody else, the principle is the same even where the name is the name of both persons as distinguished from a fancy name which has been created for the purpose of the particular goods. In "passing off" actions it is not necessary to prove intent to deceive.—MICKELSON v. MICKELSON (1916), 34 W. L. R. 155; 10 W. W. R. 261.—CAN.

PART V. SECT. 5. SUB-SECT. 4.—A. (b).

k. General rule.]—The use of a trade name may be an element in the false representation required to support a "passing off" action, & even if it has not acquired any secondary meaning, of pltf.—CANHAM v. JONES (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 218; 35 E. R. 302.

1230. —.]—This was an action for infringement of two trade marks, infringement of copyright, & passing off. Pltf.'s firm had for over 40 years sold an animal medicine called "Day & Sons' Black Drink" in peculiar bottles, & had registered two trade marks in 1888, viz. the said name as a mark used for eighteen years prior to Aug. 13, 1875, & a copy of a label covering the bottles, composed in 1887 & used continuously since that date, & consisting of an upper section along which ran the words "Day & Sons' Black Drink, or Colic & Scour Mixture," with a device at the left hand end by which were set the words "Trade Mark," & a lower portion filled with printed matter, including directions for use; this label was also entered at Stationers' Hall prior to the commencement of this action. Defts. alleged that in 1896 they had purchased the recipe for the mixture from persons long since connected with pltf.'s firm. Defts. were selling the mixture in bottles which in shape, get up, & label closely resembled pltf.'s under the name of "Black Fluid Colic Draught." In the course of the action, pltf's. abandoned their claim in respect of the alleged infringement of the trade marks & of the copyright in the label; & defts. abandoned their resistance to the claim in respect of passing off. Defts. moved for the rectification of the Register by the removal of pltf.'s two trade marks:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an injunction restraining defts. "from passing off or attempting to pass off defts.' goods as & for pltf.'s goods & in particular from selling or offering for sale, so as to induce the belief that it is pltf.'s manufacture, any preparation of medicine for animals, not of pltf.'s manufacture, by means of the use of the title 'Black Drink,' or any title colourably differing therefrom, or by means of the use of bottles similar in shape to pltf.'s bottles or of labels similar to or only colourably differing from pltf.'s labels, or otherwise got up in any manner similar to or only colourably differing from pltf.'s preparation."—DAY v. RILEY & WHITTAKER (1900), 48 W. R. 556; 44 Sol. Jo. 502; 17 R. P. C. 517.

1231. —.]—B. & B. were piano makers carrying on business as "Carl Bechstein," & were the proprietors of two registered trade marks consisting of the word "Bechstein." They brought an action for infringement of trade mark & passing off against F. A. B. They complained of certain advertisements of F. A. B. offering "Bechstein Model Pianos" for sale. An interim injunction was granted. Subsequently they moved to commit F. A. B. for breach of this injunction, complaining of a further advertisement. Copies of the affidavits were not served with the notice of motion. The trial of the action & the hearing of the motion came on together:—Held: "Bechstein Model" indicated that a piano was made by the firm of Bechstein; deft. had infringed pltf.'s trade marks & had dishonestly attempted to pass off pianos not of their manufacture as being of their manufacture; & a perpetual injunction must be granted.—BECHSTEIN v. BARKER & BARKER (1910), 27 R. P. C. 484.

1232. —.]—Pltf's. had long ago acquired the businesses of two firms whose styles commenced with the name "Fonseca," & their port had long been known as "Fonseca & co.'s Port," "Fonseca's Port," or "Fonseca Port." In Mar. 1921, deft. co. was incorporated under the name of Fonseca & Vasconcellos, Ltd., one of the directors being R. A. de Fonseca, & it carried on business as importer & seller of port. Pltf's. commenced an action against deft. co., & alleged that deft. co. had invoiced port as "Fonseca Alto Douro Port," & they claimed not only an injunction against passing off, but also an injunction against importing & dealing in port under the name Fonseca & Vasconcellos, Ltd., or any other name of which the name Fonseca formed part. Dft. co. on the hearing of a motion offered a perpetual undertaking not to use the name Fonseca except as part of their full corporate name, but pltf's. proceeded with the action:—Held: deft. co. had, in the instance alleged, deliberately attempted to pass off their port as pltf's. well known port, & pltf's. were entitled to the first injunction; & as the use of "Fonseca" as part of deft. co.'s name might deceive persons not familiar with the trade into thinking that the port sold by deft. co. was pltf's. well known "Fonseca" port, pltf's. were also entitled to an injunction in a special form relating to the use of defts.' name.—GUIMARAENS (M. P.) & SON v. FONSECA & VASCONCELLOS, LTD. (1921), 38 R. P. C. 388.

1233. —.]—The name "Dorman" as applied to motor engines had become entirely associated with engines made by pltf. co., to many of which deft. co.'s "Meadows Gear Box" had been attached.

Pltf. co.'s sales manager, an engineer named J. E. Dorman, had recently left pltf. co. & become a director & sales manager of deft. co., for whom he designed a motor engine to which the Meadows Gear Box was to be attached. At his suggestion this was put on the market as the "Meadows-Dorman" engine so as to show the designer's as well as the maker's name.

Pltf. co. thereupon claimed an absolute injunction to restrain deft. co. from using the name "Dorman" in any shape or form in connection with motor engines.

Dft. co., while not opposing an absolute injunction as to the form "Meadows-Dorman" which had in fact led to confusion, contended that it was entitled to state the engine-designer's name, with proper safeguards to avoid confusion, & therefore only a limited injunction ought to be granted:—Held: deft. co. must be restrained.

First from using the form "Meadows-Dorman" at all in connection with its engines; secondly from using the name "Dorman" in connection with its engines without taking all proper precautions clearly to distinguish deft. co.'s business & goods from those of pltf. co.

Thirdly from so using or referring to the name "Dorman" as to lead purchasers or others to suppose that deft. co.'s goods were those of pltf. co., or that there had been any amalgamation or agreement between the two cos. as to their manufacture or sale.—DORMAN (W. 1234. Name used without distinguishing mark.]—In 1892 a patent was granted to B., an American, for improvements in "rubber stamps" & a patent for a similar invention was granted to him in America. L. sold certain rubber stamps which he imported from America, where he obtained them from H. These stamps bore, by arrangement with B. & H. the following, "Licenced Buck's Patent," "Made in America," "Patented in U.S.," & "Patented in England." The owners of B.'s English patent brought an action against L. to restrain him from infringing their patents & from selling stamps inscribed "Buck's Patent," or with any other words leading to the belief that the stamps were made under their patent, & they claimed an account of profits:—Held: deft.'s stamps were not infringements, & on deft. undertaking in future to use words showing that the American patent was alone referred to, no injunction would be awarded, no case of passing off had been made out by plffs.—PNEUMATIC RUBBER STAMP Co. v. LINDNER (1898), 15 R. P. C. 525.

1235. —j—F. Reddaway & co., the successors in business of F. Reddaway, brought an action against Ahlers for an injunction to restrain him from continuing to use the word "Camel" or "Camel-hair" in such a manner as to deceive purchasers into the belief that they were purchasing plffs.' belting. What was complained of by plffs. was the issue of certain trade documents by deft. in which "Belting of camel-hair" was offered for sale. In one of such documents no name appeared; in the others there appeared the name of Conrad Scholtz, who manufactured the belting in question, but such belting was not expressly described as being manufactured by Conrad Scholtz:—Held: "Camel-hair Belting" meant in the trade at the date of the action, as well as before, the belting of plffs., & nothing else, & deft. was offering for sale or describing belting in such a manner as to be likely to be taken for plffs.' goods, & an injunction was granted.

A custom of the trade generally will not exonerate a trader, who is otherwise bound to do so, from the necessity of distinguishing his goods from those sold by another person.—REDDAWAY (F.) & Co. v. AHLERS (1901), 19 R. P. C. 12.

1236. Name denoting particular type or pattern—Common to trade.]—In 1885 F. S. W. registered a design for intercepting sewer traps, & his firm sold the same as "Winser Interceptors." The registration expired in 1890. The business of the firm was transferred to a limited co. The limited co. in 1898 commenced an action against A. & co. for an injunction to restrain them from passing off their goods as the goods of pltf. co., & in particular from selling interceptors not being plffs.' as "Winser Interceptors." The acts complained of by pltf. co. were the sale by defts. of four interceptors of theirs as "Winser Interceptors," & there was no other ground of complaint. Pltf. co.'s interceptors were, at the time of the commencement of the action, & always had been, marked with the name of their firm & the word "registered" & the number of the registered design. Defts. interceptors had no similar mark. The action was tried with witnesses:—Held: upon the evidence "Winser's Interceptor" denoted an interceptor of a particular type or pattern, & not an interceptor supplied by plffs., & defts. in supplying "Winser Interceptors" did not thereby intend to & did not thereby, in fact, represent their goods to be the goods of plffs.—WINSER v. ARMSTRONG & Co. (1899), 16 R. P. C. 167.

1237. Name used with different prefix.]—F. Reddaway & Co., Ltd., successors in business of F. Reddaway, brought an action against Robert Stevenson & Brother, Ltd., & Anthony Stevenson in respect of the use of the words "Camel-hair" in connection with belting. Plffs. complained of the use of the name "Stevenson's "Camel-hair Belting" & "Phoenix Brand Camel-hair belting." Defts. admitted that "Camel-hair Belting" used alone denoted belting made by plffs. Plffs. had first known of these acts of defts. April, 1898, but after inquiries into their position, had taken no steps against them:—Held: the conduct of defts. pointed to dishonest intention, & under the circumstances, the prefix of the proper name or the name of a brand, or both together, was not sufficient to distinguish defts.' Camel-hair Belting from the plffs.; there had been no such acquiescence on the part of plffs. as to debar them from suing for an injunction but, it debarred them from recovering damages for the past.—REDDAWAY (F.) & Co., LTD. v. STEVENSON & BROTHER, LTD. & STEVENSON (1902), 20 R. P. C. 276.

1238. Name indicating source of goods—User by merchant after cessation of dealing in goods—Goods dealt with by other merchant.]—A vineyard known as the Quinta de Roriz, & a wine shipping business, C. N. Kopke & Co., were originally in the same hands, but belonged to different owners since 1847. The house of Kopke or the persons entitled to its goodwill took the entire produce of the Quinta de Roriz down to 1902. Since that date the sole consignee of such produce in England were plffs. G. B. & co. In 1888 the successors of the Kopke business registered "Kopke Roriz" as a trade mark for wines as an old mark. In an action by the owner of the vineyard & the consignee to restrain the use by the owners of the Kopke business of this mark, it was proved that the wine shipped under it had come, recently at any rate, in some years only partly & in others not at all from the vineyard in question. There was evidence of representation to the public of a connection between the produce of the vineyard & the mark in question:—Held: the use of the mark "Kopke Roriz" by defts. was a representation that the wine was substantially the produce of plffs.' vineyard, & an injunction should be granted, on the ground of passing off, with damages, but not an account of profits.—VAN ZELLER v. MASON, CATTLE & Co. (1907), 25 R. P. C. 37.

1239. Name used in error—On one isolated occasion.]—Plffs. were the makers of oilers for the axles of railway, & other carriages, known as "Armstrong Oilers." Defts. were manufacturers of axle boxes & oilers, & had been in the habit of receiving orders for plffs.' oilers, & executing them through plffs. or their agents for some years. At a short time previous to the commencement of the action defts. had, in response to orders for "Armstrong Oilers," supplied oilers of their own make under the name of "Armstrong Type Oiler" with the knowledge of the customers that the oilers were not of pltf.'s manufacture. In one instance owing to the mistake of a workman pltf.'s brass plate with the name "Armstrong Oiler" was attached to the oilers manufactured by defts. Plffs. brought an action for passing off:—Held: without deciding what was the primary meaning of the term "Armstrong Oiler," defts. had not done anything which they were not entitled to do except in the one instance; this was an isolated case & a mistake, & under the circumstances did not justify the grant of an injunction. Judgment was given for defts. with costs, except so far as down to & including the hearing of a motion for an interim injunction, on which defts. gave a certain undertaking, the costs were increased by the complaint with reference to pltf.'s brass plate being put by mistake on deft.'s goods.—ARMSTRONG OILER CO., LTD. v. PATENT AXLEBOX & FOUNDRY CO., LTD. (1910), 27 R. P. C. 362.

1240. French translation of name.]—In July, 1885, M., of Dizy in France, commenced the consignment to pltf. in London of champagne under the label of "Le Court et Cie, Rheims," which had then recently been registered in France as his trade mark, & to which in Dec. 1886, his right was established in proceedings against X. before the French tribunal. Further consignments were made to pltf. down to July, 1886, & advertised & sold by him as Le Court et Cie's champagne. In Mar. 1886, deft., trading under the name of "Short & Co.," began to sell, chiefly at a wine bar across the counter, champagne which was sent to him from France by X. as Le Court et Cie's champagne; & it appeared that in 1882 he had proposed to register in France a label with the name Le Court et Cie as corresponding to his own trade name of Short & Co., but from difficulties in obtaining registration abandoned the idea. Upon motion by pltf. to restrain the use of the name & brand by deft.:—Held: neither on the ground of trade mark nor of trade name was pltf. entitled to an injunction against deft. because the evidence failed to show that either by long user or reputation had the wine sold under the name & brand "Le Court et Cie" become so associated with the wine of pltf. as to enable him to assert his common law right of restraining another person from passing off his goods as those of pltf.—*GOODFELLOW v. 1241. Name used for different article.]—The N. co. & their predecessors in business had, from 1895 onwards, dealt in "Nugget" boot & other polishes & had acquired a great reputation, & the word "Nugget" had become distinctive of their trade. The N. co. had registered as a trade mark the word "Nugget," with the device of a nugget underneath it, in the class including polishes. They had not dealt in, & had no immediate intention of dealing in, rubber heels. The H. co. had from 1907, sold rubber heels under various names, including the name "Nugget," & had used show cards having the name "Nugget" on them with the device of a nugget underneath it. They stamped the word "Nugget" on each heel, with the name "Harboro" in addition. In 1911 the N. co. commenced an action against the H. co. to restrain them from using the word "Nugget" or the representation of a nugget in connection with the sale of rubber heels. It was proved that in 1907 one rubber heel manufacturer had sold polish, & pltf. alleged that recently a closer connection had arisen between the sale of rubber heels & that of polishes. It was also proved that rubber heels, & other articles, had been sold under the name "Nugget" to a considerable extent by other traders. No actual deception was proved to have occurred:—Held: the facts were to be considered as they stood in 1907, & the fact that an alteration had taken place in the trade since then ought not to affect the propriety of deft.'s conduct; deft.'s representation of a nugget was not, as alleged, a copy of pltf.'s representation; & deft.'s use of the name "Nugget" was not such as to lead to a legitimate inference that their rubber heels were those of pltf.s.—NUCKET POLISH CO., LTD. v. HARBORO RUBBER CO. (1911), 20 R. P. C. 133.

1242. — Accessories of principal article.]—The Neostyle Manufacturing co., which traded in duplicating machines & manufactured & sold accessories for use therewith which, machines & accessories they sold under the name "Neostyle," commenced an action to restrain another co. from passing off ink, paper, & stationery not of pltf.'s manufacture or merchandise as & for the goods of pltf.s. by the use of the word "Neostyle" or otherwise, & from infringing their trade mark "Neostyle," registered in Class 39 in respect of paper, stationery, & bookbinding. Before the trial the trade mark was ordered by the Ct. of Appeal to be removed from the Register on the ground that pltf.s. had not an exclusive right to the word "Neostyle" for such goods. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the term "Neostyle" was not distinctive of pltf.'s goods, & that, as applied to paper, ink, & accessories, it meant that such paper, ink, & accessories were suitable for use in the "Neostyle" machine. Defts. had described their accessories as being "for the Neostyle," & had used the term "Neostyle Ink" in a catalogue meant for the trade, & two cases of sale of "Neostyle Ink" were proved. At the trial pltf.'s adduced evidence to establish a case of passing off by means of the tins in which defts. sold their "ink for the Neostyle," which tins had not in all cases defts.' name on them. It was held at the trial that, although the word "Neostyle" had become identified in England with pltf.'s duplicating machines, they had never had any exclusive right to the word in connection with duplicator accessories; that defts. might sell ink & paper for use on the "Neostyle" machine, & so describe them, provided that they did not by words or get up represent their goods as those of pltf.s.; that there had been no passing off by defts.; & that pltf.s. had failed to establish a case entitling them to an injunction; but the ct. suggested that deft.'s name should always appear on the tins of ink sold by them:—Held: the conclusion of fact arrived at on the trial ought not to be disturbed, & the appeal was dismissed.—NEOSTYLE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. ELIAM'S DUPLICATOR CO. (1904), 21 R. P. C. 569, C. A.

1246. —[Pltfs. registered a trade mark consisting of a Demon's face & the words "The Demon," & used it on tennis racquets with handles made according to a patent which had been declared invalid in a previous action. They also generally stamped the words "The Demon" on such racquets, which were known & ordered as "Demon racquets." Defts. sold racquets exactly like pltfs.' with the word "Demotic" stamped where pltfs. stamped "The Demon." Pltfs. brought an action to restrain defts. from using "Demotic" on their racquets. One of pltfs.' witnesses swore that the use of "Demotic" by defts. was calculated to deceive. All defts.' witnesses swore that it was not calculated to deceive:—Held: defts. ought to be restrained from using the word "Demotic" in such a way as to represent these goods as the goods of pltfs.—*SLAZENGER & SONS v. 1247. —[The Singer Manufacturing Co. brought an action against the British Empire Manufacturing Co. to restrain them from advertising or using the name "Singer" in connection with sewing machines, not of pltfs.' manufacture, in any way calculated to induce the belief that such machines were of pltfs.' manufacture. Pltfs. alleged that the word "Singer" indicated their goods, but they admitted that in the inner circle of the trade a special class of machines had been known as being made on the "Singer system." Defts., who did not manufacture, issued advertisements in which "Singer" appeared in large letters with the words "latest improved" on one side of it & "system" on the other side. These words & defts.' name which headed the advertisements were in a smaller type than the word "Singer." The advertisements also contained prominently the prices of the machines advertised contrasted with the usual prices; they stated: "We have no agents" & "Send for illustrated price lists," followed by defts.' name & address. Defts.' machines themselves had not the word "Singer" on them. Pltfs. alleged that the words "Latest Improved Singer System" had no descriptive meaning either to the trade or public. They called as witnesses persons who had seen the advertisements & had thought that such advertisements referred to pltfs.' machines, & who had gone to pltfs.' branch establishments to ask for the machines advertised, or in one case, having before bought one of pltfs.' machines, complained to pltfs. of having been charged a higher price & not that in the advertisements. Defts. alleged that the words "latest improved Singer system" described machines of a particular class or type & that no one following the directions of the advertisements could be deceived:—Held: to ordinary purchasers there was nothing known as the "Singer system," & the advertisements were calculated & intended to deceive intending purchasers into the belief that the machines advertised were manufactured by pltfs.—SINGER MANUFACTURING CO. v. BRITISH EMPIRE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. (1903), 20 R. P. C. 313.

1248. —[Pltfs., who sold "Iron-Ox Tablets," brought an action to restrain defts. from selling medicinal tablets under the description "Iron Oxide Tablets" & from passing off their goods as pltfs.' goods. Defts., being unable to obtain pltfs.' goods for sale, obtained from a manufacturer, & sold to retailers for re-sale,

"Compound Iron Oxide Tablets" which contained iron oxide, practically useless as a drug, & also other & useful drugs, with the avowed intention of facilitating competition with "Iron-Ox Tablets," which contained no iron oxide. There were other tablets called "Iron Oxide Tablets" placed upon the market after the time when pltfs. commenced advertising, but before defts.' sales began; pltfs. had stopped the sale of some of these tablets. Defts. contended that iron oxide was in popular demand as a medicine & that they were entitled to supply this demand in the way they did, there being no complaint of get-up & no actual deception, but only cases in which the person receiving defts.' goods ordered pltfs.' goods from the retailers, but was not himself deceived:—Held: defts. had not put "Iron Oxide Tablets" upon the market to satisfy a popular demand, but in order to supersede "Iron Ox Tablets," under the circumstances the choice of this name was not legitimate trading, & it would lead to confusion & was chosen for that reason, & not because it could in any sense be said to correctly describe the article.—IRON-OR REMEDY CO., LTD. v. CO-OPERATIVE WHOLESALE SOCIETY, LTD. (1907), 24 R. P. C. 425.

1249. —[The Muralo co. were the makers of a distemper which they sold under the name of "Muralo" in the United Kingdom & in many parts of the world. Defts. manufactured a distemper under the name of "Murrilo," which they adopted after some correspondence with their agents. Pltfs. brought an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from selling their goods under this name, alleging that its similarity to their name had led to confusion in the trade, & they adduced evidence to show that the choice of the name by defts. was made with intent to deceive:—Held: the name "Murrilo" was calculated to lead to the belief that defts.' goods were pltfs.' goods, & the name was taken deliberately for that purpose.—MURALO CO. v. TAYLOR & CO. (1910), 27 R. P. C. 261.

1250. —[Pltfs. had for upwards of twenty-five years sold Havana cigars under the name "Bolivar." Evidence was given that pltfs.' cigars had become known to the trade & the public as "Bolivar" cigars. In Apr. 1920, pltfs. learnt that defts., Moliver & Co., Ltd., were selling cigars under the name "La Molivar" or "Molivar," & brought an action for passing-off against the co. & two persons, Moliver & Weinbaum, who were directors of the deft. co. Moliver & Co., Ltd. Defts.' cigars were British made. Deft., Moliver, was by birth a Russian, & said that in Russia his name was spelt Molivar:—Held: the similarity between "Bolivar" & "Molivar" was such as to be calculated to cause confusion & to enable dishonest traders to impose upon the public notwithstanding the difference between pltfs.' & defts.' cigars; defts. were not entitled to the name "Molivar"; the conduct of the individual defts. was an attempt to obtain, by means of the limited co., the benefit of pltfs.' reputation, & pltfs. were entitled to judgment against all three defts., with costs.—*MIDDLEMAS & WOOD v. 1251. —[No intention to deceive.]—The proprietors of two trade marks consisting of the word "Mirabol," one in capital lettering & the other in script lettering on a label, & both registered in class 1 in respect of enamels, paints & varnishes, brought an action for infringement of the marks against the proprietors of a trade mark consisting of the word "Muralol," & registered in class 1 in respect of colours, paints & varnishes. Pltfs. also alleged in the statement of claim that defts. had passed off goods by the use of the word "Muralol," but early in the proceedings pltfs. informed defts. that they did not intend to rely upon any specific acts of passing off. Defts. admitted that they had sold flat oil paints under the name "Muralol," but alleged that pltfs. had sold under the name "Mirabol" only undercoating & enamel, flat & glossy, not flat oil paint, & they denied that they had infringed the trade marks or passed off goods. Pltfs. gave notice of motion to remove defts.' mark from the register, & defts. gave notice of motion to limit the registration of pltfs.' mark :—Held : defts. had chosen the name "Muralol" honestly ; defts.' goods were sold only to the trade, & there had not been any actual deception, but defts.' word "Muralol" was calculated to deceive.—WALPAMUR CO., LTD. v. SANDERSON (A.) & CO., LTD. (1926), 43 R. P. C. 385.

Deft. had sold an ink in bottles similar in size to pltfs.', designated as "Steelpens' Blue Black," also in white capital letters of large type :—Held : this was a colourable imitation of pltfs.' trade mark, & deft. was restrained by injunction from the further use of it.—*STEPHENS v. 1256. "American syrup of figs"—For "Calliforlian syrup of figs."—Pltfs. in this action, the California Fig Syrup co., an American co., having a depot in England, sold Syrup of Figs under the name of "California Syrup of Figs," & advertised the same largely. Other firms sold "Syrup of Figs" both in England & America, but, except in the case of defts. to the action, there appeared to have been only a small use of the term "American" in reference to Syrup of Figs by two other firms. Defts. were an English co., who first sold the California co.'s article, & then commenced to sell "The American Syrup of Figs" under the name of "The American Syrup of Figs co." Certain orders were given to them for "California Syrup of Figs," the name "American" being added in some cases. These were executed by supplying defts.' preparation. An action being brought against them for an injunction & other relief, defts., among other things, set up that pltf. co. were disentitled to relief on the ground of misrepresentation, as there was little or no fig juice in the preparation which they sold as "Syrup of Figs." It was held at the trial that pltf. co. were entitled to an injunction to restrain defts. from selling their "Syrup of Figs" as "American," & to an account of profits & costs, & they were not disentitled to relief in the action on the ground of misrepresentation :—Held : pltfs. had not established that defts. were passing off their goods as pltfs., & the appeal must be allowed.—*CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. v. Reddaway & co., brought an action against the Frictionless Engine Packing co., Ltd., in respect of the use of the words "Karmal" & "Camel-hair" in connection with belting. Pltfs. complained (a) of the use of the words "Camel-hair" without any distinctive word or prefix ; (b) of the use of the word "Karmal" as being likely to deceive purchasers into the belief that by purchasing "Karmal-hair Belting" they were purchasing pltfs.' belting ; (c) of the use of the name "Frictionless Engine Packing co.'s Camel hair Belting." Defts. admitted that "Camel-hair Belting" used alone denoted belting made by pltfs. :—Held : (1) defts. had used the words "Camel-hair Belting" without any distinction, & had, therefore, brought themselves within the decision in Reddaway v. Banham, No. 1098, ante ; (2) the use of the word "Karmal" was likely to deceive & ought to be restrained by injunction ; (3) the prefix of the proper name was sufficient to distinguish defts.' 1258. "Vacuum A Mobiloil"—For "Vacuum" oil.—The owners of a trade mark consisting of the word "Vacuum" registered for (inter alia), lubricating oils, began an action for infringement of same, & also for passing off by defts. of oils, not being the goods of pltfs. as & for their goods. Defts. had sold oil, not pltfs., out of a barrel in their shop marked "Vacuum Motor Oil" "A quality" & invoiced as "Vacuum A Mobiloil." They alleged in defence that "Vacuum Quality" was an expression used in practice in the trade to denote quality & would deceive no one :—Held : pltfs.' rights had been infringed & an injunction was granted against infringement of their trade mark & against passing off & an inquiry as to damages.—VACUUM OIL CO., LTD. v. GOOCH & TARRANT (1909), 27 R. P. C. 76.

1259. "Lanco Belting"—For "Lancashire Belting."—Prior to 1870, & subsequently, a co. & their predecessors manufactured & sold hair belting for machine driving under the name of "Lancashire Belting" or "Lancashire Patent Belting" & used in connection with the sale a trade mark consisting of the words "The Lancashire" registered in 1885, as an old mark. The co. also sold but did not manufacture balata belting. In 1904, pltfs. acquired the business of the co. Pltfs. sold hair belting under the name of "Lancashire Belting" but did not use that name in connection with their sale of balata belting. In 1905, defts. began to manufacture balata belting, which they sold under the name of "Lanco Belting," & in the same year they registered two trade marks, one consisting of the word "Lanco," & the other of the words "Lanco Balata Belting" with a device. an action to restrain passing off, & moved to expunge defts.' trade marks. They alleged that their belting was known by various abbreviations of the word "Lancashire" resembling the name "Lanco," & the use of that name was calculated & intended to deceive. Defts. denied that their "Lanco Balata Belting" could be mistaken by purchasers for pltf.'s "Lancashire" hair belting. At the trial, no actual deception was proved, the allegation of fraud was withdrawn & defts. put in evidence a correspondence with the Registrar of trade marks on their application to register their trade marks, from which correspondence it appeared that defts. had originally applied to register the word "Lanconie," stated as an abbreviation of "Lancashire cotton made in England," & their adoption of "Lanco" instead of "Lanconie" was in consequence of correspondence with the Registrar:—Held: the use of the name "Lanco" was not calculated to deceive.—REDDAWAY & CO., LTD. v. Pltfs. complained of the use of the word "Aquatite" by defts. It appeared that words beginning with "Aqua" were in use in the trade:—Held: what defts. were doing was not having regard to the surrounding circumstances calculated to deceive.—AQUASCUTUM v. 1261. "Glen Thorne" — For "Thorne's." — Pltfs. & their predecessors in business were a firm of whisky distillers of very old standing, & there was proof that their whisky for many years past had been known on the market as "Thorne's Whisky," & that it had acquired both in the trade & among the public a reputation under that name. Defts. & their predecessors in business, who were restaurant proprietors, had for many years obtained the whole of their whisky from pltfs.' London agents, & had dealt in no whisky but that of pltfs. In 1887 defts.' predecessors in business registered as a trade mark a label headed by the words "Glen Thorne," & followed by "Old Highland Whisky," & in small lettering, "Sole Proprietors, Pimm's & co.," the words Pimm's & co. being printed as a signature. The label also bore in the corner defts.' trade mark of three barrels with the address. Defts. continued to deal solely in pltfs.' whisky until the year 1906. In that year defts. ceased to buy or to deal in pltfs.' whisky; nevertheless they continued to use the label aforesaid & to supply their customers with "Glen Thorne" whisky. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain passing off & moved to expunge defts.' trade mark. Pltfs. alleged at the trial that defts.' label was put on the Register subject to an arrangement between themselves & defts. Defts. denied that any such arrangement was made. Pltfs. adduced evidence to prove passing off on several different occasions:—Held: (1) defts.' trade mark was registered by arrangement with pltfs., & at the moment defts. ceased to supply "Thorne's Whisky" the trade mark became calculated to deceive; (2) there had been passing off by defts., & if defts. were allowed to continue to sell whisky other than pltfs.' under the name "Glen Thorne," passing off would be certain to occur again. An injunction was accordingly granted, & an order made to expunge the trade mark from the Register.—THORNE (R.) & SONS, LTD. v. PIMMS, LTD., Re PIMMS' TRADE MARK (1909), 26 R. P. C. 221.

Subsequently, defts., who were the manufacturers of another medicated wine made from wine & extract of meat, registered as their trade mark the name of "Carvino." On an application by pltfs. to have the name "Carvino" removed from the Register, & for an injunction to restrain defts. from selling their medicated wine in bottles so got up as to be calculated to lead to the belief that defts.' preparation was pltfs.' "Wincarnis":—Held: the word "Carvino" was not calculated to deceive; & the get-up of defts.' medicated wine was not calculated to deceive.

1264. "The Regiment" — For "Regimental." — Pltfs.' predecessors in title had always sold their cigarettes as the "Smith's Regimental Cigarettes." In 1885 they registered the words "Regimental Cigarettes" as a trade mark, & in 1908 pltfs. registered the word "Regimental" for tobacco without altering the form in which they sold their cigarettes. In 1916 defts., without any knowledge of the existence of pltfs.' cigarettes or trade marks, began to sell cigarettes in boxes decorated with regimental badges, which he called Pasquali's "The Regiment" high class Virginia cigarettes. Pltfs. sought an injunction against deft. for infringement, & passing off, & deft. moved the ct. to remove pltfs.' marks from the register:—Held: (1) pltfs. had failed to prove passing off, as the word "Regimental," as used by them in the title "Smith's Regimental Cigarettes," had not acquired a secondary meaning; (2) the question whether the word "Regiment" was an infringement of the different word "Regimental" depended on whether it was calculated to cause defts.' goods to be taken by ordinary purchasers for those of pltfs., which was not so in this case.—IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO. 1266. "Amata" — For "Amami." — Pltf. co. carried on business as manufacturers of perfumery, toilet preparations & other similar articles, & had for many years distinguished their goods by the application thereto, & the use in connection therewith, of the word "Amami." In July, 1909, they registered that word as a trade mark for goods in class 48. The trade mark was to be applied to perfumery, including toilet articles & preparations for the teeth & hair & perfumed soap. In Jan. 1924, deft. co. was incorporated for the purpose, according to the memorandum of assocn., of (a) carrying on business as wholesale manufacturers of toilet preparations, & (b) publishers of medical books & publications relating thereto, but the real object was to sell a medical book written by one of the two directors, & the co. had not sold toilet preparations, but on letter paper had described themselves as "Wholesale Manufacturers of Amata Toilet Preparations." The share capital was £100 divided into 100 shares, the whole of which were taken up by the two signatories to the memorandum who were also the only directors of the co. Pltf. co. commenced an action against deft. co. & the two directors for an injunction restraining them (inter alia) "from selling or offering or exposing or advertising for sale or procuring to be sold any such goods as aforesaid," i.e., perfumery or toilet articles or preparations, "not being pltf.' goods under the name "Amata" or under any other name which by reason of colourable imitation of the word "Amami" or otherwise is calculated to deceive" & from infringing pltf.' trade mark, & from carrying on business as manufacturers of toilet preparations under the name "Amata, Ltd." At the trial defts. claimed the right to use the word "Amata" for toilet preparations:—Held: (1) the sale of toilet preparations by deft. co. as "Amata" cream or "Amata" perfume, or any other toilet preparation with the word "Amata" affixed, would almost necessarily lead to confusion, & an injunction in the terms quoted above must be granted, but not the injunction asked for to restrain the use of the name Amata, Ltd.—*PRICHARD & CONSTANCE (WHOLESALE), LTD. v. B. Deception.

1267. Necessity for.—The ct. does not recognise property in unpatented articles, & will not interfere to restrain the sale of spurious articles, though described to be the same as those manufactured by another, unless such articles are held out by the imitator to be the manufacture of that other person.

Where B. invented & sold a secret medicine called chlorodyne & F. advertised a spurious imitation of it as "the original chlorodyne" & the evidence showed that F.'s article was not mistaken for B.'s but only that F. was taken to be the first inventor:—Held: B. was not entitled to an injunction to restrain F. from issuing such advertisements.—*BROWNE v. 1270. —.]—The Apollinaris Co., Ltd., the sole consignees for the United Kingdom of "Apollinaris Water," & a German co., the owners of the Apollinaris Spring, commenced an action complaining of the sale by a firm of wholesale chemists & druggists of "Apollinaris Salts," & seeking to restrain the sale by them of salts not obtained from pltf.' "Apollinaris Water" as or for salts obtained from such water & to restrain defts. from passing off or causing or enabling to be passed off any water made up with salts not obtained from pltf.' "Apollinaris Water" or any such salts, as or for pltf.' "Apollinaris Water" or salts obtained therefrom. Pltf's. chiefly complained of the use by defts. of a catalogue containing "Salts for the production of natural mineral waters prepared according to the most reliable analyses of the respective waters," the list of such salts comprising Apollinaris, & of the sale of "Apollinaris Salts" with instructions for making "Apollinaris Water." They contended that persons ordering such salts would expect to get salts prepared from pltf.' "Apollinaris Water," & they alleged one case of actual deception. Defts. contended that it was clear from the catalogue that the salts were artificially prepared. Pltf's. had made "Apollinaris Salts," but not since 1887, & never on a commercial scale:—Held: no actual deception had been proved; the catalogue contained no representation that defts.' "Apollinaris Salts" were obtained from or were capable of producing the real "Apollinaris Water," & the words "Apollinaris Salts" only represented that the salts sold under that name were the constituent salts of Apollinaris water, & there was no passing off of such salts as or for the goods of pltf's. or as obtained from the Apollinaris water; although the sale of "Apollinaris Water," without distinguishing it from the natural water, would be an infringement of pltf.' rights, the sale of the salts by defts. was for the purpose of such salts being used in a manner which was not in itself an infringement of pltf.' rights, & defts. had not caused or enabled any person to do that which he was not lawfully entitled to do.—APOLLINARIS CO., LTD. v. DUCKWORTH & CO. (1906), 22 T. L. R. 744; 23 R. P. C. 540, C. A.

D. & co. began to sell a medicinal preparation in the form of tablets under the name of "Dunn's Fruit Salt & Potash Lozenges" & subsequently as "Dunn's Fruit Salt & Chlorate of Potash Lozenges." E. commenced an action against D. & co. for an injunction to restrain them from selling any compound for medicinal purposes not being or containing pltf.'s "Fruit Salt" under the title of "Fruit Salt," or under any title of which "Fruit Salt" forms a part, & moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: the title of the tablets was calculated to deceive, & an injunction ought to be granted to restrain defts. from selling "Dunn's Fruit Salt & Potash Tablets" or any other compound for medicinal purposes not being or containing pltf.'s "Fruit Salt" under the title of "Fruit Salt" or under any other title of which "Fruit Salt" forms a part so as to induce the belief that such 1275. ———.]—The Singer Manufacturing Co. brought an action to restrain J. S., a dealer in sewing machines, from applying the name "Singer" or "Improved Singer" to sewing machines not pltf.'s manufacture, or from so using the name "Singer" or "Improved Singer" as to induce the belief that machines not pltf.'s were of pltf.'s manufacture. Pltf. co. alleged that "Singer" meant their machines. They admitted that in the inner circle of the trade a special class of machines were known as machines made according to the "Singer system" or "Singer principle" but they maintained that deft., by issuing cards & advertisements to the public generally, of which the prominent part was "Improved Singer sewing machines," was passing off his goods as pltf.'s although in the majority of cases the advertisements also bore the name of the actual manufacturers of the machines, Frister & Rossmann, a German firm. Deft.'s case was that the word "Singer" did not mean machines of pltf.'s manufacture, but a particular type of machine which anybody was at liberty to make, & secondly, even if this were not so, deft.'s advertisements were not calculated to deceive as they gave the name of the manufacturers:—Held: the words "Singer" or "Singer's" sewing machine, prima facie & to a large part of the public, denoted a machine manufactured by pltf.s; the fact that a "Singer" system was also known to certain persons did not enable a trader to make an improper use of the term "Singer" without a context, deft.'s posters, etc., in which the important part was "Improved Singer sewing machines" were deceptive, although the name of the manufacturer was given; the real defts. in the case, the manufacturers, had fraudulent intentions in using such posters, & an injunction should be granted to restrain the use of the posters, etc., complained of & the use of the name "Singer" in such a way as to be calculated to deceive.—SINGER MANUFACTURING CO. v. SPENCE (1893), 9 T. L. R. 536; 10 R. P. C. 297.

1276. ———.]—(1) Although the purchaser of a business may, as a general rule, & where no deception is probable, mark & sell goods made by himself in the business with the trade name of his vendor, yet where deception would probably arise from the goods being so marked such marking will be fraudulent, & no right can be acquired, by long continuance of the practice, to allege that such marking denotes the goods of the successor in business of the original proprietor.

(2) The assignment of the right to use a particular name in trade, although expressed to include the goodwill of the business carried on under that name, cannot have any validity unless in substance & in fact the goodwill of the business to which the name is attached is also transferred.

(3) C. & co., a firm of watchmakers, granted to another firm for seven years a licence to put a particular name upon watches, & after the expiration of the licence practically ceased themselves to sell or manufacture watches so marked:—Held: C. & co. had lost all right to prevent other persons from marking their watches with the particular name, & could not therefore assign any such right, even if it was one capable of being validly assigned.—THORNELOE v. HILL, [1894] 1 Ch. 569; 63 L. J. Ch. 331; 70 L. T. 124; 42 W. R. 397; 38 Sol. Jo. 201; 8 R. 718; sub nom. THORNELOE v. HILL, THORNELOE v. READ, 10 T. L. R. 200.

An injunction was granted.—LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT CO., LTD. v. CHEMISTS' CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. (1896), 13 R. P. C. 730, C. A.

1280. ———.]—Degree of probability necessary.—Apart from trade mark legislation it is only rarely that an English word, primarily descriptive & which has become the name of a particular article of commerce, can be so distinctive of the goods of a particular manufacturer that the ct. will restrain its use as calculated to deceive, when there has been no actual deception & no intention to take any fraudulent advantage of another by using the word. Such an action is in effect a qui timet action, & unless the reasonable probability of deception be established, the proper course is to refuse an injunction, leaving pltf. to his remedy if cases of actual deception afterwards occur.—*BURBERRYS v. Defts. alleged that their wine was a pure sherry, principally used for altar purposes, & that there was no probability of confusion. Pltf. co. alleged that both articles were wines for the special use of invalids, & that they would be sold by the same class of persons. At the hearing of the motion it was dismissed on the ground that there manufactured by pltf., & that defts. so dealt with it for that deceitful purpose:—Held: as there was evidence to warrant the conclusion that the ordinary run of purchasers would be deceived, the verdict of the jury should not be interfered with.—*SPARKS v. 1284. ———. J.—G. & Son, began to sell a floating soap as "Ivy Soap" in 1889. In 1899 G., who carried on the business, commenced an action to restrain the Ivory Soap Co., as agents for the P. & G. Co. an American Co. from selling "Ivory Soap" made by the P. & G. Co. The P. & G. Co. had admittedly sold "Ivory Soap" largely in America for a great many years & they alleged that they had advertised it largely in American journals, some of which came to England & that it had been sold in England prior to 1889 & since. Witnesses were called for the defence, who gave evidence of small sales in England of "Ivory Soap" during the period aforesaid, but mainly to American customers:—Held: pltf.'s & def.'s goods being got up in a perfectly different manner, no one could mistake one for the other; any similarity in the sound there might be between "Ivy" & "Ivory" would not lead to the inevitable deduction that what defts. were doing must be calculated to deceive: & defts. had proved their right to the use of the word "Ivory."—GOODWIN v. IVORY SOAP CO. (1901), 18 R. P. C. 389, C. A.

1286. ———. J.—Pltfs. in an action for infringement of trade marks & for passing off carried on a large business as manufacturers of toy goods, including children's cycles, which they sold under the name "Fairycycle," & they had trade marks, one being that name & others being the word "Fairy," alone or combined with words descriptive of the particular goods. Def., a manufacturer of perambulators, including toy perambulators, issued a circular containing a description of a new toy cycle of his manufacture. On motion, def. stated that in the circular the name of his cycle had been put in the form "Farrisycle," by mistake, & he undertook not to use the words "The Farris Cycle" otherwise than as separate words. At the hearing, def. alleged that, about the end of 1923, he had made for him, & had sold, a toy cycle that he had called "The Farrisette," & that, later, when the maker of it had entered def.'s employment, def. had altered the name to "The Farris Cycle." Pltfs. alleged that, in response to a written order for a "Fairycycle" at several shops of H. & Co., def.'s cycle had been supplied, & that, in consequence, H. & Co. had submitted to an injunction against passing off:—Held: the action was purely a name case, without any question of passing off by get-up; in def.'s circular the name, "Farrisycle" had been used by mistake; neither actual deception nor probability of deception had been proved; & upon def.'s undertaking always to keep the words "Farris" & "Cycle" separate, the action must be dismissed.—LANES BROTHERS, LTD. v. FARRIS & CO. (1925), 43 R. P. C. 64.

SUB-SECT. 5.—BY GET-UP OR MARK.

A. In General.

1287. Passing off induced by fraud of third party—Liability of party passing off for damages—Right of indemnity against third party.—A declaration alleged that pltf. was employed by def. to make certain articles, & that def. fraudulently directed pltf. to place on each of the said articles a mark which was the trade mark of R.; & that def. did so innocently, & was thereby subjected to a Chancery suit at the suit of R., which he had to pay a large sum to compromise:—Held: as this suit could have been prosecuted by R., successfully for an injunction & an account, the declaration showed a good cause of action.—DIXON v. FAWCUS (1861), 3 E. & B. 537; 30 L. J. Q. B. 137; 3 L. T. 693; 7 Jur. N. S. 895; 9 W. R. 414; 121 E. R. 544.

1288. Right to use trade wrappers—Right of former servant.—A servant is entitled, when he leaves his employment, to carry on a business of the same character as his former employer's, & to obtain the custom of his former employer's customers, & to use trade wrappers & other trade papers, notwithstanding that his former employer does so, & to employ the same printer; but in exercising these rights it is especially incumbent upon him to do so in such a manner as not to represent that his business and goods are the business & goods of his former master; & if he does so represent, an injunction will be granted to restrain him from so doing.—HART v. COLLEY (1890), 44 Ch. D. 193; 59 L. J. Ch. 355; 62 L. T. 623; 38 W. R. 440; 6 T. L. R. 216; 7 R. P. C. 93.

1289. Get-up must be recognised description of plaintiff's goods.—In order to succeed in a "passing off" action, not based upon an express representation, pltf. must prove that the name or the get-up or whatever it may be by which def. describes his goods is the recognised description of pltf.'s goods or of a definite article or class of articles of pltf.'s goods as & for which the incriminated article or class of articles is being passed off. Further, if

Sect. 5.—Passing off: Sub-sect. 5, A., B. & C. (a).] the incriminated goods are the goods of pltf. himself, i.e., where deft. is selling certain goods dealt in by pltf. as & for other goods dealt in by pltf., it is equally essential that the pltf. should be able to define the goods for which the incriminated goods are passed off. In order to determine whether the incriminated goods are passed off or not the whole of the description of them must be looked at, & then the well-known & accepted description of the goods as & for which they are passed off must also be looked at, to see whether the description used by deft. will lead persons to believe that his goods are those which are denoted by the other description, & not the goods which they really are.

Ptfs., H. R. & co., were port wine shippers & merchants. Defts., who were retail wine merchants, issued a price list in which they advertised ptfs.' wine as H. R.'s "Grand Old Crusted Port. Over six years in bottle. . . . Usual credit price per doz. 60s. Now offered by us at per doz. 34s." Ptfs. sold two distinct classes of port wine, one a superior wine & the other an inferior & cheaper wine. In both cases, with a few exceptions, the wine was sold by them in the cask. Ptfs. alleged that defts. were passing off ptfs.' inferior wine as & for their superior wine. It was proved that ptfs. sold no wine matured in bottle as to which it could be said that it was part of its description that its usual credit price was 60s. per dozen:—Held: ptfs. having no separate & distinct class of wine to which the description "usual credit price per doz. 60s." was attached, the description in defts.' price list was inapplicable to ptfs.' superior wine, & therefore there was no passing off by defts. of ptfs.' inferior wine as & for their superior wine.—HUNT, ROOPE, TEAGE & Co. v. EHLMANN BROTHERS, [1910] 2 Ch. 198; 79 L. J. Ch. 533; 103 L. T. 91.

description of "Morison's Universal Medicine," which had been prepared & sold by ptfs.; whereas, in truth, ptfs. had not been the preparers, etc., thereof:—Held: on a motion to arrest the judgment, the declaration disclosed a sufficient cause of action.—*MORISON v. A correspondence between the parties was given in evidence, in which pltf. charged defts. with using the mark in question, as being a fraud upon him; defts., in answer, asserted that they had used the mark for many years continuously. This was not so, in fact; but it was shown that the mark had been adopted by them in the execution of orders received from foreign correspondents:—Held: (1) it was properly left to the jury to say; (a) whether defts.' mark bore such a close resemblance to pltf.'s as was calculated to deceive the unwary, & to injure the sale of pltf.'s goods; & (b) whether defts. used the mark with the intention of supplanting the plaintiff, or whether it was done in the ordinary course of business in execution of orders; (2) the notice of the resemblance of the mark given by pltf. to defts., did not, in the absence of proof of any intention to imitate it on the part of the defendants, give pltf. any cause of action. (3) The correspondence was commented upon by the counsel for pltf. in his reply, but not by the judge in summing up:—Held: it was not necessary that it should have been commented upon by the judge.—*CRAWSHAY v. Pltfs. had before action sent persons to defts.' shops to purchase "Carrs' Tapes," & at the trial the case turned on what took place on the occasions of the purchases by the persons so sent. 1301. —.]—Pltfs., who were pen manufacturers, alleged that defts., also manufacturers of pens, had colourably imitated certain pens & pen boxes of pltfs. with a view to defts.' pens & boxes being confused with & passed off as the pens & boxes of pltfs., & asked for an injunction. Pltfs.' pens in respect of which the claim was made were:—(a) No. 335 & No. 341, which they alleged had been imitated by defts.' "Terranova" & "President" pens, on which those numbers respectively were stamped & as to which a particular fraud in respect of an order from the Argentine was alleged; (b) the "Balance Spring Pen," No. 120, by defts.' "Spring Balance," No. 326, No. 01552, & "Superior" pens; & (c) "Universal School Pen" by the defts.' "University School Pen." Pltfs. made similar allegations in respect of defts.' boxes for pens in each of the three classes except No. 01552. Defts., while denying any imitation, relied on pltfs.' laches & acquiescence, & the fact that their pens & pen boxes had been wrongly described as "Patent" when no Patent existed in respect of them. Each of defts.' pens in question was of the same shape as the corresponding pen of pltfs., but the shapes & distinguishing numbers were common to the trade as was the name "Universal School Pen":—Held: as no characteristic of pltfs.' pens had been improperly adopted by defts. in the case of the "Terranova" or "President" pens with a view to leading purchasers to believe that those pens were of pltfs.' manufacture, the mere user of the same numbers did not render those pens of defts. a colourable imitation of pltfs.' No. 335 & No. 341 pens, & on the pens alone pltfs.' case failed; (2) as regards No. 335 & No. 341 pltfs. had not established their charge of fraud & dishonesty, & upon the question whether the boxes supplied by defts. were in fact colourable imitations of pltfs.' box No. 341, there had been no such appropriation by defts. for their boxes No. 335 & No. 341 of pltfs.' materials as to amount to an actionable wrong; (3) as to defts.' pens in Classes (b) & (c) respectively, no case of actual deception having been proved & long user of defts.' pens & labels having been shown, the points of difference between pltfs.' boxes & defts.' far outweighed the points of similarity from the use in combination of an old fashioned box, an orange label & in the case of boxes in Class 2 a blue band, & defts.' boxes were not colourable imitations of the pltfs.' boxes; (4) had pltfs. made out a case of colourable imitation, the defence founded on the use of the words "Patent" & "Patented," being a collateral representation only, would not have disentitled pltfs. to the relief sought.—*PERRY & Co. Dft. sold the goods to a wholesale customer, with the assurance, given, as he said, without knowledge of any misrepresentation, that they were of pltf.'s make, & invoiced them to the customer under the description of certain numbers, which pltf. had adopted & exclusively used in order to designate his particular manufacture:—Held: there was not such a degree of wilful misrepresentation on the part of deft. as would justify the ct. in granting an injunction, & bill dismissed, but without costs.—*AINSWORTH v. 1310. —[—] (1) On a proceeding for an injunction to restrain a trader from selling goods in packets got up as a colourable imitation of plffs.' goods, if a fraudulent intent is not proved, it is necessary to show by positive evidence that some person has been deceived. It is not enough to call evidence that in the opinion of the witnesses purchasers might be deceived.

(2) Whether a customer would be likely to be deceived is not a proper question to put to a witness, for it is for the ct. & not for the witness to decide, after inspection of the exhibits & paying regard to the evidence, whether a customer would be likely to be deceived by the make-up of goods.

(3) Where an action is brought to restrain a colourable imitation of the make-up of goods, it must be proved beyond question that the goods are so got up as to be calculated to deceive. (2) In a case, however, where the mark consisted of a label in a certain form, & it was shown that in very many instances labels the same as or similar to it might be sold for a legitimate purpose, the ct., in the absence of any proof of actual fraud, refused to restrain the printing & sale of such labels until the manufacturer, who alleged that they were used for a fraudulent purpose, had established his case by an action at law.—FARINA v. The specimen so deposited was undyed, & the selvage was white, the warp being white cotton & the woof white mohair, & nearly in the middle of the selvage was a compound warp thread composed of a thread of white cotton & a thread of Turkey red cotton twisted together.

When the goods were dyed black the cotton threads took the dye imperfectly, so that the warp threads in the selvage became grey, while the woof became black, so as to make the selvage dark grey, with a dark red mottled line running along it. Defts. sold black mohair goods with a dark grey selvage of nearly the same shade as that of pltf's., with a twisted thread running along its inner edge, which thread was originally white, red, & yellow, but in the course of dyeing the white became dark grey, & the yellow a dark olive, which could hardly be distinguished. Pltfs. sought to restrain the sale of these goods as an infringement, & moved for an injunction. There was evidence that the selvage, though not actually white, was what was known in the trade as a white selvage:—Held: the principles according to which the ct. acts in preventing a man from passing off his goods as those of another are not altered by the Trade Marks Registration Act, 1875 (c. 91), & the question could not be disposed of by simple inspection of the patterns without considering whether the selvage was not according to the understanding of the trade, a white selvage, & if it was, then whether the differences in quality & position of defts.' mottled thread were sufficient to distinguish defts.' goods from those of pltf's., so as to prevent purchasers from being misled, & as there was a conflict of evidence on these points the motion must stand over till the trial, defts. undertaking to keep an account.—*MITCHELL v. 1322. —[J.—At the trial of an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from passing off their goods as those of pltf's.' manufacture, the judge nonsuited pltf's., who admitted that they could not prove an intention to mislead, nor that anyone had, in fact, been misled. On appeal the nonsuit was set aside, & a new trial ordered on the ground that in such an action it was only necessary to prove that defts.' goods were so marked, made up, or described as to be calculated to mislead, & that there was evidence on which this question might have been left to the jury.

If a person sells his goods with the intention of deceiving purchasers, of inducing them to believe his goods are the goods of another, this is actionable, & entitles the latter to recover nominal damages, even though no special damage is proved. If an article has acquired a distinctive meaning in the trade, connecting it with a particular person's manufacture, & another so advertises, or describes, or makes up his goods as to lead purchasers to believe, or to create a probability of their believing, that they are buying the goods of the former, when, in fact, they are buying the goods of the latter, & this though there is no intention to deceive & no special damage proved, a ct. of equity will grant relief by way of injunction. The fraudulent intention is essential in the first case; it is unnecessary in the second.—REDDAWAY v. BENTHAM HEMP-SPINNING CO., [1892] 2 Q. B. 639; 67 L. T. 301; 8 T. L. R. 734; 36 Sol. S. subsequently sold lemonade powder in penny packets with a somewhat similar band label printed in gold on white glazed paper. O.'s labels had "Eiffel Tower" on them. S.'s labels had not these words or anything like them. C. commenced an action against S. to restrain him from selling his packets, as being liable to be passed off as pltf.'s packets. No other packets of lemonade powder were proved at the trial with labels in white & gold except one, which was discontinued after the commencement of the action on pressure by pltf. Two other penny packets of lemonade powder were proved to have been on the market before pltf.'s, one only having a band label:—Held: pltf. had not established that deft.'s packets were liable to be passed off as pltf.'s.—*CLARK v. 1327. —[J.—H. & S. took over in 1891 the business of The Lion Soap Co., & subsequently sold "Red Lion Soap," "Golden Lion Soap," & "Lion Carbolic Soap," the first in large quantities. They were the owners of several registered trade marks, one being the word "Lion," & the others comprising the device of a lion, but they did not use any of their trade marks as such upon their soap wrappers. Their soaps became known as "Lion Soaps." K., a limited co., who dealt in arms & ammunition, & had registered & used for such goods the trade mark of a lion's head began to sell soap in four different wrappers, unlike H. & S.'s wrappers, but having thereon the representation of a lion's head in several places, & in some cases with the words "Trade Mark" attached. K.'s name was prominent on their wrappers. An action was brought by H. & S. against K. to restrain them from infringing pltf.'s trade marks, & to restrain them from selling soap in wrappers or boxes bearing the device of a lion or a lion's head, & from using the device of a lion & the word lion in the course of their trade in soap:—Held: pltf's. had not established a case of infringement of trade mark, but were entitled to an injunction to restrain defts. from selling, or offering for sale, soap in the wrappers complained of, or so as to induce the belief that defts.' soaps were manufactured by pltf's.—*HODGSON & SIMPSON v. During the last five years the whole of the tins so imported had been bought by a wholesale firm carrying on business in London. The assocn. brought an action against C. & Co., of Liverpool, who were importing into England salmon in tins which in general appearance resembled pltf's. tins, & had a red deer's head in the place where the moose's head appeared on pltf's. tins. Pltf's. moved for an interlocutory injunction, which defts. resisted mainly on the ground of delay; but defts. also contended that as they were selling only in Liverpool & Manchester there was no danger of their tins being sold for plfts.' The tins complained of had arrived in England shortly before the motion was heard, & some of them had been sold:—Held: on comparison of the labels, infringement of trade mark was not established, but the get up of defts.' tins was such as to deceive an unwary purchaser, & on the balance of convenience & inconvenience, an interlocutory injunction ought to be granted to restrain defts. from selling the unsold portion of the tins which they had imported.—*ALASKA PACKERS' ASSOCN. v. 1332. —[—]—B. & S., plfts., distillers & wine & spirit merchants, registered in 1879, a trade mark No. 20,505 in class 43 for fermented liquors & spirits, including liqueurs, as having been used for twenty-five years prior to 1879. The mark comprised a cat with one paw uplified standing on a barrel placed on its bilge. Sweetened gin, one of the articles sold by them, had long been known as "Old Tom," & with the mark they associated those words. In addition to selling gin they in 1893 began to sell a liqueur called "Sloe Gin" under their mark with suitable letterpress. Deft. H., in Nov. 1899, commenced to sell sloe gin under a label containing thereon a cat looking out of a barrel with the words "Cat Brand" on a scroll underneath it. No manufacturer's name appeared on the label, but there were the words, "Specially prepared & bottled for A. C. Huddart." H. obtained the article bottled & labelled from M. D. & co. M. D. & co., in response to a letter of complaint addressed to H., accepted the responsibility, gave H. an indemnity, claimed that the label complained of was their ordinary label used by them in their trade since 1876, & that it had been adapted for sloe gin by the addition of suitable letterpress. In 1887 M. D. & co. had applied to register a trade mark consisting of a cat & barrel. The application was refused on the ground that the mark was calculated to deceive. They, however, continued to use the mark, & placed upon their label the word "Registered." It was suggested by them, in answer to plfts.' inquiries, that this meant copyright registered. No registration, however, anterior in date to Feb. 4, 1899, was produced at the trial. M. D. & co., who were not defts., sought to prove that a cat & barrel label was common to the spirit trade, & that plfts., with knowledge of its use, had not been vigilant. They contended also that at the date of registration plfts. did not manufacture "Sloe Gin," & that they could not claim the exclusive use of the mark for all articles in the class. Plfts. contended that M. D. & co.'s user had been acquired in fraud of them by the use of the word "Registered"; & there was no satisfactory evidence of the user of similar marks; & claimed that they, plft., had acquired an exclusive reputation for goods of the same description as gin under the designation "Cat Brand" or "Cat & Barrel Brand":—Held: the label complained of was an infringement of plfts.' registered trade mark, & also was calculated to mislead & to induce the belief that goods so labelled were the manufacture of plfts. An injunction was granted.—BOORD & SON v. HUPDART (1903), 89 L. T. 718; 20 T. L. R. 142; 48 Sol. Jo. 143; 21 R. P. C. 149.

1333. —[—]—Plfts. in Jan. 1902, commenced to make & sell materials for the repair of pneumatic tyres packed in tin boxes of a certain colour, shape & design. They claimed that, until the wrongful acts of deft., such boxes were used exclusively by them. In 1903 deft. sold inferior materials for the same purpose in boxes closely resembling those of plfts.:—Held: (1) there was an intention to imitate; (2) intention to deceive might be inferred from the circumstances of the case although no case of actual deception was proved; (3) deft.'s boxes were calculated to deceive. An injunction was granted; but no Order was made for the delivery up of boxes which offended against the injunction because plfts. had neglected to take action for six months after they became aware of the imitation.—COUNTY CHEMICAL CO., LTD. v. FRANKENBURG (1904), 21 R. P. C. 722.

1334. —[—]—S., a limited co., sold soda water in bottles with a neck label round them, the body of the label being of chocolate colour, with a white border & a red medallion in the centre of the label. G. subsequently sold soda water in bottles with a somewhat similar neck label round them of the same colour, & with a central red medallion. S.'s labels had "Schweppes' Soda Water" printed on them in white characters. G.'s had "Gibbens' Soda Water." The medallions in the centre also differed:—Held: a fraudulent intention on the part of deft. ought not to be presumed, & deft.'s labels were not calculated to mislead.—*SCHWEPES, LTD. v. 1335. —[—]—The B.S.A., Ltd., manufactured & sold parts & accessories including spanners, & put upon them the letters B.S.A. & these letters had become associated with the co. & its goods. On its spanners, however, the letters did not appear alone, but in conjunction with a trade mark consisting of three filed rifles. The co. brought an action for passing off against a firm which had made spanners with the letters "B.S.A." on them, meaning, as they said "Best All-Round Spanners." They discontinued so doing before action, but claimed a right to do so. It was contended for defts. that the articles could not be mistaken when compared; that there was no evidence that plfts.' spanners were ordered as "B.S.A." Spanners; & that there was no probability of confusion. No actual deception was proved :—Held : although no deliberate intention to deceive had been established, the letters "B.S.A." were calculated to cause defts.' goods to be confused with pltf's.—BIRMINGHAM SMALL ARMS CO., LTD. v. WEBB & CO. (1906), 24 R. P. C. 27.

Defts. were the agents in this country of one Miesse & were selling motor cars as "Miesse Petrol Cars."

Pltf's. moved for an interlocutory injunction :—Held : having regard to the difference in the goods no passing-off had been established.—TURNER'S MOTOR MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. MIESSE PETROL CAR SYNDICATE, LTD. (1907), 24 R. P. C. 531.

The co. brought an action for infringement of trade mark & for passing off; the complaint being founded on the sale of "Colonial" golf balls by defts. The "Colonial" balls were sold at 1s. & the "Colonel" at 2s. & 2s. 6d. There was evidence adduced by defts. to show that no confusion was likely on account of the difference in the names & also in the price :—Held : the words "Colonel" & "Colonial" could not readily be mistaken the one for the other; in the name up & concomitants of their sale defts.' balls were essentially distinct from pltf's.; pltf's. had not proved confusion; it was impossible in the absence of gross fraud on the part of the vendors, for which defts. would not be responsible that their balls could be passed off as pltf's.; defts. had not been guilty of passing off, nor had they infringed pltf's. trade mark.—*ST. In 1901 deft. commenced to use for packets of ground rice a label which pltf's. considered to be so similar to theirs in the combination of the colours that they complained of it as an infringement & deft. withdrew the label. In 1905 deft. commenced to sell semolina in packets & adopted a label which pltf's., who only became aware of its use in 1909, contended was practically a copy of the one withdrawn in 1901, & was an infringement of their rights :—Held : the label issued by deft. was calculated to mislead purchasers & an injunction was granted.—*WRIGHT, CROSSLEY & CO. v. 1342. —[—]—P., the owner of Letters Patent for improvements in tobacco pipes, granted to A. F. & co. a sole & exclusive licence for the manufacture of such goods as were the subject of the invention, & at the same time handed over to them a letter from Sir M. M. which referred to the invention in terms of approbation. A facsimile copy of this letter appeared on all the boxes used by A. F. & co. Some time after the expiry of the patent P. commenced to manufacture & used a get-up similar to that which A. F. & co. had adopted from the first. A. F. & co. brought an action against P. to restrain him from passing off, & P. counterclaimed to restrain A. F. & co. from using the letter, which he alleged was only intended to be used during the continuance of the licence & had not been an absolute gift to A. F. & co.; & he also alleged he had invented the get up at the time the licence was granted :—Held : the get-up used by P. was calculated to deceive, & there was no copyright in the letter, the substance of which might be used by any one. An injunction was granted.—ADOLPH FRANKAU & CO., LTD. v. PFLUEGER (1910), 28 R. P. C. 130.

1343. —[—]—In 1900 pltf's., an American firm, commenced to sell on the English market hooks & eyes affixed to cards on the top of which was printed the word "Mutual." At the bottom of the card appeared the words "Rust? Never!" To an ordinary person the name would appear to be distinctive. Pltf's. name was printed in large letters on the back of the card, but pltf's. attached no importance to this. In 1905, pltf's. commenced to sell to one firm similar cards having the name of "Welbeck" instead of "Mutual." In 1908 defts., an English firm, at the suggestion of a person who had formerly been employed by pltf's., commenced to sell hooks & eyes of the same type, on similar cards, each card having printed on it at the top the word, "Climax," & conspicuously at the bottom the words "British Make." It was found that defts. object in this was to gain whatever advantage there might be in selling English as opposed to foreign goods. The evidence showed that hooks & eyes were generally asked for by name, sometimes by reference to the words "Rust? Never!" sometimes by reference to the white card. Prior to 1905, hooks & eyes had been sold in bulk, but generally by the pound weight & in boxes. In that year pltf's. commenced to sell them in packets or cartons each containing a great gross. At each end of the packet they printed a description of the goods, e.g. "white brass," the trade or standard number of the hook; a picture of the hook or eye; the words "One great gross," & at the bottom, the words "Made in U.S.A." At first the carton bore pltf's. name, but this was dropped in 1907.

In 1909 defts. copied pltf's. carton in every material respect, except that the words "Made in England" appeared instead of "Made in U.S.A." Pltf's. claimed novelty (a) in the use of cartons for hooks & eyes; (b) in the marking of the carton at both ends; & (c) in the marking of the carton itself instead of attaching a label :—Held : purchasers who asked for "Mutual" or for cards with the words "Rust? Never!" could not be deceived by the "Climax" cards, & those who asked for white cards who were familiar with "Mutual" could not be deceived into believing that "Climax" were "Mutual," having regard especially to the prominence given by defts. to the words "British Make," & the claim for passing off by means of the cards failed; although there was novelty as regards the sales in bulk in points (b) & (c) there was nothing distinctive of pltf's. goods in their get up, inasmuch as pltf's. cartons did not bear their name, & no purchaser would believe that in purchasing hooks & eyes so put up in bulk he was getting goods of a particular maker, & this claim for passing off also failed.—DE LONG HOOK & EYE CO. v. NEWBY BROTHERS, LTD. (1911), 29 R. P. C. 49.

1344. —J.—Re "CARVINO" TRADE MARK, No. 1203, ante.

1345. —J.—Pltfs.' predecessor in business took out a patent, which was revoked before pltfs. took over the business, for parcelling up blue or other colour in a porous cloth or bag with a handle attached to it, so that the colour could be dissolved in water without staining the hands of the operator. During the continuance of the patent & for eighteen years after its revocation pltfs. & their predecessor in business sold laundry blue put up in a calico bag with a wooden stick attached to it of the kind shown in the drawings annexed to the specifications. These bags bore no name, but the get-up, of which the stick was the distinctive feature, had become identified in the mind of the public with pltfs.' goods. Defts. exactly imitated the get up of pltfs.' goods, except that they attached to the bags a label bearing their name. Pltfs. moved for an injunction to restrain defts. from passing off their laundry blue as pltfs.' by imitating the get-up of pltfs.' goods, but they disclaimed any monopoly in the use of any stick for the get-up for laundry blue:—Held: defts. were not entitled to appropriate pltfs.' get-up, either on the ground of the abortive patent or on the ground that the stick was an article of utility; defts.' get-up was calculated to deceive, the addition of the label, in the circumstances, not being a sufficient distinction; & defts. ought to be restrained by injunction.

If the only question were how far defts.' goods were likely to be mistaken for pltfs.' by the wholesale & retail dealers I think there would be a difficulty in suggesting that defts. had not sufficiently distinguished their goods from those of pltfs., for those connected with the trade have the requisite trade knowledge to protect them. Notwithstanding this, it may well be that purchasers from the retail trade, that is to say, the public buying over the counter, may be deceived; they have not the requisite trade knowledge to protect them & in this case the ultimate purchasers are those who are of final importance to pltfs. (LORD GORELL).—WILLIAM EDGE & SONS, LTD. v. WILLIAM NICCOLLS & SONS, LTD., [1911] A. C. 693; 80 L. J. Ch. 744; 105 L. T. 459; 27 T. L. R. 555; 55 Sol. Jo. 737, II. J.

1347. —J.—Pltf. had since 1912 sold tobacco pipes of his own manufacture, marked on the mouthpiece with a white spot with the addition of the words "Dunhill, London," & had sold very large quantities of pipes & other smokers' requisites so marked. The minimum price of pltf.'s pipes was £1 1s. Evidence was given that a white spot on a pipe was identified in the minds of the public with pltf.'s goods, & that pltf.'s pipes were asked for as "white spot pipes" & sometimes, more particularly by ladies, as "spot pipes." The business of deft. firm was purchased in 1901 by J. who had continuously carried on business under the firm name since that date. In May, 1920, deft. registered the name "Barbic" as a trade mark, & in Sept. of that year deft. put upon the market a tobacco pipe manufactured for him & marked upon the mouthpiece with a red spot, & also marked on the stem, on one side with the word "Barbic" & on the other with the name & address of deft. firm. These pipes were sold at 12s. 6d. Pltf. alleged that the spot on deft.'s pipe, though of a different colour from pltf.'s spot, was calculated to deceive & brought an action for passing off. At the trial pltf. further alleged that the red spot had been adopted by J. with a fraudulent intention:—Held: (1) a red spot was placed on deft.'s pipes with no thought or intention of confusing deft.'s pipes with pltf.'s pipes; (2) the identification mark of pltf.'s pipes was not a spot but a white spot; no clear case had been established of an intending purchaser of a pltf.'s pipe finding himself deceived by reason of the red spot into buying a deft.'s pipe; (3) a trap display in a tobacconist's window consisting of three of pltf.'s pipes & three of deft.'s pipes, each pipe bearing a similar price ticket, except as to price, which led to a customer asking for a 12s. 6d. Dunhill, was too well baited to assist in proving deception; pltf. never having put any spot on his pipes but a white spot & the only point of similarity between pltf.'s & deft.'s pipes being a spot, the evidence failed to justify the claim that, where the essence of a mark of origin is its particular colour, a similar mark of a wholly different colour would indicate the same origin, & the action must be dismissed with costs.—DUNHILL v. BARTLETT & BICKLEY (1922), 39 R. P. C. 426.

1348. —J.—In 1907 pltfs.' predecessor in business registered as a trade mark the number "999" in respect of cigarettes. At the same time he also registered the numbers "111," "222," & "555" for the same goods. Pltfs. were the registered proprietors of all these marks, & also of marks which included the numbers "333," "444," "666," & "777," but in each case with a disclaimer in respect of the numbers. The number "999," as also "555," was used for certain of the "State Express" cigarettes sold by pltfs., such cigarettes being Virginia cigarettes, "999" being for a higher priced cigarette than "555." In 1922 deft. co. decided to bring out, & subsequently sold, Turkish cigarettes on the boxes & packets of which they put the number "99" & "double nine." The boxes & packets bore prominently the name "Lucana" & defts.' name & registered trade mark, & the get-up of them was quite different from that of pltfs.' boxes & packets of their "999" cigarettes, & the price was considerably less. Defts. had had for some time previously on the market Virginia cigarettes bearing the number "66" & the word "Lucana." Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for infringement of their trade mark "999" & for passing off. It was contended for pltfs. that they were the only firm in the tobacco trade that used a series of recurring numerals & that any number consisting of recurring nines would lead to deception & confusion, & that their "999" cigarettes had come to be so asked for by customers that confusion would result. It was admitted that the use of numbers was common in the trade, & there was evidence of the use of a single "9" (inter alia) by a co. closely associated with defts., & of several instances of double recurring numerals, including in one case the number "99." At the trial pltfs. alleged a dishonest intention on the part of defts.:—Held: there was no ground for the charge of dishonest intention; the idea of pltfs.' trade mark was, at most, triplication & there was no infringement of pltfs.' trade mark "999"; pltfs.' "999" cigarettes were usually asked for as "State Express" cigarettes with a reference to the number & there was no short term without any reference to "State Express" by which those cigarettes were generally known to the public; & there was no risk of deception or confusion.—ARDATH TOBACCO CO., LTD. v. SANDORIDES (W.), LTD. (1924), 42 R. P. C. 50.

1350. —[—]—In 1926 plffs. registered a trade mark consisting of the words "Silent Knight" for cooking & heating apparatus in class 18. Later in 1926, defts. applied to register a trade mark consisting of the device of a chess knight for the same class, with the words "Red Knight," but on plffs. objecting, the application was amended by striking out those words, plffs. understanding, that it was defts.' intention not to use the words "Red Knight." In an action for infringement of plffs.' trade mark & passing off, plffs. alleged that defts. had, since registration of their trade mark, advertised their gas stoves in connection with the words "Red Knight," & they moved to expunge defts.' trade mark. Defts. gave notice of motion to expunge plffs.' trade mark, but that was not pressed at the trial. There was evidence of actual confusion of the names "Silent Knight" & "Red Knight":—Held: plffs.' trade mark had been infringed, defts. had intended plffs. to understand that defts. would discontinue the use of the words "Red Knight" in connection with their stoves, & defts.' device & the method in which they used it were calculated to deceive. Injunctions restraining infringement & passing-off were granted.—FORTH & (LYDE & SUNNYSIDE) IRON CO'S., LTD. v. SUGG (WILLIAM) & CO., LTD. (1928), 45 R. P. C. 382.

The polish acquired a high reputation. No other polish in Bombay had a mark similar to the two red medals, & W.'s polish became known to the natives as "Lal Mohur" or "Lal Chap." "Lal Mohur" meaning red medal: "Lal Chap" meaning "red stamp." The two terms in the Bombay market came to denote W.'s polish. T. having used a label on polish different from W.'s, except in having two red medals, was restrained by injunction. G. who had first attempted to obtain orders for polish with a white label but unsuccessfully, then imitated T.'s label, & exported polish to Bombay with a label bearing a balloon & two red medals. W. commenced an action against G. to restrain him from exporting polish not plffs.' as "Lal Mohur," & from so labelling his polish that same might be passed off as "Lal Mohur." Evidence was adduced by plffs. as to the deception caused by G.'s new label:—Held: though deft.'s label placed side by side with plffs.' would not be likely to deceive most Englishmen, it would enable defts.' polish to be passed off on the natives as & for the plffs.' polish, & the defts.' polish had actually been so passed off & sold as "Lal Mohur" & "Lal Chap," that the user of this label was fraudulent on the part of defts.; it was no argument for defts. to say that plffs. were seeking to obtain a monopoly for red marks of every kind 1355. —[—]—Plffs. have the trade merit, whatever it may be, of first putting "Sparkling Lime Wine" on the market; & they say, & there is no reason to doubt it, that they have got together a very considerable trade in the sale of this beverage. The mode in which they have to shape their case, speaking of the motion, is by saying that defts. have imitated what is commonly termed, & after all, I do not know a better term than the popular one, their "get-up" so as to be calculated to deceive the persons buying, which would really mean the ultimate customers, into the belief that the goods which defts. offer for sale are the goods of plffs. (CHITTY, L.J.).

You have to consider what is likely to be done in the ordinary course of business by the retail dealer . . . who will put anything down on the counter before a customer in such a manner that the customer does not always get the opportunity of examining. The colour of the cloths was buff. Defts. made & sold polishing cloths for spectacles & eyeglasses of a colour similar to plffs. & with printing in brown ink in a centre square & alleged that these features were common to the trade & were adopted by their printers without any special instructions from them.

Pltfs. contended that, although they had no monopoly in the colour & size of their cloths, yet it was incumbent on any one who adopted their size & colour to take care that they sufficiently distinguished their goods:—Held: there had been no attempt by defts. to produce a get-up for the purpose of deceiving, & there was no evidence of anybody having been deceived.

In my opinion, pltfs. have entirely failed to make out any case of a get-up calculated to deceive the public. The case does not stop there. The general public is not really in this case at all. Nobody pretends that any member of the general public was deceived. The only market which we have to deal with in this case is the market between the producers, in the one case the pltfs., in the other case the defts., & the opticians, & I cannot see one atom of evidence that, in the way in which defts. sell their goods, there was any possibility of deception of the opticians to whom they sold them. In most cases we do not look to that in a passing off case; we look to the trade with the ultimate purchasers, with the members of the general public. But this is a case where that element does not come in (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—JONES BROTHERS, LTD. v. ANGLO-AMERICAN OPTICAL CO. (1912), 29 R. P. C. 361, C. A.

Salmon in tins bearing the label had been for many years imported into & sold in the United Kingdom. During the last five years the whole of the tins so imported had been bought by a wholesale firm carrying on business in London. The assocn. brought an action against C. & co., of Liverpool, who were importing into England salmon in tins which had a red deer's head in a disc in the place where the moose's head appeared on pltfs.' tins with the words "Deerhead Brand" & the name of the packers, with other features which were common to the trade. Pltfs. relied both on trade mark & passing off:—Held: there was to the eye no probability of defts.' tin deceiving, & there was no evidence that it would deceive an intelligent customer who knew the distinguishing features of pltfs.' tin.—ALASKA PACKERS' ASSOCN. v. (a) Advertisements.

1361. Advertisement calculated to deceive—By proprietor of one of two rival works.]—Where there are two rival works, the ct. will restrain the proprietor of one of them from advertising it in terms calculated to induce the public to believe that it is the other work, but will not restrain him from publishing an advertisement tending to disparage that other work.—SEBLEY v. FISHER (1841), 11 Sim. 581; 10 L. J. Ch. 274; 59 E. R. 998, L. C.

1362. Imitation of method of advertising—Use of similar phrase—User established before plaintiff's user.]—A firm of boot manufacturers alleged that they had invented & used as their trade mark the phrase, "Fair wear or a free pair," & they commenced an action against a firm of retailers of boots & shoes, complaining of the use by defts. of the same phrase in connection with the sale of boots & shoes, & claiming an injunction against its use & against defts. representing their business to be connected with pltfs.' business:—Held: the evidence established user of the phrase prior to pltfs.' user by other persons. The action was dismissed with costs.—MIDGLEY (S. T.) & SONS, LTD. v. MORRIS & COWDERY (1904), 21 R. P. C. 314.

1363. — Similarity of form.]—Pltf. had devised a novel but unregistered scheme of advertising the sale of his packets of garden seeds by inserting in numerous newspapers a "stereotyped" combination of lengthy letterpress surrounded by pictures of objects, any one of which he offered as a premium to purchasers. Dft. issued advertisements in precisely similar form, including the pictures & the arrangement, excepting that he substituted a new name for the seeds & a slightly different condition for earning the premium, & put his trading name at the foot of the advertisements. In an action for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: dft. had done nothing misleading which could injure any property in pltf., so that no injunction could be granted.—WERTHEIMER v. STEWART, COOPER & CO. (1906), 23 R. P. C. 481.

(b) Goods Passed Off as Superior Class.

1364. Sale of inferior class of goods as superior class.]—Pltfs., who were distillers of Scotch whisky, & sold a whisky of a special quality known as "Teachers' Highland Cream Whisky," brought an action against defts., who owned or had the control of a large number of public houses, & alleged that defts. had sold inferior whisky, either of pltfs.' manufacture or of other persons, as "Teachers' Highland Cream Whisky," & claimed an injunction & other relief:—Held: on the evidence, although it was not established that defts. had sold as Teachers' whisky, whisky not emanating from Teachers', yet it was proved that defts. had sold inferior whisky as Teachers' better class whisky, & an injunction & an inquiry as to damages were granted.—TEACHER v. LEVY (1905), 23 R. P. C. 117.

Annotation:—Distd. Hunt, Roope, Teague v. Ehrmann, [1901] 2 Ch. 198.

1365. —.]—Pltfs., who were manufacturers of footballs & other athletic goods, sued defts. for passing off certain of pltfs.' old & discarded footballs as their new & improved balls. It appeared that certain balls manufactured by pltfs. in 1910 sealed by the name of "orb" had been sold by them to a firm of waste rubber merchants on account of their being considered unsatisfactory & a new & improved ball was made & sold by pltfs. as the "Improved Orb." Defts. purchased from the waste rubber merchants the discarded balls & advertised & sold them under the name of "Improved Orb." Defts. admitted they were wrong in describing them as "Improved Orb" & withdrew the advertisement; for a time they advertised & sold them as "orb" balls & claimed the right to do so. At the trial it was held by SARGANT, J., that defts. had not by their second & corrected advertisement shown to the public that the balls which were then advertised were different from those to which the first advertisement would be taken to refer & that the second advertisement was therefore likely to deceive. An injunction in a special form was granted & an inquiry as to damages was ordered & plffs. were given the costs of the action. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal. It was held that plffs. were not entitled to an injunction or damages. The appeal was allowed with costs. Plffs. appealed to the House of Lords. It was held that plffs. had established a case of misrepresentation calculated to produce damage & that they were entitled to an injunction & to an inquiry as to damages at their own risk. The appeal was allowed with costs & judgment of SARGANT, J., was restored. On the inquiry it was found that plffs. were entitled to £5,000 in respect of their loss of profit on sales of "Sewn Orb," or improved orb, footballs which would have been effected but for the acts of defts. the repetition whereof was restrained by the order & to £2,000 for injury to plffs.' reputation. Defts. moved that the finding might be varied or discharged & plffs. moved that it might be adopted. It was held on the hearing of the motions by YOUNGER, J., that the alleged wrong consisted in advertising an article sold by plffs. at a price less than they charged for it & was not actionable in the absence of fraud, that the alleged loss of profit even if proved was not recoverable, that if any damages were recoverable on that head the measure was the costs to plffs. when defts.' advertisements were published of issuing counter advertisements & that £100 was a sufficient payment on that head, that the alleged injury to plffs.' reputation was not within the scope of the action & had not been proved & that as defts. had paid £250 into ct. they were entitled to the costs of the inquiry & motions. Plffs. appealed:—Held: (1) defts. were liable for all loss actually sustained by plffs. which was the natural & direct consequence of the unlawful act of deft. including any loss of trade actually suffered by plffs. either directly from the acts complained of or properly attributable to injury to plffs.' reputation, business, goodwill & trade & business connection caused by the acts complained of; (2) the assessment of damages on the basis of the cost of counter advertisement was erroneous & did not give plffs. all to which they were entitled; but the claim made by plffs. was extravagant & absurd; plffs. had failed to prove any damages beyond £250 & the damages should be assessed at that sum.—SPALDING (A. G.) & BROTHERS v. GAMAGE (A. W.), LTD. (1918), 35 R. P. C. 101.

1366. Sale of rejected goods as new & improved.]—SPALDING (A. G.) & BROTHERS v. GAMAGE (A. W.), LTD., No. 1365, ante.

1367. Sale of reconditioned goods as new.]—The Gillette Safety Razor Co. sold safety razor blades under a well-known get-up, & it was a part of their policy that their blades should not be re-sharpened, owing to the fact that re-sharpening them would not re-condition them. F. advertised & sold as genuine blades of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. blades of that co.'s manufacture which either had been used or were by reason of age & neglect unusable, & put up such blades for sale in the Gillette Safety Razor Co.'s well-known wrappers & boxes. The Gillette Safety Razor Co. commenced an action for passing off against F.; & as he was an infant, & took no steps to obtain the appointment of a guardian ad litem, on the application of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. the Official Solicitor was appointed as guardian ad litem. Plffs. applied by motion for an interim injunction, & by consent the motion was treated as the trial of the action:—Held: plffs. were entitled to an injunction restraining the sale or passing off of second hand, used or unusable blades as genuine blades.—GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR CO. & GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR, LTD. v. FRANKS (1924), 40 T. L. R. 606; 41 R. P. C. 499.

1368. Sale of unusable goods—Goods unusable by age or neglect.]—GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR CO. & GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR, LTD. v. FRANKS, No. 1367, ante.

1369. Goods must be capable of being defined—Goods for which incriminated article passed off.]—HUNT, ROOPE, TEAGUE & CO. v. EHRLMANN BROTHERS, No. 1289, ante.

1370. Existence of two classes must be proved.]—Mrs. C. J. B., one of plffs. in the action, a composer of songs which had a great reputation & a large sale had composed & caused to be published in the United States in 1896 a song "Write to me often," the English copyright of which had been acquired in 1913 by W. & P., defts. in the action. The song "was considered by her to be without merit." In 1909 she composed another song, "A perfect day," which had achieved great success & for which a large demand had sprung up. Deft. published without plffs.' consent the song "Write to me often" with a title page which was alleged to be an imitation of the distinctive title-page of Mrs. C. J. B., & it was further alleged that defts. by advertising the song "Write to me often" as being "Now ready" represented it to be a new song by her & also as being one of the publications of her co-plffs. who were the holders of a licence from her to publish her musical compositions in the British Empire. Plffs. in a passing off action claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from publishing the song "Write to me often" so as to lead to the belief that it was a new & recent work of Mrs. C. J. B.:—Held: defts. as the owners of the copyright in "Write to me often" were entitled to publish it & offer it for sale as the work of Mrs. C. J. B., the composer, a fact which necessarily qualified & restricted her rights against defts.; plffs. had not alleged & proved what was necessary to be proved in an action for passing off goods of one class or quality for plffs.' goods of another class or quality, i.e. the existence of the two classes of goods & the evidence did not bear out plffs.' suggestion that the get-up of defts.' song "Write to me often" was a colourable imitation of the get-up of "A Perfect Day"; action dismissed with costs.—HARRIS v. WARREN & PHILLIPS (1918), 87 L. J. Ch. 491; 119 L. T. 217; 34 T. L. R. 440; 62 Sol. Jo. 568; 35 R. P. C. 217.

(c) Vehicles.

1371. Omnibus—Use of similar device—Intention to deceive.]—Injunction granted to restrain deft. from running an omnibus having upon it such names, words, & devices as to form a colourable imitation of the words, names, & devices on the omnibuses of plffs.—KNOTT v. view by him of the two articles, such as two rival omnibuses, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 50, r. 4, that deft.'s article is calculated to deceive, is not sufficient by itself to support an injunction. 1379. Use of corks with initials of plaintiff.]—Pltf's., J. H. Todd & W. J. Todd, were the surviving partners in the old firm of Findlater, Mackie, Todd & co., wine & spirit merchants, trading in London. Deft., Henry Newman, traded as a wine & spirit merchant at Bournemouth under the style of Henry Newman & co., having in 1879 purchased the business from his father-in-law, T. Beechey.

Prior to 1879 Beechey had been agent or sole consignee in Bournemouth for the goods supplied by pltf's. firm, & this relation had continued between pltf's. firm & deft. It appeared that about 1879 the father of pltf's., since deceased, had called on Beechey & deft., & had encouraged them to advertise the name of pltf's. firm in pushing the business at Bournemouth for their mutual benefit.

Deft.'s premises, bill heads, letter paper, & delivery books had for many years borne references to pltf's. firm, & it was alleged that his place of business had for many years been known as "Findlater's Corner." There was a gradual falling off in the business done between pltf's. & deft., of which pltf's. complained in 1898, although they had never prior to that date or since given any notice of terminating their connection with deft. Deft. admitted that a substantial number of corks branded "Findlater & Co., Bournemouth," had gone out to his customers in bottles containing goods not supplied by pltf's., & it appeared that in 1898 & 1899 at least twenty-five gross of corks branded on their ends with "F., M., T. & Co." had been ordered by & supplied to deft. There was also some evidence of deft. using labels on which were printed "Findlater, Newman & Co." It appeared that there were three firms in the same line of business at Dublin, Brighton, & Manchester, in the styles of which the name "Findlater" was included:—Held: pltf's. were not entitled to an injunction restraining deft. from using the name "Findlater" in connection with his business, but they were entitled, with respect to the initials "F., M., T. & Co.," the use of which had been discontinued by deft. before the issue of the writ, to a declaration negating deft.'s right to use same & to an account of profits limited in each case to "corks bearing the name or the initials or letters 'F., M., T. & Co.' & used for bottles containing wines or spirits not supplied by pltf's. & limited as regards the account to six years from the date of the writ."—FINDLATER, MACKIE, TODD & CO., LTD. v. NEWMAN (HENRY) & CO. (1902), 19 R. P. C. 235.

1380. Sale of cigars made in distinctive shape.]—A co. which manufactured & dealt in cigars, had acquired a reputation in connection with cigars of a distinctive shape, which consisted in the cigars being flat-ended, & they sold these cigars under the name of "Bull-dog" cigars, & in boxes bearing the word "Bull-dog" & the picture of a bull dog; the cigars themselves had no bands on them. The co. commenced an action against a person who was selling

PART V. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 5.—

1375 i. Taxicabs.]—An action by pltf. co. claiming injunctions to restrain each of defts. from using in their respective businesses as taxi proprietors cabs so painted & got up to resemble those of the pltf. co. & to be calculated to deceive the public:—Held: pltf. co. having established a reputation for a black & white taxicab substantially different in colour scheme & got up from other cabs plying for hire prior to pltf. co.'s incorporation, the cabs of defts. H., S., & N. were got up as so nearly to resemble those of pltf. as to be likely to deceive the public, & injunctions should be granted, although actual instances of deception had not been established in every case; but as to M., although it would appear that in adopting the colour he did for his cab he had in view the possibility that members of the public would be deceived into thinking his to be one of pltf. co.'s cabs, yet there was not such a probability of deception as to render him liable to an injunction.—BLACK & WHITE CABS CO. v. HOGREN, [1927] N. Z. L. R. 535.—N.Z.

1375 ii. ———.]—Applt. co. established a reputation for a taxicab painted black & white, having the colours arranged in a certain definite design. Resp. thereupon in painting his cab adopted a similar design for his cab, with the exception that he used a cream colour, where applt. co. had used white:—Held: granting an injunction restraining resp. from using his cab so painted, he had adopted the colour scheme in question with the intention of passing off his cab as that of applt. co. & his action was calculated to deceive the public.—BLACK & WHITE CABS, LTD. v. MCENEANY, [1927] N. Z. L. R. 802.—N.Z.

1375 iii. ———.]—Pltf. co. which had adopted a certain design of contrasting black & white colours for the painting of its cabs, dissimilar to any previously in use in the city in which it conducted its operations, sought by injunction to restrain defts. from using cabs painted a similar design of contrasting blue & white, on the ground that although the respective cabs might readily be distinguished in daylight, those of defts. were so got up as to be calculated at night to deceive people into believing them pltf's. cabs. No instance of actual deception on defts.' part was proved, nor was any fraudulent intention on their part to mislead the public established:—Held: although the design in the colour adopted by pltf. co. was dissimilar to any other previously in use in the district where it conducted its operations, it was not thereby entitled to a monopoly in the use of dark & light colours similarly arranged, & which had previously been used in the painting of cabs, on the ground that cabs so painted might be mistaken for their cabs at night, & in any event apart from painting, other distinguishing features of defts.' cabs prevented their being confused with those of pltf. by night as well as by day. Furthermore pltf. having in previous proceedings concurred in the painting of defts.' cabs in a particular design & colour now had no ground for complaint.—BLACK & WHITE CABS, LTD. v. NICHOLSON, NICHOLSON v. BLACK & WHITE CABS, LTD., [1928] N. Z. L. R. 273.—N.Z.

*n. Coaching line.]—*Pltf's., by the long continued use of themselves & their predecessors in title, had acquired cigars of the same shape & without bands under the name of "Turnbull" cigars in boxes bearing that word & the picture of a bull thrown down by a man, & claimed an injunction, first, to restrain the sale by deft. of his cigars in his boxes; & secondly, an injunction to restrain him from selling cigars made in pltf.'s distinctive shape without clearly distinguishing his cigars from pltf.'s cigars. Pltfs. moved for an interlocutory injunction to the above effect:—Held: the boxes were sufficiently distinct, but the cigars might be sold apart from the boxes so as to mislead purchasers, & pltfs. were entitled to the second injunction claimed until the trial.—ELLIOTT (R. J.) & Co., LTD. v. HODGSON (1902), 19 R. P. C. 518.

1382. Labels. —[—]—Pltf. invented & sold a medicine under his own name. Deft. also made & sold a similar medicine, & on his labels, he used pltf.'s name & certain certificates given of the efficacy of pltf.'s medicine, in such an ingenious manner, as, prima facie, though not in fact, to appropriate & apply them to his own medicine:—Held: although there were other differences in the mode of selling, the proceeding was wrongful, & deft. was restrained by injunction.—FRANKS v. WEAVER (1847), 10 Beav. 297; 8 L. T. O. S. 510; 50 E. R. 596.

1385. —[—]—(1) Deft. sold tobacco pipes packed in boxes or cases, upon which were labels or descriptions of a similar character to those of pltf., using pltf.'s name as being the real manufacturer, deft. having a person in his employ of that name:—Held: such colourable imitation & use of the labels & descriptions could be restrained by injunction.

(2) Two persons, sons of their father, who had originated the manufacture of such pipes, & designated them as "Southorn's Brosley pipes," on the death of their father, manufactured at Brosley, but at separate establishments, & for their separate benefit, pipes of a like character; one of the brothers instituted a suit to restrain the use of this trade mark, the other declining to join in such suit:—Held: the one brother might alone file a bill for an injunction & account.—SOUTHORN v. REYNOLDS (1865), 12 L. T. 75.

1386. —[—]—B. & co. for many years affixed a label or trade mark to the bottles in which their ale was sold. D. & co. adopted a label bearing a general resemblance to that of B. & co., but differing from it in several particulars. Bill by B. & co. to restrain D. & co. from using such label dismissed with costs.

SECT. 6.—ACTION FOR PASSING OFF.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1387. Inspection of premises—Whether order made ex parte. —[—]—An order to enter for the purpose of inspecting & taking samples under R. S. C., Ord. 52, r. 3, may be made on a ex p. application.—HENNESSY v. BOHMANN, OSBORNE & Co. (1877), 36 L. T. 51; sub nom. HENNESSY v. BOHMANN, OSBORNE & Co., [1877] W. N. 14.

1388. Joinder of plaintiffs—Common cause of action. —R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 1. —[—]—Pltfs., the two Universities of Oxford & Cambridge, claimed an injunction to restrain defts., who were publishers of educational & other words, from publishing & selling books or publications bearing the titles "The Oxford & Cambridge Publications" or "The Oxford & Cambridge Edition," & from using the words "Oxford & Cambridge," so as to lead to the belief that the publications of defts. were publications of the Universities or of either of them, or issued from the University Presses. Defts. had published a series of books bearing the titles complained of by pltfs.:—Held: the action arose out of the same series of transactions; common questions of fact would arise, namely, the fact of publication & the fact that a belief would be induced that the publications of defts. were those of pltfs.; therefore, the conditions mentioned in Stroud v. Lawson, [1898] 2 Q. B. 44, as being necessary to bring a case within the above rule, were fulfilled; & consequently pltfs. were entitled to join in one action.—OXFORD & CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITIES v. GILL (GEORGE) & SONS, [1899] 1 Ch. 55; 68 L. J. Ch. 34; 79 L. T. 338; 47 W. R. 248; 15 T. L. R. 21; 43 Sol. Jo. 27.

1389. Delivery of particulars—Of allegations in statement of claim. —[—]—In an action for passing off pltf. alleged that the cigars sold by them & their predecessors under the name "Marcella" printed on a narrow red band had come to be known as & called by the public by such names as "Little Red Band" cigars & "Red Banders." Upon the application of defts. pltfs. were ordered to give particulars, to the best of their information & belief, of the dates when the cigars in question were first known by the respective names; of the dates when & the names of the persons by whom & to whom defts.' cigars were alleged to have been passed off; of the names of the persons who had applied to defts.' cigars the names alleged by pltfs. to be distinctive of their own; & of the dates when & the names of the persons by whom & to whom the defts.' cigars were being sold & supplied under the names alleged.—*IMPERIAL TOBACCO Co. v. a right of property in the words or name "Cobb & co." as a trade name in connection with a particular coaching line. Defts., a rival coaching firm, started an opposition service on the same line, & used the same name upon their vehicles & in their advertisements. Upon pltf. bringing an action against defts. for an injunction to restrain them from so using such name, defts. justified their use on the ground that the name had become nomen generale in the Australian Colonies to describe the American system of coaching:—Held: pltfs. had not lost the use of the name as a trade name in connection with their particular coaching line, & defts. were restrained from using

1390. — Of defence — Defence merely traversing allegations.]—An action for an injunction to restrain the sale or advertisement of wireless valves under the designation of "Radio Micro" or under any other designation so closely resembling pltf.'s designation as to be calculated to deceive. Pltfs. by their statement of claim alleged that they had long been accustomed to place certain of their valves on the market under the name "Radio Micro"; that the name was well known in the United Kingdom as indicating the goods of pltf's., & that cartons of a distinctive appearance containing their valves & bearing the words "Radio Micro" were well known to the trade & the public as signifying that such goods were the goods of pltf's. Further, that defts. had advertised & sold wireless valves marked "Radio Micro," packed in cartons also marked "Radio Micro," & so closely resembling pltf's. cartons as to be calculated to deceive; that the goods so sold by defts. were not the goods of pltf's., but a fraudulent & obvious imitation thereof. Pltfs. cited an instance of the type of the act complained of. Defts. having by para. 3 of their defence simply denied each & all of those allegations, pltf's. applied that para. 3 of the defence might be struck out, or that, in the alternative, particulars might be delivered as follows:—(a) If it were contended that the words "Radio Micro" were in use by others than pltf's., particulars of such user, stating the name of the person or firm, & the earliest date of such user; (b) If it were contended that pltf's. cartons were not distinctive, particulars of cartons, if any, in use by other firms & relied on by defts. & of the features alleged to be common to the trade, & by whom & when used:—Held: on the footing of the action being one of passing-off, defts.' denial involved no affirmative allegations on their part, & as the onus lay upon pltf's. to establish their allegations, the ct. would not order defts. to deliver particulars of their traverse of those allegations.—LA RADIOTECHNIQUE v. WEINBAUM, [1928] Ch. 1; 97 L. J. Ch. 17; 137 L. T. 638; 71 Sol. Jo. 824; 44 R. P. C. 361.

A. Who may Sue.

1391. Person having no interest.]—(1) A., the inventor of a medicine, employed B., a foreigner residing abroad, to manufacture it for him there, & sold it in England for his own sole profit. A label & seal, denoting that the medicine was manufactured by B. & sold by A., were affixed to each of the bottles in which it was sold. Defts. imitated the labels & seals. Demurrer allowed to a bill to restrain the imitation, & for an account of the sales of the spurious labels & seals, A. having no interest. Mortgage of goodwill & right to trade name — Trade name not used—No allegation of intention to use.]—The mtgee. of stock-in-trade & goodwill, & of the right to use a name, never having used the name & not intending to use the name, cannot obtain an injunction to restrain persons claiming under the mtgor. from using the name.—BEAZLEY v. SOARES (1882), 22 Ch. D. 860; 52 L. J. Ch. 201; 31 W. R. 887.

1395. Foreigner.]—DELONDRE v. SHAW, No. 1391, ante.

1396. — Foreign company trading in England.]—(1) A foreign co. trading in this country is entitled to restrain the use of a name so similar as to be calculated to deceive its customers.

(2) To state that the members of a co. which is pltf. are undischarged bkpts. is irrelevant to the action, & paragraph containing such an allegation will be struck out.—NATIONAL FOLDING BOX & PAPER CO. v. NATIONAL FOLDING BOX CO., LTD. (1894), 43 W. R. 156; 13 R. 60.

1397. — No place of business in England—Goods not sold in this country.]—A foreign manufacturer has a remedy by suit in this country for an injunction & account of profits, against a manufacturer here, who has committed a fraud upon him by using his trade mark, for the purpose of inducing the public to believe that the goods so marked were manufactured by the foreigner. This relief is founded upon the personal injury caused to pltf. by deft.'s fraud, & exists, although pltf. resides & carries on his business in another country, & has no establishment here, & does not even sell his goods in this country.—COLLINS CO. v. BROWN, COLLINS CO. v. COWEN (1857), 3 K. & J. 423; 29 L. T. O. S. 245; 30 L. T. O. S. 62; 3 Jur. N. S. 929; 5 W. R. 676; 69 E. R. 1174.

1398. — Frequent importation of goods.]—A foreign trader who has no English agency, but whose goods are in fact frequently imported into England, has a sufficient English market to enable him to restrain piracy of his trade name.

Where a motor car manufacturing co. was registered in a name colourably resembling that of existing motor car manufacturers with the fraudulent intention of obtaining the benefit of their reputation in that business, the co. & the signatories to the memorandum, who were the only directors & shareholders, were restrained from using the name in connection with that business, & the signatories were further restrained from allowing the co. to remain registered under that name.—*SOCIÉTÉ ANONYME DES ANCIENS ÉTABLISSEMENTS PANHARD ET LEVASSOR v. 1401. Owner of goodwill—Business transferred—Whether transferees necessary parties.]—For many years plffs. manufactured & sold tyres for cycles & motor cycles under the name of "Warwick," & by the year 1905 that name was distinctive & meant to the trade & to the public tyres of their manufacture. In 1905 they transferred their business with the exclusive right to manufacture & sell Warwick tyres to the Dunlop co. for a term of years, but did not assign the goodwill in their trade name of "Warwick" to that co. Plffs. never manufactured or sold tyres for motor cars, nor did the Dunlop co. sell such tyres under the name of "Warwick." Defts. manufactured & sold only tyres for motor cars, & in 1908, the name of their managing director being Warwick, commenced to sell their motor tyres under the name of "Warwick motor tyres." In an action by plffs. to restrain defts. from using the name "Warwick" in connection with the sale of defts.' motor tyres on the ground that such user was calculated to lead the public to believe that defts.' motor tyres were tyres of plffs.' manufacture:—Held: plffs. were entitled to an injunction; plffs. although they were not themselves manufacturing or selling their Warwick tyres, were the proper parties to sue, as they had not parted with the goodwill in their trade name "Warwick," & the Dunlop co. were not necessary parties to the action.

Qu.: whether plff. need prove damage in order to succeed in a passing off action.—WARWICK TYRE CO., LTD. v. NEW MOTOR & GENERAL RUBBER CO., LTD., [1910] 1 Ch. 248; 79 L. J. Ch. 177; 101 L. T. 880.

1402. Sole selling agent—Must show association of goods with himself—Mere allegation of loss of profits insufficient.]—The sole agent for sale of an article made by a particular manufacturer cannot maintain a passing off action against a person who passes off an article made by himself as the article made by that manufacturer merely on the ground that his, the agent's, profits through sale of that article are thereby diminished.

A firm were the sole agents for sale in this country of an article made by a particular manufacturer in the United States. They sold the article just as it was made & got up by that manufacturer, & nothing in the "get-up" of the article as sold by them indicated any association of them or their business with that article. A co. having manufactured & sold articles of the same kind with a "get-up" alleged by the firm to be similar to that of the before-mentioned article as supplied by the manufacturer in the United States, the firm sued that co. for passing off those articles as articles sold by the firm:—Held: they could not maintain such an action against the co.

Semble: if the firm had sold the article under any "get-up" of their own, which the co. had imitated, they might have maintained a passing off action against the co.—DENTAL MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. DE TREX (C.) & CO., [1912] 3 K. B. 76; 81 L. J. K. B. 1162; 107 L. T. 111; 28 T. L. R. 498, C. A.

1403. Importer of goods—Defendant acquiring goods from manufacturer.]—An importer may acquire a valuable reputation for himself & for his wares by his care in selection, or his precautions in transit & storage, or because his local character is such that the article acquires a value by his testimony to its genuineness. But apart from contract or misrepresentation there is nothing to prevent a person from acquiring goods from a manufacturer & selling them in a competition with him, even in a country into which the manufacturer, or his agent, has been the sole importer.

Applts. sought to restrain resps. from selling in India a well known brand of cigarettes which for some years they alone had been importing into & selling in India; they were assignees of the trade mark & goodwill for India. Resps. having bought over twenty-one millions of the cigarettes cheaply from purchasers from the manufacturers, who had granted applts. the sole rights for India, were able to undersell applts. The sales by resps. involved no breach of contract, misrepresentation or infringement; further it was not shown that applts. had acquired any independent reputation as importers:—Held: the suit was not maintainable.—IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO. OF INDIA, LTD. v. BONNAN, [1924] A. C. 755; L. R. 51 Ind. App. 269; 93 L. J. P. C. 216; 131 L. T. 642; 40 T. L. R. 613; 41 R. P. C. 441, P. C.

B. Who may be Sued.

1404. Engraver of blocks from which labels printed.]—GUINNESS v. ULLMER (1847), 10 L. T. O. S. 127.

1405. Printer of infringing labels—Printer not using labels—Sale to fraudulent users.]—Where a manufacturer has the exclusive right to use a particular trade mark which he has been in the habit of procuring to be printed upon paper labels & wrappers, which he pasted on & wrapped round his manufactures, he may obtain an injunction upon interlocutory motion against a printer who has made & printed, & is in the habit of selling, imitations of plff.'s labels to persons, for the purpose of using them fraudulently, to pass off other goods as those of plff., although the printer himself makes no such use of them.

So also if plff. alleges that persons bought the labels of deft. for such a fraudulent purpose, & proves that deft. was in the habit of selling them to any one who asked for them; & deft. denies collusion with any one, & also denies plff.'s right to the exclusive use of the mark, & insists upon his own right to continue the printing & selling, the injunction will be granted, although plff. does not allege or prove that deft. sold them with a fraudulent purpose, & does not distinctly prove that any of the labels sold by deft. were in fact made use of to defraud plff. The ground of this equity is that deft., by knowingly printing labels in imitation of plff.'s trade mark, & selling them to any one who asked for them, was supplying the means of committing, & was thus a party to, frauds which Cts. of Equity would interfere to stop at their source.—FARINA v. SILVERLOCK (1855), 1 K. & J. 509; 3 Eq. Rep. 883; 24 L. J. Ch. 632; 25 L. T. O. S. 211; 3 W. R. 532; 69 E. R. 560; subsequent proceedings (1858), 4 K. & J. 650.

1410. Directors of limited company—Liability for specific wrongful acts.]—Pltfs. in a passing-off action, who were the successors in business of H. S. Cropper & Co. & H. S. Cropper & Co., Ltd., their successors, & who claimed to be entitled to the trade name "Cropper," alleged that defts. were using "Cropper" in such a way as to deceive the trade & the public & to represent themselves as the successors in business of H. S. Cropper & Co. & H. S. Cropper & Co., Ltd., & were passing off their goods as pltfs.' Pltfs. claimed an injunction & other relief:—Held: (1) the documentary & oral evidence on behalf of pltfs. was of the flimsiest character & did not make out the charge of fraudulently attempting to pass off their goods as pltfs.' against defts.; (2) in an action against a limited company, it is wrong to add as co-defts. directors against whom no specific allegations are made other than that they are directors.—CROPPER MINERVA MACHINES CO., LTD. v. SUB-SECT. 3.—PLEADING.

1412. Pleadings giving right to begin—Allegation of fraud against plaintiff.]—In an action for selling oil for the hair in bottles & with envelopes resembling those of pltfs., defts. pleaded that the oil sold by pltfs. was prepared from oil of an inferior quality, & was useless & valueless, & that pltfs. knew it, & that the oil sold by pltfs. was by reason thereof a fraud on all persons buying the same. Pltfs. replied de injuria:—Held: on these pleadings, deft. was entitled to begin.—ROWLAND v. BERNES (1843), 1 Car. & Kir. 46.

1413. What plaintiff must allege—Claim for infringement of trade name—That he carries on same trade as defendant.]—(1) A declaration stated that pltf. had established a bank in London called "The Bank of London" & was the first person who had established a bank by or under that name & had established the bank at great expense & caused the name to be published & affixed on the offices of the bank, so that same might be seen & known by the public & had caused prospectuses of the bank to be printed & circulated with the name & title of "The Bank of London" thereon, & the bank was then commonly known by the name of, & was the only bank named or styled "The Bank of London" whereby pltf. had acquired & was acquiring great gains & profits. It then proceeded to allege that defts. intending to injure pltf. in his bank & the business of his bank afterwards & while his bank was the only bank named or styled "The Bank of London" wrongfully & fraudulently established a certain other bank in London under the name, style & title of "The Bank of London" in imitation of, & as representing the Bank of London of pltf., & wrongfully & fraudulently transacted business at the bank so established by defts. under the name & under the false colour & pretence that same was the bank established by pltf., & that thereby pltf. had been prevented from carrying on his business at the bank so established by him so fully & extensively as he would otherwise have done, & had been deprived of profits & that by means of the premises divers persons were induced to believe & did believe that the bank so established by defts. was the bank called "The Bank of London" established by pltf.:—Held: the declaration disclosed no cause of action, it not being averred that pltf. had ever carried on the business of a banker. 1415. Amendment of pleadings—On what terms allowed—Payment of costs of application—& costs occasioned by amendment.]—Pltfs. desire to make this case against defts. It is only a carrying out on a further scale of their original statement that defts. have been fraudulently passing off or attempting to pass off their golf balls as pltfs.' golf balls, & I think it falls amply within the authorities that at any stage, if no harm can be done which is not capable of being compensated for by costs, amendments ought to be made in order that the real issue between the parties may be tried. . . . I shall allow these amendments to be made on the terms that pltfs. pay the costs of this application & all costs of & occasioned by this amendment (ASTHURY, J.).—INDIA RUBBER, GUTTA PRECHA & TELEGRAPH WORKS, LTD. v. 1416. Interrogatories—Answer disclosing names of customers—& trade secrets.]—Pltf. complained that deft. had sold, under pltf.'s name, sewing machines which had not been manufactured by him, & he sought a discovery of all the machines sold by deft., the price, the profit, the names of the purchasers & other particulars. Dft. refused to answer, saying that he would thereby disclose the names of his customers & the secrets of his trade:

p. What plaintiff must allege—Claim for infringement of trade name.]—

In a statement of claim making out a case for an injunction to prevent an infringement of pltf.'s trade name, they may either allege in terse & general terms the acquisition of title by long user, or they may set out such facts in detail to prove the user, as they might have furnished by way of particulars, if demanded, in case they had confined themselves in the first instance to a general allegation of title

q. Prohibitory—Power to amend.]— Mere prolixity in a pleading, not such as will embarrass or delay the fair trial of an action, does not warrant the striking out, under Rules 320 or 326 of the King's Bench Act, of any portions of it, & there is no power under any of the Rules, for the ct. to revise pleadings, which are merely over-lengthy by striking out or amending particular paragraphs in whole or in 1417. — Directed to details of plaintiff's evidence.—Sales of goods.—In an action to restrain defts. from using a trade name & from selling their goods as the goods of plffs., defts. by counterclaim claimed the like relief, & also an account of the goods sold by plffs. as & for the goods of defts., & of the profits of such sale. Both plffs. & defts. claimed to derive their title under a partnership that had been dissolved in 1861, & both had since that time carried on the same business. An interrogatory exhibited by defts. required plffs. to set forth the quantities of goods sold by them since 1861, distinguishing the quantities sold in each year:—Held: the interrogatory was not for the ordinary purposes of discovery, but was directed to the details of plffs.' evidence, & was rightly disallowed.—*BENBOW v. 1418. — Matters common to trade.—P. & co., who were pen manufacturers, brought an action for an injunction to restrain T. H. & co., who were also manufacturers of pens, from passing off pens & boxes of pens of their manufacture as pens & boxes of plffs. Defts. desired to administer a number of interrogatories to plffs., four of which were interrogatories asking whether the type, shape, or pattern of certain specified pens of plffs., & the boxes in which they were sold, were common to the trade; & what other manufacturers used them, & in particular whether they had so sold pens similar in pattern:—Held: the interrogatories proposed were admissible with a substitution for the words "similar in pattern" of words making that part of the first interrogatory applicable to pens of the "same" pattern & shape, or only colourably differing therefrom.

Another interrogatory asked whether the labels on the boxes of certain of plffs.' pens bore certain specified trade marks now or formerly separately registered by plffs. This interrogatory was disallowed.—PERRY & Co., LTD. v. HESSIN & Co. (1910), 28 R. P. C. 108.

1423. Letters of request.—Evidence on manner of dealing with goods in market.—A co. who were manufacturers of lime juice commenced an action against another co. for infringement of plffs.' trade marks & for passing off their lime juice as plffs.' lime juice. Plffs. alleged that they owned certain trade marks & that they sold their lime juice in bottles which were moulded with representations of their trade marks, & they alleged that the moulding on defts.' bottles was calculated to deceive. Both plffs. & defts. put labels on their bottles, but plffs. alleged that such labels frequently got rubbed off. Both firms exported their lime juice to other countries, including South Africa. Plffs. made an application for a commission to take evidence in South Africa or alternatively for letters of request to issue. They stated that they wished to obtain evidence as to the circumstances & conditions of the trade in South Africa. The application came before ASTHURY, J., in Chambers, to whom certain proofs of the proposed witnesses were submitted by plffs., & an order was made for letters of request to issue. Leave was given to defts. to appeal, & they appealed:—Held: evidence as to the manner in which the goods were dealt with in the market was material, & the ct. refused to interfere with the discretion of the learned judge; the order made was right.—*ROSE (L.) & Co., LTD. v. 1424. Essentials to reliable trap orders.—Notice to defendant.—Of incident relied on.—As soon as order fulfilled.—RIPLEY v. GRIFFITHS, No. 1091, ante.

1425. — — — — —.—Plffs., who were manufacturers of lubricating oil known as Castrol & were the proprietors of a trade mark consisting of that word registered in class 47 in respect of lubricating oil, placed two trap orders, on Nov. 4, & Dec. 10, 1927, respectively, with deft., the proprietor of a garage & petrol filling station. On each occasion, it was alleged on behalf of plffs. the oil asked for was "Castrol C." & the oil supplied by the employees of deft. was not "Castrol" oil. Plffs. commenced an action to restrain passing off by deft. as "Castrol" oil of oil not manufactured by plffs. An application by deft. for further particulars of the statement of claim was adjourned into ct. as a procedure summons & was refused. Deft. denied the alleged passing off. On an application by deft. for particulars of the name & address of a customer to whom it was alleged that one of the sales in question had been made, no order was made on plffs. undertaking to call him at the trial. The action subsequently came on for trial:—Held: the two trap orders on which the action was based were not given either in sufficiently clear terms or to sufficiently responsible persons; it was essential that trap orders on which it was intended to base actions should be given in clear terms & to persons of responsibility; & notice should at the earliest date be given to deft. of the particular incident relied on; & the case had not been made out with sufficient clearness & certainty to justify the ct. in holding that there had been passing off.—*WAKEFIELD (C. dealers in paper bags retailed at 2d. each. The get-up of plffs.' distributing vans & of the tins in which the bags were packed had remained constant for five years, & the get-up of the bags had remained constant for two years. In 1926, defts., P., had formed deft. co. of which he became the managing director. Plffs. alleged (inter alia) that defts. had got up their vans, tins & bags in imitation of those of plffs., & in particular, that plffs.' bags had on them the device of a diamond with the words "Smith's Potato Crisps" printed in colours inside the diamond, having the letters "IT" printed larger than the other letters, & that defts. had marked their bags with a device resembling a diamond, having the words "Paige's Potato Crisps" printed in it & having the letters "AI" printed larger than the other letters. Also, plffs. alleged that defts. had collected plffs.' empty tins from retailers & had packed them on defts.' vans in such a way as to produce the appearance of plffs.' vans. Defts. denied that their conduct of their business & the get-up of their vans, tins & bags were calculated to deceive the purchasing public into the belief that defts.' crisps were plffs.' Also, they alleged that their methods of printing their name & of dealing with the empty tins were common to the trade:—Held: although some persons in the trade had failed to recognise the distinction between plffs.' & defts.' tins, their failure had been only momentary; plffs. had failed to prove that there was any deception, or any risk of deception, & defts.' goods were so got up & marketed as to be clearly distinguishable from those of plffs.

B. Concurrent or General User.

1437. Concurrent user.—G. P. & Sons commenced in 1880 to sell Sweet Guinea Gold Tobacco, & they registered "Sweet Guinea Gold" with their facsimile signature, as a trade mark on Dec. 3, 1880, & they sold their tobacco with a label comprising their registered trade mark. O. on Nov. 3, 1880, registered a trade mark for tobacco containing the words "Guinea Gold Cut." O. & his successors O. & Co., Ltd., sold Guinea Gold Cut tobacco, though not as largely as G. P. & Sons sold Sweet Guinea Gold. In 1886, G. P. & Sons commenced to sell "Sweet Guinea Gold" cigarettes. At first, they were sold in red boxes, but from July 24, 1893, they were sold in white boxes, the tops of which bore a label which was substantially a reproduction of G. P. & Sons tobacco label. Before July 24, 1893, O. & Co., Ltd., designed a label for cigarettes under the title of "Guinea Gold." A few sample boxes were sold in Sept. 1893, but the sale of these cigarettes commercially did not begin until Apr. 1894. O. & Co.'s boxes resembled somewhat in appearance G. P. & Sons' white boxes. G. P. & Co. brought an action against O. & Co., Ltd., to restrain them from selling their said cigarettes. It was proved, among other things, at the trial that plffs.' cigarettes were known as "Guinea Gold" as well as "Sweet Guinea Gold" & defts. had adopted their cigarette boxes in ignorance of plffs.' white boxes:—Held: the only important feature in either case was the words "Guinea Gold" to which plffs. & defts. had an equal right & action must be dismissed.—PHILLIPS (GODFREY) & SONS v. OGDEN (THOMAS) & CO., LTD. (1895), 12 R. P. C. 325.

1438. ——In 1888 E. commenced to call his blue "Dolly," & it was ordered, invoiced, & advertised thereafter as "Dolly." In 1894 a co. was formed which took over the business of E.

In 1898 the co. commenced an action against G. & Son for supplying blue not being ptfs.' to persons ordering "Dolly Blue." The blue so supplied was blue manufactured by R. & bore R.'s trade mark, which consisted of a washing tub called in some parts a "Dolly" tub & in other parts a "Peggy" tub with the handle of a dolly or peggy stick projecting from it. R. had used this trade mark since 1871, & registered it under the Trade Marks Act in 1876. It was admitted that R.'s blue was called "Oval Blue" & was invoiced as "Oval"; but defts.' case was that retail customers often asked for it as "Dolly Blue," both before 1888 & since, & that there had, in fact, been a concurrent use of the word "Dolly" to describe E.'s blue & R.'s blue. It was held at the trial ptfs. entitled to an injunction. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal, who held that concurrent user of the term "Dolly" to denote Ripley's blue as well as ptfs.' was proved, & the judgment of the judge at the trial was wrong. The appeal was allowed, with costs above & below, & ptfs.' costs of the trial, which had been paid by defts., were ordered to be repaid to them, but without interest. Ptfs. appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the concurrent user was proved, & the judgments of the Ct. of Appeal were right.—EDGE & SONS, LTD. v. GALLON & SON (1900), 17 R. P. C. 557, H. L.

Ptfs. alleged that "Chartreuse" meant liqueur made at the Monastery. Deft. A. was London agent of a French distillery at Voiron, Isere, in France. Deft. alleged that "Chartreuse" was a generic word & publici juris, & further alleged a concurrent right of user in his principal of the name under an agreement, the meaning of which had been determined by a French Ct. of First Instance. Ptfs. contended that the agreement was null & void, according to French law, & could have no effect in England:—Held: apart from the agreement, ptfs. were entitled to an absolute injunction; but having regard to the agreement & the French judgment thereon, an injunction would be granted in special terms, with liberty to apply should an appeal from the French judgment be successful.—GREZIER & DOYLE v. The trade mark consisted of a representation of a Portuguese bullock cart loaded with a pipe of wine, drawn by two oxen & accompanied by two human figures, the one in front of the cart & the other behind. In 1886 the predecessors in business of G. O. & co. commenced to use on circulars in connection with the sale of port a representation of a bullock cart loaded with a pipe of wine, drawn by two oxen & with one human figure standing on the cart. In 1912 G. O. & co. commenced to use their device on the labels of their bottles, & in 1919 they *commenced to use a label bearing their registered trade mark consisting of the word "Regent" & underneath it their bullock cart device. In an action for infringement & passing off brought by E. Y. & co. against G. O. & co. defts. contended that they had not infringed by reason of the differences between the two devices, & that, a representation of a bullock cart being common to the trade, in comparing the two marks everything except the differences must be disregarded; that there had been no passing off; that they had used their device since a date anterior to the user or registration by the ptfs. of their device; that ptfs. had acquiesced in their user:—Held: defts.' user of an ox cart device had been anterior to that of ptfs.; in view of the wide user & vague signification of an ox cart device, defts.' use of such a device had not been used as a trade mark, but this device had been used in pursuance of the common usage in the trade & was only an indication of trade & assocn. with Portugal, & defts. had not infringed ptfs.' trade mark.—YOUNG & CO., LTD. v. 1445. ——Ptfs., who sold "Royal" coffee in tins, some of which bore red, blue, & green labels, while others were enamelled in the same pattern on a red or blue ground, brought an action to restrain defts. from selling "Palais Royal" coffee in tins which were enamelled in a somewhat similar pattern on a green or chocolate ground. Defts. & their predecessors had for many years, & before ptfs., "Royal" coffee was on the market, sold "Palais Royal" coffee in tins with certain paper labels, which bore no resemblance to ptfs.' labels in pattern & colour, & they subsequently began to use enamelled tins having a green or chocolate ground, the use of which tins ptfs. sought to restrain:—Held: as the similarities between ptfs.' & defts.' tins were so great, & as defts.' tins as a whole so nearly resembled in general appearance ptfs.' tins as to be calculated to deceive, ptfs. were entitled to an injunction & other consequential relief. Defts. appealed. The appeal was allowed.*

If the resemblance consists only in that which is common to the trade, to hold that ptff. is entitled to succeed would give a monopoly of the common features (JINDLEY, M.R.).—PAXTON & CO., LTD. v. TITUS WARD & CO., LTD. (1899), 17 R. P. C. 58, C. A.

They contended that these cigars were so well known, & so much asked for as "narrow red band" cigars, as to entitle them to an injunction restraining the sale by the deft. of cigars bearing similar bands three-sixteenths of an inch in width, & sold under the name "Purnella." Deft. alleged that he had sold "Purnella" cigars since 1882 in large quantities, & other cigars bearing similar bands since 1878, but produced no documentary evidence of orders* for or sales of "Purnella" cigars with a narrow red band prior to 1901, when pl'tfs. first knew of his cigars. Evidence was also given of other long uses of cigar bands of practically the same width & style:—Held: pl'tfs. had not established an exclusive right to a narrow red band, & upon the evidence as a whole, pl'tfs. had failed to satisfy the ct. that what def't. was doing was calculated or intended to deceive.—*IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO. D. Trade Mark Not Registered or Not Registrable.

1449. Mark capable of registration—But not registered.]—Pl'tfs. in the action sold tea in packets in buff wrappers, having printed on them in chocolate coloured ink (a) pl'tfs.' registered trade mark, which was circular, of a tower; (b) certain distinctive letterpress, the whole being arranged in a distinctive manner. They asked for an injunction to restrain def'ts., who were selling tea packed in buff wrappers, have printed on them (a) a circular trade mark which comprised four towers; (b) certain letterpress, the whole being arranged in a manner very similar to that adopted by pl'tfs. Def'ts. contended that pl'tfs. were precluded by Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 77, from bringing their action, because portions of the get up of their packets could have been registered under sect. 64 of the Act, & were not so registered:—Held: pl'tfs. were entitled to an injunction independently of Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57).—GREAT TOWER STREET TEA CO. v. LANGFORD & CO. (1887), 5 R. P. C. 66.

1450. Mark not registrable—Concurrent user—No opposition to registration.]—Pl'tfs. had a large export trade in bottled beer & a small local trade in England. Def'ts. sold bottled beer in England only. Both sold beer in the north of London. In 1879 pl'tfs. registered as a new mark for beer a picture of a stout man, with the words "John Bull Brand"; & in 1880 they registered as a new mark for beer a label containing the old mark with some additional words. In 1884 def'ts., in ignorance of pl'tfs.' rights, adopted for their beer a label containing a picture of a fat man & the words "John Bull Registered"; & they continued this use after knowledge of pl'tfs.' marks. This label was not registered as a trade mark, but only registered at Stationers' Hall. Pl'tfs. moved to restrain def'ts. from infringing their trade marks & from passing off their beer as pl'tfs.' Def'ts. moved to have pl'tfs.' marks expunged. In the course of the trial it was discovered that the words "John Bull" had been used by another firm in connection with beer from 1875 to 1890, but their beer had only a local sale, & the use of those words was now abandoned:—Held: assuming the registration of the words "John Bull" might have been successfully opposed, the ct. ought not now, in the exercise of its discretion under Patents, Designs, & Trade Marks Act, 1883 (c. 57), s. 90, to order those words to be expunged.—*PAINÉ & CO. v. (2) Where resp's. had applied the word to their own manufacture, but did not try to pass the same off as that of ap'ls. by the use of labels & packets calculated to deceive the public on that point; stating, on the contrary, the name of the maker, place of manufacture, & other necessary particulars:—Held: they could not be restrained from so doing.—*NATIONAL STARCH MANUFACTURING CO. v. 1476. — Absence of guilty knowledge.]—The manufacturers & their London agents sold a liqueur known as "Crème de Menthe Glaciale" in bottles, shaped somewhat peculiarly but common for such liqueurs, with a label upon them bearing those words, & underneath that label a rectangular slip with the word "Cusenier" in plain letters. The managing director of the London agents, having had his suspicions aroused as to the passing-off of a liqueur which was not pl'tfs. at the bars of the Gaiety Theatre, which was controlled by defts., purchased from a barmaid there a bottle from which he had been supplied with liqueur in response to a request for a glass of "Cusenier's Crème de Menthe." The liqueur was not of pl'tfs.' manufacture, & the bottle bore the label of another manufacturer named Perrier with the "Cusenier" white rectangular slip stuck over the word "Perrier." It was not proved how the bottle had been put into this condition, & defts. sought to show by their cellar books that they could not have had, on the day in question, a Perrier bottle with or without an additional label:—Held: defts., whether with the guilty knowledge of their directors or not, had passed off as a liqueur of pl'tfs. that which was not a liqueur of pl'tfs., & pl'tfs. were entitled to an injunction, with 20s. damages & costs.—CUSENIER (E.) FILS, AÎNÉ, ET COMPAGNIE & GEORGE IDLE CHAPMAN & CO., LTD. v. GAIETY BARS & RESTAURANT CO., LTD. (1902), 19 R. P. C. 357.

1477. — In absence of explanation.]—Pl'tfs. were the owners of a brand of cigars well known as "La Corona," & were the proprietors of a trade mark registered under the Act of 1905 of which those words were a prominent part, & the words appeared on the outside & inside of the boxes in which their cigars were sold. Such cigars were asked for as "La Corona" or "Corona." The word "Coronas" was used by a number of manufacturers of cigars to indicate, not a brand, but a particular shape or a particular size & shape. Defts. were restaurant keepers in Cheapside, & sold cigars to their customers & sometimes to other people. Pl'tfs. complained of the sale by defts. of a bundle of cigars on the ribbon of which the words "Corona de Alfonso" appeared under the words "Arnyas del Rey," & complained also of two sales, one of "Corona" cigars & the other of "La Corona" cigars by a boy employed by pl'tfs. in the restaurant to sell cigars. On the first mentioned sale the goods were described as "Cabinet Coronas" in the receipt given to the purchaser. It was held at the trial that, having regard to the use of "Coronas" as a size mark, a person seeing the ribbon would not be entitled to assume that "Corona" as used on it meant the brand, & that the ribbon was not calculated to deceive, & that on the first sale there was no passing off; that on the other two sales there was passing off by the boy, but that it ought not to be inferred that he was authorised to do so or that defts. were guilty of passing off; & that there was no infringement of trade mark. Judgment was given for the defts. with costs. Pl'tfs. appealed, but on the appeal relied only on passing off:—Held: defts. were, in the absence of any explanation, responsible for the passing off by the person entrusted with the sale of cigars, & on the facts pl'tfs. were entitled to an injunction.—HAVANA CIGAR & TOBACCO FACTORIES, LTD. v. TIFFIN (1905), LTD. (1909), 26 R. P. C. 473, C.A.

1478. — Absence of fraud — Distinction between claim for injunction & claim for damages.]—Pl'tfs., who were respectively the proprietors of two well known soaps called "Lux" & "Monkey Brand," each commenced an action against deft. society claiming an injunction to restrain them from passing off any soap not manufactured by pl'tfs. as & for pl'tfs.' soap. Defts. were a co-operative society having several shops in the district of Masbro', & they received their supplies from a very large trading corp'n. called the Co-operative Whole sale Society, deft. society being, in conjunction with other & similar local societies, a constituent member of this corp'n. It appeared from the evidence that at a meeting of deft. society in 1906 it had been decided to discontinue the sale of private makers' soaps & to stock & sell only soaps made by the "C.W.S.," & instructions were then given to the managers & assistants of the various shops to say, when asked for private makers' soaps, that they did not stock them & to offer instead "C.W.S." soaps. Pl'tfs. instituted a series of test purchases, & called witnesses, who stated that "C.W.S." soap had been supplied in substitution for "Lux" & "Monkey Brand" without any remark being made. At the trial defts. offered to give an undertaking that no substitution should take place in the future; pl'tfs. however pressed for an injunction:—Held: (1) there had not been any actual fraud nor intention to deceive on the part of defts., & if anything wrong had been done, it had been accidental or inadvertent on the part of a careless shopman; all ground of complaint had long since ceased; & an undertaking being given on behalf of defts., there would be no injunction & no order as to costs.

(2) It has been suggested that the master ought to be treated in exactly the same way, whether a thing like this has been done by his servants or by himself. I agree that that would be so with regard to damages, but to say that a master threatens & intends to do acts which are directly in disobedience of his orders, which he admits ought never to be done, which he is willing to undertake never to do, & which it is not suggested he ever knew had been done, to say that such a master is to be put in the position of having an injunction granted by the ct. against his doing in future that which he has done his best not to have done, is a proposition to which I decline to assent (FLETCHER MOULTON, J.J.).—*LEVER BROTHERS, LTD. v. 1496. Necessity for knowledge of wrongful acts.]—We were invited to consider the case from the point of view that pltf. co. alone was the rightful producer & vendor of "Whitstable Oysters," & that the Sea Salter & Ham co., which I shall hereafter call the Sea Salter co., is to be treated as having originally sold its oysters wrongfully as "Whitstable Oysters," & has not been restrained from continuing the wrongful act merely owing to the laches of pltf. co. There is nothing before us to justify such a method of dealing with the case or with the evidence, & indeed on this point it is useful to refer to the reasons offered by Mr. Anderson the chairman of pltf. co., in his evidence, at page 40 of the printed shorthand notes for pltf. co. admitting the right of the Sea Salter co. to sell its oysters as "Whitstable Oysters," & to the statement there made by Mr. Anderson that pltf. co., when it had to consider the question of the rights of the Sea Salter co., had, up to that time, remained in ignorance of the conduct of that co. Admitting such ignorance, it is difficult to see how there could have been laches on the part of pltf. co. at that time. The fact is that we have to consider the state of things existing at the date of the alleged wrongful acts of defts., & at that time the right of the Sea Salter co. to sell oysters as "Whitstable" was clear & admitted (ROMER, L.J.). WHITSTABLE OYSTER FISHERY CO. v. 1497. Whether order for relief made in court or in chambers.]—Pltfs. were owners of a trade mark consisting of a demon's head & the words "The Demon," & they manufactured tennis racquets & sold them stamped with this mark. They commenced this action to restrain deft. from passing off his racquets as & for pltfs.' racquets by the use of the title "The Demon," & claimed an account or damages. Deft. had purchased twenty-four racquets of the same shape as pltfs.' racquets, & his manager had exposed some of them for sale, attaching to them a small ticket with "Demon" written on it in ink, & also had written "Demon" on the paper covers for holding the racquets. Two of these racquets were sold by deft.'s manager to purchasers on behalf of pltfs., & at their request, the manager placed the word "Demon" on the invoices. On pltfs.' solr. writing to deft., the latter at once apologised. Pltfs., however, commenced the action. Deft. then offered to undertake not to interfere with pltfs.' trade mark, or to consent to an order in the terms of the writ to be obtained by summons in chambers, & to account for the profits of seven racquets which he admitted to have sold. Pltfs., however, moved for an injunction. An order was made for a perpetual injunction in the terms of the writ, with the costs of the action; but the costs were not to exceed such costs as would have been incurred if an order had been made in chambers, by consent, for an injunction; an account of profits was ordered, the costs of the accounts being reserved.—SLAZENGER v. Minutes of an order having been agreed upon, pltfs. served notice of motion for an injunction, & the action came on in ct. as a short cause. Defts. raised the point that pltfs. were only entitled to the costs which would have been incurred if the order had been obtained in chambers:—Held: without laying down any general rule on the subject, pltfs. were entitled to bring on the matter in ct. & to the costs of the action.—GANDY BELT MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. To the trade & public, vintage port described as "T.'s" denoted a wine of pltfs.' The wine mentioned in defts.' lists was not "T.'s," which sold at 34s. per dozen, but wine shipped by A. D. T. & the entry was made by inadvertence & in forgetfulness of pltfs.' rights. On their attention being called to the matter, defts. abandoned the use of the name "T.'s"

Defts. in their pleadings offered an undertaking not to use the name, & having transferred L. H.'s business to a limited co., alleged that no cause of action existed at the issue of the writ in the action, & they paid 40s. into ct. by way of damages:—Held: the circulars remained a continuing offer, the effects of which were not counteracted by anything that defts. had done, & there was therefore a good cause of action for an injunction when the writ was issued, & an injunction ought to be granted.—YEATMAN v. 1512. — Costs after offer.]—J. J. & S., distillers of whisky in Dublin, which they sold in casks to retailers, supplied their customers with two descriptions of labels, one for three years old whisky bearing their registered trade mark "J. J. & S.", the other bearing the trade mark & three stars, for use on bottles containing whisky at least seven years old. C., having purchased from them some of their three years old whisky, & been supplied with a number of the first kind of label, got imitations made of the second description of label, with the distinctive mark of three stars, affixed same on bottles not containing seven years old whisky, & sold it as the seven years old whisky. On being written to he stated that he had used the label merely for ornament, & denied that he had sold the whisky as seven years old whisky or committed any fraud, & promised not to use the label again. The solrs. for J. J. & S. replied, "You have committed a gross fraud; pltf.s. will require you to pay £50; also £10 to Belfast General Hospital & £10 for costs; also to sign an apology to be published in two newspapers, & to deliver up all the imitation labels in your possession." The solr. for C. wrote characterising the terms as extortionate, but offering to pay any costs incurred up to date & sign a letter of regret. J. J. & S. then commenced an action against C. Thereupon his solr. wrote on Oct. 11, 1901, to pltf.s.' solrs. offering to sign a consent to an injunction & to pay pltf.s.' solrs. costs properly & necessarily incurred. Pltf.s. went on to trial, & proved that deft. had on two occasions sold the whisky as pltf.s.' seven year old whisky. Deft.'s counsel, while not resisting the injunction, submitted that pltf.s. were entitled only to the costs incurred prior to the date of the letter in which they offered to consent & to pay the costs. The ct. held that deft. was not entitled to the exemption he asked for, & granted the injunction with costs.—JAMESON & SON, LTD. v. CLARKE (1902), 19 R. P. C. 255.

1514. Whether relief granted—Injunction—No unnecessary litigation.]—The bill alleged that deft. sold brushes, on which the trade mark of pltf. was stamped, & prayed for an account & an injunction. Pltf., directly after the filing of the bill, obtained the usual injunction. Deft. by his answer stated, that he had sold such brushes on two occasions only, when he believed that he had sold them to agents of pltf.; but that he had had no intention to sell them without the leave or to the injury of pltf.; & that, if pltf. had made any application to him, he would have undertaken never to stamp any articles with pltf.'s trade marks. Pltf. set the cause down on the answer of deft., without entering into evidence; & waiving the account, asked for a perpetual injunction:—Held: there had not been any unnecessary litigation on the part of pltf., & he was entitled to a perpetual injunction.—PIERCE v. FRANKS (1846), 15 L. J. Ch. 122; 10 Jur. 25; sub nom. PEARCE v. FRANKS, 6 L. T. O. S. 314.

1515. — — — — — Defendants refusing to admit plaintiffs' right to relief.]—In a passing off action defts., who were commission agents, in pursuance of an order given to them, ordered goods from a manufacturer in Germany, & directed the goods to be made up in the same fashion as a case handed to them by their customer, which was one of pltf.s.' cases. The German manufacturer consigned the goods to retail dealers in England. Defts. alleged that they were innocent in the matter as they did not know that the case in question was a case used by any English manufacturer, still less that it was the case in which pltf.s. were in the habit of making up their goods. Defts., in reply to a complaint made before action by pltf.s.' solrs., wrote a letter in which they did not admit pltf.s.' right to relief, & stated that they had taken the matter up with the manufacturer & their customer. Pltf.s. moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: pltf.s. were entitled to an injunction in the terms of the notice of motion. By consent the injunction was made perpetual.—CATTERSON (S. They had previously moved the vacation ct. for an injunction to restrain defts. from infringement & passing off: & defts. undertaking in terms of the notice of motion, no order was made on the motion except that the costs be costs in the action. Defts., who had acted innocently, admitted the sale under the name "Sferavox" of a single loud speaker not of pltf's. manufacture, but denied that pltf's. were entitled to an injunction or to damages. They had for some time exhibited in their window a loud speaker not of pltf's. manufacture under the name "Sferavox":—Held: (1) pltf's. were entitled to an injunction or to an undertaking in the terms of the statement of claim; (2) they were entitled to costs notwithstanding that they had asked for damages to which they did not show themselves to have been entitled.—*SOCIÉTÉ FRANÇAISE RADIO-ELECTRIQUE v. A firm of tobacco manufacturers, whose tobacco was known by the name "Mitcham," having brought an action against a shopkeeper for selling tobacco not of their manufacture under that name, only proved at the trial one instance of passing off, in which instance a person, who had, at the request of a traveller of pltf's., asked for an ounce of "Mitcham" tobacco, had been served with another tobacco by deft.'s manager, who had since left her employ:—Held: no injunction ought to be granted, & the case was too trivial for damages.—*RUTTER & Co. v. Pltf's., although they did not take proceedings for a fortnight, gave deft. no opportunity of explaining the mistake as to the manufacture of the coat, which in fact was also a mistake of the third party manufacturer:—Held: it was an isolated instance of mistake for which no injunction could be granted, but no order was made as to costs.—*BURBERRYS v. The only case of passing off proved at the trial was that a person sent by pltf's. to deft.'s shop in reference to the breach of contract, asked for a bar of "John Knight's Primrose Soap," & was given a bar of "Crisp's Imperial Primrose," with a representation that it was manufactured by pltf's., which was not the fact; but it was not proved that the assistant making the representation did so with the intention of deceiving, or that he did not make it merely by mistake:—Held: the one instance of passing off, without any intention to continue doing so or any proof of damage, did not constitute a ground of action; the action so far as founded on passing off was dismissed, & pltf's. having established a breach of contract, it was agreed that there should be no costs on either side.—*JOHN KNIGHT & SONS, LTD. v. 1535. Whether granted—Plaintiffs' right not established.]—In cases of claims to the exclusive right to particular marks on manufactures, the ct. exercises a jurisdiction over legal right, & therefore will not interfere by injunction in the first instance, except in strong cases, & it generally does so, by putting the parties on the terms of asserting their legal right by action at law.

The goods made at a particular manufactory had been distinguished by a particular mark, during more than sixty years before 1825. From 1805, one of plffs., either solely, or jointly with others, had been lessee of this manufactory, & used the mark in question. In 1825, about two years before the expiration of his lease, he removed his manufactory to a place about forty miles distant, where he continued to use the same mark, but under protest of the landlord of the original manufactory. From 1825 to 1836 no works were carried on at the original manufactory; but, in 1836, it was re-let, & the goods made there were distinguished by the usual mark. The ct. refused to interfere by injunction, on the application of pltf. to restrain the occupiers of the original manufactory from using the mark in question, but gave him liberty to bring an action at law.—MOTLEY v. DOWNMAN (1837), 3 My. & Cr. 1; 40 E. R. 824; sub nom. MOTTLEY v. DOWNMANN, 6 L. J. Ch. 308, L. C.

1539. — — — — —.]—L. M. Pinet, trading as Maison Pinet, who carried on a small & recently established business in boots & shoes made for a special purpose, sold that business to deft. co. One of the objects of the co. was, by its memorandum of assocn., stated to be "to carry on business in England & elsewhere as bootmakers & shoemakers." Plffs. had for over forty years carried on business in the manufacture & sale of boots & shoes, their goods being commonly known as "Pinet's."

They accordingly applied for an interlocutory injunction to restrain deft. co. from carrying on business as manufacturers or vendors of boots or shoes under the name of "Maison Pinet, Ltd." or under any other name or description of which the name "Pinet" formed part, & which was so arranged or contrived as, by colourable imitation of plffs.' trading style or otherwise, to be calculated to represent or lead to the belief that deft. co. were carrying on plffs.' business, & from in any other manner representing or acting so as to lead to such belief as aforesaid:—Held: although the business of L. M. Pinet was not the same as plffs.' yet the co. formed to acquire it had no intention of restricting their operations in any way, & would probably develop that business as far as possible, & develop it at the expense of plffs.; therefore, a case had been made out justifying the interference of the ct. at the present stage of the proceedings.—PINET (F.) ET CIE v. MAISON LOUIS PINET, LTD. (1897), 77 L. T. 322; 14 T. L. R. 2; 14 R. P. C. 933, C. A.; subsequent proceedings, [1898] 1 Ch. 179.

1540. — Probability that plaintiff will succeed at trial.]—WARNER v. WARNER, No. 1157, ante.

1541. ——J. & J. C. for many years sold mustard in tins bearing a distinctive label. F. & Co. sold mustard in similar tins, bearing a label somewhat similar in colour, type, & letter-press & arrangements, to J. & J. C.'s label, to which J. & J. C. raised no objection. In 1897, F. & Co. changed their label for one having a much closer resemblance to J. & J. C.'s label. J. & J. C. thereupon brought an action against F. & Co. to restrain the use of this new label, & moved for an interlocutory injunction. Affidavits of traders were filed by both sides on the question of the probability of deception:—Held: the approximation of deft.'s new label to pltf.'s label was close: treating it as a matter to be judged simply by the eye, there was a reasonable probability that at the trial a case of deception would be made out, & an injunction ought to be granted until the trial to restrain defts. from using the label complained of, or any other label which would lead the public to believe that defts.' goods were the goods of pltf's. Subsequently, by consent, a perpetual injunction was granted in above terms. —COLMAN (J. & J.), LTD. v. FARROW & CO. (1897), 15 R. P. C. 198.

1543. ——Pltf's., Van Oppen & Co., Ltd., had for many years traded both in & out of the United Kingdom as carriers. From 1890 they had done business at Manchester, where in 1897 they appointed deft. Van Oppen to be their representative. In June, 1901, he left their service, but continued the business of a carrier at the same address as L. Van Oppen & from July, 1901, as L. Van Oppen & Co. He adopted a special form of consignment note, which was practically identical with that of pltf's. Upon pltf's. motion for an injunction there was evidence that deft.'s carters were instructed to collect "goods for Van Oppen":—Held: pltf's. were entitled, by way of interlocutory relief, to an injunction restraining deft. from so carrying on business as to lead to the belief that his business was that of pltf's., & from infringing the copyright in the consignment note; but the delay of pltf's. disentitled them on the motion to relief with regard to the trade name L. Van Oppen & Co.—VAN OPPEN & CO., LTD. v. VAN OPPEN (1903), 20 R. P. C. 617.

1544. — Before defendant's answer to plaintiff's evidence—Only in extreme cases.]—The owners & publishers of the well known Bradshaw Railway Guide commenced an action against an individual who had commenced to carry on business under the name Bradshaws Publishing co. to restrain him from using that name or any other name of which "Bradshaw" or "Bradshaws" formed part or otherwise calculated to induce the belief that his business was connected with pltf's. business, & from publishing or advertising or obtaining or soliciting advertisements or subscriptions for "Bradshaws Directory" or any other publication the title of which comprised the word "Bradshaw" or "Bradshaws" & other relief; & pltf's. moved for an interlocutory injunction. They had sometime before made complaint to deft. When the motion came on for hearing, it was stated that deft., who was then represented, was away on the Continent, & he had not answered pltf's. evidence:—Held: on pltf's. evidence deft. had been engaged in carrying on a series of gross frauds, & although it is only in extreme cases that the ct. will grant an injunction before a deft. has answered pltf's. evidence, this was a case in which an immediate order should be granted. An injunction until the trial or further order was granted.—BLACKLOCK (HENRY) & CO., LTD. v. BRADSHAW'S PUBLISHING CO. (1920), 43 R. P. C. 97.

Whether line of conduct prescribed for defendant.]—Pltf. had a registered trade mark "Sweet Lips" for cachous, & defts. had sold in response to orders for "Sweet Lip Cachous" & other cachous known as "Sweet Two Lips" & "Sweet Dreams." Defts. having agreed to consent to an injunction, pltf. submitted to them minutes of an injunction restraining defts. from selling any cachous, not being pltf.'s, under the name "Sweet Lips" or "Sweet Two Lips," or as or for cachous of those names, or in response to orders for cachous of those names. Defts. wished to add the words "but not so as to prevent defts. from selling cachous under the name of 'Sweet Dreams.'" It was left to the judge to decide the terms of the order:—Held: it was not the practice to insert any qualifying words which might leave it open to defts. to say that the ct. had, in anticipation, laid down a course of conduct which they might pursue.—KERFOOT v. COOPER (R. A.), LTD. (1908), 25 R. P. C. 508.

1551. Passing off patented article—Injunction limited to duration of patent.]—In 1895 a patent was granted for "An improved device for holding or retaining ladies' hair." The device was a combination of a hinged binder as a means of making a secure foundation for the coiffure, with arms or wings as a means of coiling or arranging the hair so as to form a complete edifice. Pltf's., who in 1898 became the registered proprietors of the patent, in that year commenced large sales of the devices, each mounted for the purpose of sale on a show card, the goods so mounted coming to be known in the trade as pltf's. In 1900 defts., having been customers of pltf's., themselves offered for sale a similar device mounted in a similar manner, but not made by or for pltf's. Pltf's. brought an action for injunctions to restrain the infringement of their patent & "passing off" with other relief. Defts., at the trial, abandoned their defence as to "passing off," but contended that pltf's. patent was invalid for want of novelty & lack of invention, & that it had been anticipated by certain prior specifications:—Held: the interim injunction as to "passing off," which had been granted by the Ct. of Appeal should be made perpetual, with the addition of the words applicable to the expiration of pltf's. patent.—PARKER & SMITH v. SATCHWELL & CO., LTD. (1901), 45 Sol. Jo. 502; 18 R. P. C. 290.

1553. Sufficiency of evidence of breach—Absence of direct evidence.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft. firm, of which S. was the sole partner, for an injunction to restrain them from passing off goods alleged to be a colourable imitation of those of pltf.'s manufacture.

S. made default in pleading, & the injunction was granted in due course.

Later it appeared that similar goods to those complained of were being put upon the market by N., for whom S. was acting as agent for sale.

Thereupon a motion was made for attachment of S. for breach of the injunction. No direct evidence was forthcoming, but the case was rested on admissions by S., which the ct. held to be insufficient, & on the fact that he, having allowed judgment to go against him by default, was estopped from denying that the goods complained of were an imitation of those of pltf.'s manufacture. It was decided that in these circumstances an attachment could not issue. Pltf. appealed:—Held: the decision was right & the appeal failed.—RIPLEY v. ARTHUR & CO. (1902), 86 L. T. 735; 19 R. P. Follows right to injunction.]—Pltfs. registered "The Self Washer" as a trade mark, & sold "Sunlight Self-Washer Soap" in 12 ounce tablets, put up in wrappers made of imitation parchment paper on which certain letterpress was printed in broken or spaced printing. Defts. sold "Goodwin's Self-Washing Soap" in 12 ounce tablets, put up in wrappers of imitation parchment paper, on which was printed in broken or spaced printing letterpress, different in wording from but somewhat similar in character to pltfs.' letterpress. The ct. held that "The Self-Washer" was not a good trade mark, but that the get up of defts.' soap was a fraudulent imitation of the get up of pltfs.' soap, & that pltfs. were entitled to an injunction to restrain the future sales of defts.' soap so got up, & an account of the profits of all sales thereof in the past:—Held: the injunction was rightly granted, & the account of profits was rightly directed & ought not to be confined to those sales where defts.' soap was bought under the belief that it was pltfs.' soap.

It is well known that both in trade mark cases & patent cases pltf. is entitled, if he succeeds in getting an injunction, to take two forms of relief as alternative; he may either say, "Now I claim from you the damage I have sustained from your wrongful act"; or, "I claim from you the profit which you have made by your wrongful act" (COTTON, L.J.)—LEVER v. Notices of appeal were given on Oct. 24. Pltfs. applied to the Ct. of Appeal for leave to appeal notwithstanding that the notices had not been given within the prescribed time, or that the time for giving the notices might be extended. They alleged that the delay in giving the notices was due to the fact that pltfs. had been advised by counsel, & also by a clerk in the Office of the District Registry in which the action was set down, that the time for giving notice of appeal ran from the date when the orders were entered:—Held: the Ct. of Appeal had no power to enlarge the time under the R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 64, r. 7, but it had power under Ord. 58, r. 15, & special leave to appeal ought to be granted.—REDDAWAY & Co., LTD. v. IRWELL & EASTERN RUBBER Co., LTD. (1906), 24 R. P. C. 93, C. 1570. Discretion of court.—Although a successful deft. in a non-jury case has, in the absence of special circumstances, a reasonable expectation of obtaining an order for the payment of his costs, the ct. has an absolute & unfettered discretion to award or not to award them to him.—CAMPBELL

1571. Principles guiding court.—(1) The general proposition that nobody has a right to represent his goods as the goods of somebody else is without limit as regards name, origin, honesty of manufacture, or otherwise, & applies to a case where pltf.'s goods largely acquired their value through the exertions of defts. as the sole importers of those goods.

(2) If pltf. is entitled to an injunction in such a case, he is also entitled to an account of profits.

(3) If deft.'s goods on the face of them, & having regard to surrounding circumstances, are calculated to deceive, evidence to prove the intent to deceive is unnecessary, since a man must be taken to have intended the reasonable & natural consequences of his own acts. If, on the other hand, a mere comparison of the goods, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, is not sufficient, then it is allowable to prove from other sources that what is or may be apparent innocence was really intended to deceive.

(4) As regards costs, I intimated to pltf.'s counsel that I intended to be severe. The intention was based on a strong feeling long & increasingly entertained that the costs incurred in cases of this character are unduly large. They are often of little moment to the parties in such litigation by reason of the valuable interests involved; but there are others to be considered besides the parties to the particular litigation, & the importance of preserving a high standard in the administration of justice can scarcely be overrated. Purity, no doubt, stands first, but it is not the only essential, & as in the conduct of all other affairs, a sense of proportion ranks high & has large practical influence. The evil to which I am referring has been especially noticeable, & has again & again been noticed in patent cases; & litigation such as this, though not concerned with a patent, belongs to the same class. The temptation to multiply expert evidence, & to get as much as possible that can, in any event, be of value, "on the notes," seems to be irresistible, & the difficulty of discriminating in this particular class of cases between what is admissible & what is not, is undoubtedly great. I confess to being by no means free from blame myself. It often seems to be better to allow witnesses to be called & questions to be asked which might with advantage & more strict application of rules, be excluded, rather than waste time in discussing whether they should be excluded or not; & one is apt to forget, until too late, that to sanction evidence in chief precludes objection to cross-examination. I earnestly think that unless judges & counsel co-operate to keep the evidence in this class of cases within narrower limits, they threaten to become a scandal fraught with danger alike to those for whom & those by whom justice is administered. Nevertheless, & although of opinion that in the present case there has been an excessive multiplication of evidence by pltf., & that much of the evidence given on her behalf has been useless, I do not see my way to depriving a successful litigant of any costs which upon taxation are properly allowed, except, of course, those which, as above mentioned, I intend pltf. to pay (KEKEWICH, J.).—SAXLEHNER v. APOLLINARIS Co., [1897] 1 Ch. 893; 66 L. J. Ch. 533; 76 L. T. 617; 13 T. L. R. 258; 41 Sol. Jo. 331; 14 R. P. C. 645.

1578. — — Irrelevant misrepresentation.]—A successful deft. cannot be deprived of costs on the ground of improper conduct, e.g. a misrepresentation to the public, not connected with the issue between himself & pltf. If in such a case a successful deft. has been deprived of costs he has a right to appeal.

Defts. in an action for passing off their goods as those of pltf. had stated on the wrappers in which their goods were sold that they had obtained certain medals & awards at exhibition. Defts. did not state that the medals & awards had been obtained for the goods to which the action related, & in fact they had been obtained for other goods manufactured by defts.:—Held: defts. had not acted dishonestly, but even if they had been guilty of misrepresentation it had no relation to pltf.'s case, & was not therefore a ground on which the judge had a discretion to deprive defts. of costs.—KING (F.) & Co. v. GILLARD & Co., [1905]

1583. Joint defendants—One defendant innocent—Separate orders.]—Pltf. in an action for infringement of trade marks & passing off sold one quality of champagne intended exclusively for Continental consumption, & another quality intended exclusively for English consumption. They alleged that defts. S. & B. had sold in England the Continental quality as the English quality, under labels that were forgeries of pltf.'s labels. Defts. put in a joint defence. At the trial deft. S. did not appear; deft. B. appeared & alleged that he had acted innocently on behalf of S. It was admitted by pltf. that the purchasers of the wine had acted in good faith:—Held: there had not been fraud on the part of B.; but an injunction was granted against both defts., with an inquiry as to damages against S., but not against B. As to costs, separate orders were made, namely, against S. a full order, but against B., an order for the general costs of the action, except in so far as they had been increased by the issue of fraud, with a set-off in favour of B. of the costs of that issue.—*CHAMPAGNE HEIDSIECK ET Cie. v. At the date of the registration of one of the marks its then owner did supply tobacco to Marlborough House, but since the accession of the present King no warrants had been granted by the Prince of Wales. All warrants granted by any prince determine on his death or accession. The Royal Warrant Holders' Assoc., a corporate body of persons holding royal warrants, under authority to take proceedings moved to expunge these marks from the register as being "calculated to deceive" by leading to the belief that resps. held warrants from the Prince & supplied the smoking mixture to him:—Held: the marks were not "calculated to deceive" within Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 11, & if they were they were lawful marks when registered & had been used continuously & honestly ever since registration, & ought not to be removed 1585. Improper use of Royal Arms—Remedy—Summary prosecution.—[A coal merchant who had had contracts with a Govt. Department, used bill heads, etc., with the Royal Arms printed thereon & the words "Late contractor to her Majesty's Government" printed close to the arms, but no such words as "by appointment" were used in connection with the said arms. He had no authority from her Majesty or any Govt. Department, etc., to use the Royal Arms:—Held: it was a mere question of fact whether the Royal Arms had been used in such a manner as to be calculated to lead other persons to believe that he was carrying on his trade by or under the authority of her Majesty, etc., & the conviction ought to be affirmed. —(CAMERON v. KENNEDY (1900), 64 J. P. 41.

1586. — Injunction.—(1) By Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 68, "If any person, without the authority of His Majesty, uses in connexion with any trade, business, calling, or profession, the Royal Arms . . . in such manner as to be calculated to lead to the belief that he is duly authorised so to use the Royal Arms . . . he may . . . be restrained by injunction . . . from continuing so to use the same:—Held: the "belief" contemplated by the sect. was the belief on the part of the members of the public who see the display of the Royal Arms, & not merely that of present or prospective customers of the person wrongfully displaying them, the object of the sect. being to prevent the spreading of a belief among the public which might lead to an increase of prestige, & consequent business to the person wrongfully using the Royal Arms.

(2) Defts. carried on business as engineers, manufacturers, & contractors. On the front of their premises above the shop front was fixed a cast-iron representation of the Royal Arms containing the shield with the supporters, crest, & mottoes. The arms had been in that position for at least thirty-five years & before defts. took a lease of the premises. No such words as "By appointment" were used in connection with the arms. Defts. had no authority to use the Royal Arms. In an action by properly constituted plffs. under Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 68, for an injunction to restrain the unauthorised user by defts. of the Royal Arms:—Held: defts were using the Royal Arms in connection with their trade or business & in such manner as to be calculated to lead to the belief that they were duly authorised so to use them, therefore plffs. were entitled to an injunction restraining the user by defts. of the Royal Arms in connection with their trade or business "on their premises or otherwise."

(3) The question put to a witness in examination, "What was the conclusion in your mind arising from the fact that defts. exhibited the Royal Arms on their business premises?" was held admissible by analogy to the question permitted in passing off cases, "Did you believe that deft.'s goods were plff.'s?"—*ROYAL WARRANT HOLDERS' ASSOCN. v. Part I.—Tramways.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1. Definition.—“Promoters.”—The expression “promoters” really means, not only the persons originally authorised to construct a tramway, but also their permitted assigns. It is, however, plain that neither lessees nor licencees are promoters. Moreover the term “promoters” does not include debenture holders (per (UR.).—MARSHALL v. SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE TRAMWAYS Co., [1895] 2 Ch. 36; 64 L. J. Ch. 481; 72 L. T. 542; 43 W. R. 469; 11 T. L. 2. — — — — — Whether “railroad.”—The Act [Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1897 (c. 37)] uses the word “railroad,” & that word is certainly capable of expressing a tramway. If one carries one’s mind back to older times, railroad was apparently the usual word to describe a road used as a tramway where horse power or some power other than steam was used; & it seems to me that “railroad” taken by itself is a good English word descriptive of what is now usually known as a tramway (COLLINS, M.R.).—FLETCHER v. LONDON UNITED TRAMWAYS, LTD., [1902] 2 K. 4. Right of way under agreement—Between tenants & previous landowners—Tramroad abandoned for railway—Whether subsequent owner bound by agreement.—Cromford Canal Act empowered the proprietors of mines & their lessees to make railways or roads across the lands of other persons, intervening between the mines & the canal to convey their materials to the canal. In 1843 an agreement was entered into between the lessees of coal mines & the owners of intervening lands to make a tramroad across them, subject to an annual rent of £5 5s. The lessees afterwards abandoned the tramroad, & without any consent, except that of the tenant, made a railroad across the lands in a different direction from the tramroad. They also erected an engine house, for which they subsequently agreed with the mtgee. in possession to pay an additional rent of £1 15s. Deft. subsequently became owner of the lands, & gave notice to the lessees that he should require an annual payment of £35; & the lessees refusing to pay that sum, he gave them notice to cease the use of the railway, & subsequently he took up the rails. Upon a bill filed by the lessees:—Held: deft. was bound by the agreement & acts of his predecessors; the abandonment of the tramroad for a railway had not affected the rights of the parties; deft. was not justified in taking up the rails; & plffs. were entitled to restore them, deft. being answerable in damages for the loss sustained by plffs.—MOLD v. WHEATCROFT (1859), 27 Beav. 510; 29 L. J. Ch. 11; 1 L. T. 226; 6 Jur. N. S. 2; 54 E. R. 202.

5. ——— Between tenants & landlord—Landlord to give land for tramway.—Tenants of quarries situated about three miles from their works, who were accustomed to convey the stones from the quarries to the works by carts, entered into an agreement with their landlord to construct a tramway from the quarry to the works to run (inter alia), "by the end of the policy" of the landlord: & they further agreed to compensate the farm tenants along the line for any damage done to their farms during the currency of their leases. The landlord agreed (inter alia) to give gratuitously the land required for the tramway. Outside the policy ground there was a private road the property of the landlord, which, before it reached the tenant's works, ran through another tenant's stone pavement yard. This was the only practical route outside the policy for the tramway; & it was alleged that the only obstacle to laying it along the road was that the other tenant might refuse to allow it being laid on that part passing through his yard, but for this there were no termini habiles. The tenants claimed that the landlord was bound to give them the use & possession of land for the purpose of the tramway, & that, either (a) "within & by the end of the policy," or (b) "in any other place as suitable & convenient for them in every respect":—Held: under the agreement the stipulation was that the tramway should pass outside the walls which enclose the policy of the landlord; & by agreeing to give gratuitously the lands required, the landlord merely undertook to give the tenants such rights as were vested in him, leaving them, with the power to use his name, to settle with any persons who might have a right or interest entitling them to object to the formation of the tramway.—SINCLAIR v. 6. Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78)—Object of Act.—(1) Above Act is to facilitate the construction & to regulate the working of tramways in England & Scotland: Edinburgh Tramways Act, 1871, is to authorise the construction of street tramways in certain parts of Edinburgh, Leith, & Portobello.

(2) Case in which the rule that 9 feet 6 inches shall intervene between the tramway rail & nearest footpath was departed from by statutory authority; the House reversing the decree complained of.

(3) Relying on certain preliminary agreements, the frontagers of a narrow thoroughfare abstained from opposing the Edinburgh Tramways Bill; but as it turned out that Edinburgh Tramways Act, 1871, when passed, allowed the very thing which the frontagers had been most anxious to prevent, they asked & obtained from the Ct. of Session an interdict against its execution. But the House of Lords recalled the interdict, holding that the question was determined by the statute, which the Tramways co. were not only entitled to carry out, but bound to obey.—EDINBURGH STREET TRAMWAYS CO. v. BLACK (1873), L. R. 2 Sc. & Div. 336; 37 J. P. 692, H. L.

9. Cesser of powers under order—Substantial commencement of works—What amounts to.—(1) In Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 18, which provides that the powers of promoters under a provisional order shall cease "if within one year from the date of the order the works are not substantially commenced," the term "works" means physical works actually executed.

A corpn., who had obtained a provisional order for the construction of electric tramways, had done no work within the year on the tramway itself, but had purchased land for offices & a generating station, & had entered into binding contracts for the supply of electric cars & for the supply & installation of dynamos & electric machinery:—Held: the works had not been substantially commenced within the meaning of the sect.

(2) Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 18, also provides that "a notice, purporting to be published by the Board of Trade, in the Gazette to the effect . . . that the work has not been substantially commenced . . . shall be conclusive evidence for the purposes of this sect. of such . . . non-commencement":—Held: in the absence of such a notice, other evidence of the non-commencement of the works was not excluded.—A.-G. v. Bournemouth Corpn., [1902] 2 Ch. 714; 71 L. J. Ch. 730; 87 L. T. 252; 51 W. R. 129; 18 T. L. R. 744; 46 Sol. Jo. 648, C. A.

10. — Evidence—Notice in London Gazette—Whether other evidence admissible.—Promoters of a tramway applied for a return of the parliamentary deposit on the ground that the undertaking had been abandoned & the powers to make the tramway had determined:—Held: the proper evidence of the abandonment & cesser of the powers was a notice published in the London Gazette pursuant to Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 18, & other evidence thereof could not be accepted. Re Dudley & Kingswinford Tramways Co. (1893), 63 L. 15. Power to lay extra rails—Consent of local authority—Necessity for.—A co. owning a tramway along a road had power under their special Act to lay a second set of rails, with the consent of the local authority, provided that no rail should be laid within 10½ feet of the footway on either side of the road, if one-third of the owners & occupiers of premises abutting on the place where the rail was to be laid objected. They proposed to lay rails within 10½ feet of the footpath on the east side of the road: on that side a promenade abutted on the road, & the corpn., as owners of the soil of the promenade, objected; on the west side houses & shops abutted on the road, & all the owners & occupiers thereof objected: the local authority also refused their consent. Nevertheless, the co. laid their rails:—Held: (1) they had committed a trespass, & must pay as damages the cost, at any rate, of restoring the road.

(2) Qu.: whether the refusal of the local authority to consent, was a "difference" to be submitted to arbn. under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33; or whether, if it was groundless & arbitrary, the co. might disregard it; but the objections were valid for (a) the esplanade was "premises" entitling the corpn., as its owners, to object, & (b) even if it were not, the owners of premises on the west side could object to a rail being laid within the prescribed distance of either footway.—*Bideford U. (2) There is sect. 26, which authorises them to break open the roads for the purpose of making, forming, laying down, maintaining & renewing any tramway duly authorised, subject to various conditions, which come to this, that when they are breaking open the roads for the purpose of (inter alia) maintaining any tramway, they are required to give seven days' notice, which, when the things are slight, they may be excused not giving; for instance, where things require to be done instantly (Blackburn, J.).—*St. Luke's Vestry v. 20. — Powers of promoters.—To form connection with generating station not belonging to promoters—& outside local authority's district.—By a private Act a tramways co. obtained power to construct certain tramways to be worked by electricity. Sect. 27 of the Act provided that "The co. may execute all such works on or in connection with the tramways & in over or under the streets roads or bridges in or over which same are laid as may be necessary or expedient for working the tramways by mechanical power as aforesaid & may lay down construct erect & maintain on in under or over the surface or bed of any street road footway bridge river or place & may with the consent in writing of the owner & occupier of any house or building attach to such house or building such posts conductors wires tubes mains plates cables boxes & apparatus & may make & maintain such openings & ways in on or under any such surface or bed as may be necessary or convenient either for the working of the tramways or for connecting any portions of the tramways or for providing access to or forming connection with any generating station or other stations engines machinery or apparatus." The co. proposed, for the purpose of so working their tramways, to lay down a line of cables passing through, among other places, the borough of Wandsworth, to connect their tramways with a generating station in Chelsea belonging to another co. The borough council moved to restrain deft. co. from breaking up any of the roads within their jurisdiction:—Held: the co. was entitled under the latter part of sect. 27 of their Act, which was in perfectly general terms, to execute works in these streets necessary or convenient for forming a connection with the generating station.—*WANDSWORTH CORPN. v. Shortly after the pavement was completed, defts., acting under statutory powers, laid down a tramway along the pavement, but so constructed & maintained their tramway as to occasion unnecessary damage to the pavement. It being doubtful whether an action, commenced by pltfs. against defts. on the above facts, was brought in the name of the right pltfs., the ct., under S. C., Ord. 16, r. 2, ordered the vestry to be added or substituted as pltfs., on the terms that the vestry was to be indemnified by the original pltfs. for all costs & expenses.—*VAL DE TRAVERS ASPHALTE PAVING CO. 22. — Injury to person using defective roadway.—Defts. were the owners of a quay over which there was a public right of way to their docks. The G. E. R. co., by their private Act of Parliament, were empowered to & did enter into an arrangement with defts. to lay tramways connecting the docks with the railway system. The co. were to keep the tramways in good working order. Under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), the co. as promoters gave notice to defts. of their intention to open & break up the road for the purpose of doubling the rails at a particular point. The co. did break up the highway for their tramway purposes. Pltf. was injured by being thrown from his cart through the defective condition of the roadway at the place where the works were being carried out, & brought his action for compensation against defts. as owners of the highway. The jury at the trial found that the accident to pltf. had been caused by the negligence of the railway co., who were in possession of the spot where the occurrence took place, & that the roadway was in a defective condition owing to a breach of duty on the part of the railway co., & gave pltf. substantial damages. It was contended, on argument on behalf of pltf., that on these findings he was entitled to have the verdict entered for him, & on the part of defts. that they amounted to a verdict for them:—Held: as the railway co. were carrying out their works not under the orders or as licencees of defts., but under their statutory powers, & were in the sole possession of the place where the accident happened, which was entirely under their control, & the negligence causing the accident was that of the railway co. & not of defts., the verdict ought to be entered for defts.—*BARHAM v. 27. Bridges—Liability of promoters—Passing unusually heavy weight over bridge.—Appl’t. corpn., having, under a colonial Act, de facto taken over the care & control of a certain bridge, in an action to recover damages from them for a fatal accident caused by the breaking down of the bridge over which a tramcar containing deceased was running:—Held: the finding of the jury that an act done by their officer had materially weakened the beam which afterwards broke amply justified a verdict against them.

One question might have arisen in this case, a seriously important question, namely, whether, if the original construction of the bridge was such, & the pressure placed upon it by the tramway co. was so great that, under any circumstances, independently of any decay, or misuse of the beam, . . . the weight placed upon it would have caused the destruction of the bridge. It might have been a very serious question whether or not the responsibility for passing that weight over the bridge at that point might not have rested upon those by whose act that unusual & extraordinarily heavy weight was passed over, without casting any responsibility on those whose duty it was to maintain & repair the bridge (per CUR.).—*VICTORIA CORPN. v. Liability for expenses—Additional expense caused by existence of tramway—What is.—See GAS, Vol. XXV., p. 481, No. 70.

30. — Injurious affection of telegraphic lines.—Nature of liability.—By a local Act, s. 65 (1), it is provided that in the event of the co.'s tramroad being worked by electricity the co. shall work their undertaking “with due regard” to the telegraphic lines of the Postmaster-General, & “shall use every reasonable means” in the working of their undertaking to prevent injurious affection of such lines.

By local Act, s. 65 (2): “If any telegraphic line of the Postmaster-General is injuriously affected . . . by the working of the undertaking of the co., the co. shall pay the expense of all such alterations in the telegraphic lines of the Postmaster-General as may be necessary to remedy such injurious affection.”

In 1898 defts. under the powers conferred by the said Act constructed an electric tramway along certain public roads. In 1914 the Postmaster-General laid underground along the same roads a telephone cable, which at one point came within seven feet of defts.' lines. In 1916 a breakdown occurred in the cable in consequence of its being injuriously affected by an escape of electricity from defts.' lines. In an action by the Postmaster-General under sect. 65 (2), to recover the expenses he had been put to the Div. Ct. held that the liability of defts., under that sub-sect., which was to be read independently of sub-sect. 1, was an absolute liability, & that neither the fact that defts. had used every reasonable means in the working of their undertaking to prevent injurious affection to pltf.'s cable, nor that pltf. by laying his cable so near to defts.' lines had courted the injury, afforded any defence:—Held: (1) sect. 65 (2) was an independent sub-sect. & in no way dependent upon sub-sect. 1; (2) if it was proved that the injurious affection of the Postmaster-General's cable was caused by the construction or working of defts.' undertaking it would be no answer to a claim by the Postmaster-General for defts. to prove that he had been guilty of want of reasonable care & skill in selecting the place in which to lay his cable; (3) if defts. could show that the construction or working of their undertaking did not injuriously affect the cable but that the injurious affection was entirely due to the act of the Postmaster-General, then in all probability sub-sect. 2 would not apply.—*POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33, provides that if any difference arises between a tramway co. & the road authority in relation to any tramway, or on the question whether any work is such as ought reasonably to satisfy the road authority, the matter in difference shall be referred to an engineer nominated by the Board of Trade. The private Acts of a tramway co. incorporated the above sects. & imposed on the co. a penalty (a) for non-compliance with Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 28; (b) for not keeping the tramways in repair to the satisfaction of the road authority, & (c) for not keeping the rails in repair & so as not to be a danger or annoyance to the ordinary traffic. The tramway co. were summoned, (a) for not keeping in repair, with such materials & in such manner as the road authority had directed, the portion of the road prescribed by Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 28, (b) for not keeping their tramways in repair to the satisfaction of the road authority, & (c) for not keeping the rails in repair & so as not to be a danger or annoyance to the ordinary traffic:—Held: the obligation to keep in repair certain parts of the roads which is imposed by Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 28, & the obligation imposed by the co.'s private Acts to keep the tramways in repair to the satisfaction of the road authority, was in each case an obligation to keep in repair, not to the satisfaction of the road authority absolutely, but to their reasonable satisfaction, & the question whether the road authority ought reasonably to be satisfied must go to arbn. under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33, & was one with which the magistrate had no jurisdiction to deal, but the magistrate had jurisdiction to deal with the summonses for not keeping the rails in repair, as in this instance no question had arisen in regard to the satisfaction of the road authority.—R. v. 41. — Work done by local authority—Recovery of expenses from promoters.]—By local Act, s. 57, it was provided: "If the co. fail to maintain & keep in good condition to the satisfaction of the corp., . . . the junction of the paving laid & maintained by the co. with the surface laid & maintained by the corp., the corp. may, if they think fit, themselves at any time after seven days' notice to the co. do the work necessary for the repair & maintenance of the road, & the expense reasonably incurred by the corp. in so doing shall be repaid to them by the co. with the addition of 5 per cent. on such expense."

The surface of the road laid & maintained by the corp., owing to the traffic adjacent to the paving of the tramway, became worn down below the level of the paving at distances varying from 2 inches to 6 inches from such paving, & in certain cases it was necessary, in order to repair the roadway so worn down to take up the roadway to a distance of 18 inches from the paving. The corp. executed the repairs, & claimed the expenses of so doing from the co.:—Held: the expense so incurred was incurred in maintaining & keeping in good condition the junction of the paving with the surface of the roadway & the tramway co. was responsible for such expense.—*NORWICH CORPN. v. The Act provided that the co. might remove snow & ice from its tracks so as to enable it to work its cars in the winter. "Provided, however, that in case such snow & ice shall be removed from it, track or disturbed or thrown out by the ploughs leveller, or tools of the co., it shall be the duty of the co. within forty-eight hours to level the said snow or ice on each side of the track to a uniform depth, to be determined by the engineer of the council, & so as not to impede the ordinary traffic of the streets." The engineer determined a depth to which the snow was to be levelled which was admitted to be reasonable, but the co. could not comply with his requirements without removing some of the snow from the streets altogether:—Held: they were bound to remove the snow.—*SHEA v. See Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33.

50. What is a "difference"—Refusal of local authority to approve of particular paving.]—By a local Tramway Act, passed after & incorporating Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), the space between the rails & for a distance of 18 inches beyond each external rail was to be paved by the co. to the satisfaction of the local authority for the district with wood or other paving to be approved of by the local authority. On an application by the co. the local authority declined to approve of a particular paving, & the co. thereupon laid it down without such approval. On an application by the local authority for a mandamus to the co. to take up the paving so laid down:—Held: the powers given to the local authority were subject to the provisions of Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), a difference had arisen within sect. 33 of that Act which ought to be determined by a referee appointed by the Board of Trade, & the mandamus ought not to be granted.—*R. v. 51. — Proposal by road authority to substitute wood for granite pavement.]—A municipal corp., as being the road & local authority, proposed to alter a road within their district, upon which a tramway had been constructed by a tramway co. under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), by taking up the existing granite pavement & laying down a wood pavement over the whole of the roadway, including the space between the rails of the tramways & 18 inches on each side thereof. The tramway co. objected to the alteration, so far as it concerned the last-mentioned portion of the roadway, & claimed to refer the matter as being a difference within Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33, to a referee to be appointed by the Board of Trade:—Held: (1) the difference was not one within the sect. 33, inasmuch as it was not with respect to any interference or control claimed to be exercised by the road authority "by virtue of the Act" or to "any subject or thing regulated by or comprised in the Act," (2) but with respect to the exercise of a power which belonged to the road authority independently of the Act, & which was preserved by sect. 60 of the Act.—*BRISTOL TRAMS & CARRIAGE CO. v. 52. — Failure to repair "to satisfaction of local authority."—The provision for arbn. contained in Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33, ousts the jurisdiction of the High Ct. with regard to differences coming within the terms of the sect.

It was provided by the special Act of a tramway co., with which by Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 22, Parts II & III of that Act were to be incorporated that if the co. failed to maintain & keep in good condition to the satisfaction of the corp., the junction of the paving laid & maintained by the co., with the service laid & maintained by the corp., the corp. might if they thought fit, themselves at any time after seven days' notice to the co. do the work necessary for the repair & maintenance of the road & that the expense reasonably incurred by the corp. in so doing should be repaid to them by the co. with the addition of 5 per cent. on such expense. The corp. did work by way of repair to roads on which tramways belonging to the co. were laid alleging that such work came within the above mentioned provision which the co. denied. In an action by the corp. against the co. to recover the expenses of the work, & for a declaration of their rights in the matter:—Held: the difference which had thus arisen between plf., & defs. came within Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 33, & therefore the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the action.—*NORWICH CORPN. v. The rents were paid during the whole period of the five years. The contractors contended that they were only liable to pay rent for vehicles which were regularly run, & not in respect of a vehicle while it was not running; & brought an action for an account of the number of regular running vehicles & of the money paid by them to defts.:—Held: "regular running" cars included any cars which were in the service of the undertaking as rolling stock for regular use at the commencement of the year the rent for which was in question, & which were intended for employment in the service as regular running cars; & regular running was not incompatible with occasional withdrawals from use for repairs.—*GRIFFITHS & MILLINGTON, LTD. v. No express power so to use the highway was given by any statute:—Held: Locomotives Act, 1865 (c. 83), s. 4, applied, & the co. could not go at a greater speed than 2 miles an hour, this being a case of driving a locomotive along a public highway within the meaning of that Act.—*LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. The corp'n. made a bye-law that in the central area the distance at which a carriage should follow a preceding carriage using the same tramway should be such as might be directed by the police: —Held: that this bye-law was not a compliance with the sect., & the co. had a special interest entitling them to obtain a mandamus to the corp'n. to fulfil their obligation under the sect.— *R. v. A passenger in a car on arriving at the terminus when the car was stationary insisted upon getting off & did get off the car by the end which during the journey was the driver's platform. The passenger, having been summoned for breach of the bye-law, contended that the bye-law was void for uncertainty:—Held: (1) the "hindermost or conductor's platform" in the bye-law must be taken to mean, in reference to a passenger in the car, the platform which was the conductor's platform during the journey which the passenger had undertaken; (2) the bye-law is clear & intelligible & applies whether the car is in motion or stationary, & it is therefore valid, & the passenger ought to have been convicted under it.—*MONKMAN v. Resp., on entering the car, paid his fare & received a ticket. In the course of the journey he lost it. On being asked to produce his ticket by the inspector he was unable to do so, though the conductor admitted he had paid for and received one. Resp. was then asked to produce his ticket, or pay the fare or leave the car, but failed to comply with any of these requests. He was summoned for a breach of the bye-law:—Held: the bye-law was reasonable, & resp. had infringed it.—HUNT v. GREEN (1906), 96 L. T. 23; 71 J. P. 18; 23 T. L. R. 19; 5 L. G. R. 67; 21 Cox, C. Applt., a passenger on one of the tramcars of the corp. of S., paid his fare, but refused to accept the ticket tendered by the conductor, on account of a condition printed on the back of it. The ticket fell on the floor of the top of the tramcar. Later an inspector asked applt. for his ticket, who pointed it out to him lying on the floor, but refused to take it up or to pay another penny for his fare:—Held: applt. had not committed any offence under the bye-law.—*WILSON v. SUB-SECT. 1.—POWER OF PURCHASE.

See Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43.

106. Who may sell—Purchasers of undertaking from promoters—Sale not approved by Board of Trade.—In 1895 a Provisional Order was obtained by certain promoters for the construction of tramways in the borough of West Hartlepool. This Order was confirmed by an Act passed in 1895 by which it was provided (inter alia) that deft. corp. might purchase the undertaking after the lapse of fourteen years. The Act provided that no sale of the undertaking by the promoters should have any validity until after approval by the Board of Trade.

In Aug. 1896, the promoters entered into an agreement with the British Electric Traction (Pioneer) Co., Ltd., to sell the undertaking to them; & by a further agreement made in Oct. 1896, the undertaking was purported to be sold to pltf. co. Neither of these agreements was approved by the Board of Trade. The construction of the tramway, which was commenced in Mar. 1897, was duly completed. In Jan. 1910, deft. corporation gave notice to the promoters & also to pltf. co. or "other the promoters," requiring them to sell their undertaking. The matter was referred to an arbitrator, who assessed the value at £12,963. In an action by the co., " & all others the promoters of the Hartlepool Electric Tramways Order, 1895," to recover this sum, the corp. contended that they could make no valid payment to the original promoters who now had no legal title to the tramway; & that they could not pay anything to pltf. co., inasmuch as the assignment had not been approved by the Board of Trade:—Held: by assignment from the promoters the tramway co. had, to the knowledge of the Board of Trade, by succession, themselves become the promoters of the undertaking, & that was quite sufficient to enable them to sell the tramway.—HARTLEPOOL ELECTRIC TRAMWAYS CO., LTD. v. HARTLEPOOL CORPN. (1911), 75 J. P. 537; 9 L. G. R. 1093, C. A.

108. Whether obligation to purchase whole undertaking—Several tramways incorporated in one undertaking.—Where one tramway has been incorporated with others by statute in one undertaking, a local authority has got power to purchase such tramway within twenty-one years after the Act or Order authorising its construction, & although no right to purchase the other lines has arisen, or although they may not be within the district of the purchaser's authority, & although the general system of the tramlines "may be disconnected by such purchase."—*NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS CO. v. 109. — "Suitable to & used" for undertaking—Tramway system partly owned & partly leased—Depots used for entire system.—By Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, a local authority is empowered under certain circumstances to purchase compulsorily the tramways within its district "upon terms of paying the then value . . . of the tramways & all lands, works, materials, & plant of the promoters suitable to & used by them for the purpose of their undertaking within such district." Where part of the tramways within a local authority's district already belonged to the authority, but were worked by the promoters of the rest of the tramways within the district jointly with such promoters' part, on the local authority purchasing the promoters' part, it is bound under sect. 43 to take all the lands, works, materials & plant used by the promoters for the joint working of the whole system as "lands, works, materials, & plant of the promoters suitable & used by them for the purposes of" the part of the tramways belonging to the promoters.—RE MANCHESTER CARRIAGE & TRAMWAYS CO. & MANCHESTER CORPN. (1902), 87 L. Subsequently the corpn. of Ashton-under-Lyne served the co. with notices under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, requiring them to sell the lines within the borough. In an arbn. held in consequence of those notices the co. contended that the corpn. of Ashton-under-Lyne were bound to purchase the above-mentioned depot, & the arbitrator awarded that such depot should be purchased by the corpn.:—Held: (1) the corpn. were bound to purchase the depot in question as being suitable to & used for the purposes of the undertaking within their district within Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, notwithstanding the fact that in the previous proceedings it had been decided that such depot was suitable to & used for the purposes of the undertaking within other districts; (2) in an arbn. to determine the amount to be paid by a local authority upon the purchase of a tramway undertaking under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, the arbitrator must take into consideration the costs incurred by the undertakers in obtaining Parliamentary powers to construct & work the tramway, & no allowance should be made for depreciation under that head. But the arbitrator should not take into account costs incurred by the undertakers in opposing bills in Parliament for the purpose of protecting their undertaking.—Re MANCHESTER CARRIAGE & TRAMWAYS CO., LTD. & ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE CORPN. (1904), 68 J. 111. — Buildings outside district.]—

By Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, it is provided that "Where the promoters of a tramway in a district are not the local authority, the local authority . . . may . . . by notice in writing require such promoters to sell, & thereupon such promoters shall sell to them their undertaking, or so much of the same as is within such district . . . & all lands, buildings, works, materials, & plant of the promoters suitable to & used by them for the purposes of their undertaking within such district."

A local authority gave notice to a tramway co. that they were required under the above sect. to sell to them so much of their works & undertaking as was within the district of the local authority.

The co. were also the owners of a large depot situated outside the boundary of the district, which was found by an arbitrator to be "used with, & suitable to" the undertaking within the district:—Held: the local authority could be compelled to purchase the depot.

The words "within such district" qualify the word "undertaking," & not the words "lands, buildings, works, materials, & plant of the promoters."—*MANCHESTER CARRIAGE & TRAMWAYS CO., LTD. v. North Metropolitan Tramways Act, 1870 (c. clxxii), s. 31, empowered the district council to require the tramway co. to sell to them their undertaking within the district "upon terms of paying the then value . . . of the tramways & all lands, buildings, works, materials, & plant of the co. suitable to & used by them for the purposes of their undertaking within such district" & the district council exercised that power.

A tramway of the co. within the district passed through the entrance gates to the yard of a large car factory erected by the co. upon their own land for a distance of about 20 yards, & then ran for a few feet under the roof & within the walls of the factory. The referee appointed to determine the value to be paid by the council to the co. determined that the car factory was not suitable to & used by the co. for the purposes of their undertaking within the district, & he awarded nothing to be paid in respect thereof, & he awarded & determined the value of the portion of the permanent way of the tramway upon the land of the co., including the entrance gates, but not including the value of any buildings, to be the sum of £125:—Held: the local authority were not bound to purchase or pay for the whole or any part of the car factory or of the land belonging to the tramway co.—*NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS CO. v. 113. Price—Basis of valuation—"Tramway"

Cost of construction less proper deduction for depreciation.]—Applts., the Edinburgh Street Tramways co., were authorised to construct tramways by a private Act which incorporated the general provisions of Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78). Resps., the Lord Provost, etc., of Edinburgh, the local authority, gave notice in 1892, under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, to purchase applts.' undertaking:—Held: (1) on a sale to the local authority, the local authority become entitled to the exclusive use of the tramways, not by transference of any right from the promoters, but by virtue of the statute alone; (2) the word "tramway" could not be read as synonymous with "undertaking" but was used in Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), as meaning the structure laid down on the highway, & nothing more; therefore the "then value of the tramway" must be measured by what it would cost, at the date of the sale, to construct the lines, subject to a deduction for depreciation, & rental value must not be taken into consideration.—*EDINBURGH STREET TRAMWAYS CO. v. The London County Council, as successors to the Metropolitan Board of Works, required the co. to sell:—Held: (1) the word "tramway" meant the structure laid down & nothing more & did not include the statutory powers conferred on the co.; & (2) the arbitrator was right in rejecting all evidence of past & future profits, including evidence of the rental value of the tramways considered as let or capable of being let to a tenant, & in awarding that "the then value of the tramway & all lands, buildings, works," etc., must be measured by what it would cost to establish the tramway if it did not then exist, subject to a proper deduction in respect of depreciation.—LONDON STREET TRAMWAYS CO. v. A tramway co. were required by the local authority to sell their undertaking under the above sect. At the date of the requisition it was the practice, upon an application for Parliamentary powers by the promoters of a tramway, to require, as a condition of their obtaining such powers, that the streets in which the tramway was to be laid should be widened, & that the promoters should contribute a certain proportion of the cost of the widening. But at the date when the co. obtained their Parliamentary powers that practice had not come into existence, & the streets in which their tramway was laid were in fact never widened:—Held: for the purpose of assessing "the then value" of the tramway under the above sect., the fact that the local authority would, if they had to make the tramway themselves at the date of their requisition to sell, have to contribute to the cost of widening the streets ought not to be taken into consideration.—LONDON, DEPTFORD & GREENWICH TRAMWAYS CO. v. (a) a sum in respect of the cost of raising capital; (b) a sum in respect of interest on capital during construction; & he held that neither of these two sums was subject to depreciation; but (c) that a sum which he allowed in respect of the cost of engineering was subject to depreciation. The arbitrator further allowed a sum in respect of the expenditure on alterations to a bridge in the following circumstances. In the order authorising the construction of the tramway a provision was inserted at the instance of a railway co., over whose lines the tramway passed by a bridge, that if the railway co. required at any time to make structural alterations to the bridge the promoters should temporarily divert the tramway. Some years afterwards the railway co. did so require, & the tramway was temporarily diverted:—Held: (1) the cost of raising capital could not be allowed; (2) the cost of diversion of the bridge could not be allowed; (3) the interest on capital during construction should be subject to depreciation in so far as the capital on which it was the interest was subject to depreciation, that is to say, according to whether the capital was spent on depreciating things, such as rails, or on a non-depreciating thing, such as excavation; (4) & the decision of the arbitrator that the cost of engineering should be subject to depreciation was a decision on a question of fact, with which the ct. could not interfere.—OLDHAM, ASHTON & HYDE ELECTRIC TRAMWAYS, LTD. v. The tramway within the city of M. belonged to the corp'n., but had been leased to the co. until Nov. 30, 1902. The tramway outside the city belonged to the co. The local authority gave notice to purchase under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 43, & the amount of the purchase-money was to be ascertained by arbn. The arbitrator made his award in the form of a special case, awarding different amounts. If the local authority was compelled to purchase the whole plant & stock of the co. a much larger amount was payable than if the local authority was only bound to take over a proportion of the stock & plant bearing the same proportion to the whole stock & plant of the co. that the tramway without the city bore to the whole tramway the co. formerly worked. The special case had been heard by the judge & was under appeal. The local authority claimed to be entitled to take possession of the line of the co. before the purchase-money had been finally ascertained:—Held: even if there had been a concluded agreement, it was impossible to say that property contracted to be sold could be treated as sold without payment of the purchase-money, & an injunction must be granted restraining defts. from taking or retaining possession of pltf's. property.—*MANCHESTER CARRIAGE & TRAMWAYS Co. v. 123. — Right to indemnity against contractor—Contract for repair of road between lessor & contractor—Lessee not party to contract.]—The corpn. of a borough were the owners of a tramway in the borough, & they granted a lease of the tramways, of which lease pltf's. were the assignees. Under the lease the repairs necessary to keep the tramway in working order were to be executed by the corpn. at the cost of pltf's. During the currency of the lease the tramway required to be relaid at a certain place, & an agreement was entered into between the corpn. & pltf's., which after reciting that the corpn. at the request & with the consent of pltf's. had agreed to relay the tramway, provided that the corpn. would relay the tramway, & would during the execution of the work provide where necessary a temporary track for the purpose of enabling pltf's., as far as possible, to maintain their service of trams, & the agreement further provided that nothing therein contained should render the corpn. liable in the event of any accident, injury, or damage being occasioned to or sustained by pltf's., their servants or passengers or their rolling stock through or arising out of the execution by the corpn. of the work, but that the corpn. would insert in the contract to be entered into by them a provision imposing upon the contractor full responsibility for all claims & demands resulting from any such accident, injury or damage. The corpn. thereupon made a contract with deft., to which pltf's. were not parties, which recited the lease & that the corpn. had at the request & with the consent of pltf's., subject to certain conditions, agreed to relay the tramway, & by which deft. agreed to execute the work of relaying the tramway & to indemnify the corpn. against all actions & claims for compensation to workmen & passengers carried on the tramway arising out of the execution of the work, & that deft. should, during the execution of the work, be responsible for all accidents. During the execution of the work the tramcars continued to run, & a car which was carrying passengers was derailed & overturned owing to the negligent manner in which certain of the work was being carried out at the place where the accident happened, & the passengers & driver were injured & the tramcar was damaged. Pltf's. paid compensation to the passengers & driver, & claimed to recover from deft. the amounts so paid & the cost of repairing the tramcar:—Held: though pltf's. were not parties to the contract between the corporation & deft. inasmuch as pltf's. proprietary right as lessees of the tramway & their right of passage on the highway had been injuriously affected by the act of deft. & the latter was liable in damages to pltf & as the work of relaying the tramway while the tramcars were running involved risk of danger to the passengers in the tramcars, pltf's. were liable to their passengers, & were entitled to recover from deft. the sum properly paid as compensation to the passengers who were injured, as well as the sum paid as compensation to the driver & the cost of repairing the tramcar.—*CITY OF BIRMINGHAM TRAMWAYS Co., LTD. v. 124. Liabilities of lessees—To pay local & imperial assessments, rates & taxes—Covenant to keep lessors "free from all expenses whatever."]—The corpn. of Glasgow agreed to borrow money & to construct certain tramways in Glasgow & lease the undertaking to the Glasgow Tramway co. for twenty-three years. The co. agreed to make various payments to the corpn., & then agreed as follows: "The company shall also pay to the corpn. the expenses of borrowing, management, etc., & this provision shall be so construed as to keep the corpn. free from all expenses whatever in connection with the tramways." The lease exceeding twenty-one years, the co. under Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854 (c. 91), s. 6, became primarily liable to pay & did pay during the whole term of the lease, "owner's assessments, rates & taxes," amounting in the aggregate to over £14,000. During the currency of the lease the co. intimated to the corpn. that they had a claim in this respect, but did not make any deduction from the rent when paid. The co. contended that the corpn. ought to reimburse them these outgoings or such other sum as might be ascertained to be the amount of owner's assessments, rates & taxes paid by the co. during the lease:—Held: the assessments, rates & taxes, whether imperial or local, levied on the owner in respect of a tramway or other erection in solo, were an expense connected with the tramway or erection, & that the co. were bound by their lease to relieve the

125. — Failure to provide sufficient service—Summary recovery of penalties—Jurisdiction of court.—By an agreement made in 1902 between the D. corp'n. & the D. Tramways co. & scheduled to the D. corp'n. (General Powers) Act, 1902 (c. cccxiv), it was agreed that the corp'n. should construct certain tramways authorised by that & previous Acts, & on completion should lease them to the co. The agreement provided that the co. should be liable to a penalty if they did not give such a service as the corp'n. might reasonably require in the public interest. The Act of 1902, by sect. 13, ratified & confirmed the agreement, & provided that "any penalty under the agreement may be recovered in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts." The corp'n. constructed the tramways & granted a lease to the co. in 1908 by which the co. covenanted that they would provide such a service as might be reasonably required by the corp'n. in the public interest, & that, if they failed to do this, the co. should be liable to a penalty. It was further provided that "any question which may arise as to the service of cars required in the public interest may be determined on the application of the co. or of the corp'n. or other body or persons by the Board of Trade"; & by a general clause it was provided that if any difference should arise between the corp'n. & the co. it should be determined by an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade. The corp'n. summoned the co. for penalties for failure to provide such services as were required by the lease:—Held: (1) the words in sect. 13 of the Act of 1902, "any penalty under the agreement," included a penalty under the lease, & although the agreement was merged in the lease, the penalties were recoverable summarily; (2) having regard to the position taken by the co., no difference had arisen between the co. & the corp'n. so as to make the provision for arb'n. applicable, & the jurisdiction of the justices was not ousted.—R. v. DEVONPORT J.J., Ex p. DEVONPORT TRAMWAYS CO. (1909), 101 L. T. 424; 73 J. P. 393; 7 L. G. R. 1028, D. C.

126. Stamp duties—Covenants by lessees to pay annual sum in lieu of repairing road—& to pay minimum sum for electrical energy.—By a lease of tramways to a traction co. by a municipal corp'n., made pursuant to Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), the co. were to pay rent at a fixed rate per cent. on the cost of the original purchase. They were also to pay to the lessors a given sum per mile of road along which the tramways were laid, in lieu of repairing any portion of such road, & maintaining the tramways, except the rails & electric bonds laid thereon. The minimum amount payable under this clause was £900 per annum, & a power of distress was reserved in respect of it. They were also bound to purchase from the vendors all electrical energy required for the purpose of the tramways, & to pay for same at a given rate, the minimum sum payable in any one year being £4,000. On a case stated:—Held: (1) the £900 payable in respect of the repair of the road was rent, & that ad valorem duty was payable upon it under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 4; (2) the £4,000 payable in respect of the supply of electrical energy was not rent, but it was payable under a covenant made in further consideration for the lease, & relating to the matter of the lease, within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 77 (2), & the instrument was not chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of it.—*BRITISH ELECTRIC TRACTION CO. v. 127. — Obstruction—By driver of another vehicle—No room to pass on near side of road.—The single lines of a tramway constructed under an Act of Parliament were at one place on a road, on an incline some 250 or 300 yards long, so placed that there was no room for a vehicle to pass between a tramcar & the kerb on one side of the road. At the top & at the bottom of the incline were loops which would enable a tram to pass another vehicle on that side of the road. There was ample room for a vehicle to pass a tramcar on the other side of the road. A dray coming down the incline proceeding on its near or left side of the highway met an electric tramcar which was lawfully running on the said lines, proceeding up the hill. As there was no room to pass both vehicles stopped, & remained facing each other for fifty minutes, at the end of which time the tramcar backed to the loop at the bottom of the incline. The driver of the dray had been instructed by his employers not to cross over the tramlines on to his wrong side to make way for tramcars. A summons was taken out under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), s. 50, against the drayman for wilfully obstructing the tramcar. The justices dismissed the summons, saying that they were of opinion that the drayman had not acted unlawfully in maintaining his right to drive on his left or customary driving side, & that consequently there had been no wilful obstruction on the part of resp. They consented to state a case:—Held: as there was a doubt as to whether the justices meant that the drayman had an absolute right to continue on his left hand side or merely that, owing to the action of the tramcar driver, the drayman's obstruction was not wilful, the case must be remitted to the justices to decide whether there had been wilful obstruction on the part of the drayman, with the direction that the drayman had no absolute right to maintain his course on the left, putting the tramcar driver to any amount of inconvenience, & the tramcar driver had no absolute right to make all other vehicles get out of his way, if, by acting reasonably, he could avoid inconvenience to them. The drivers of both vehicles must act reasonably.—HARTLEY v. CHADWICK (1904), 88 J. P. 512, D. C.

129. What amounts to abandonment.—By a special Act of 1885 a tramway co. was authorised to construct a tramway & a deposit was ordered to be paid.

The Parliamentary Deposits & Bonds Act, 1892, (c. 27) s. 1, provided that where in pursuance of any general or special Act of Parliament moneys had been deposited “to secure the completion by any co.” of any undertaking authorised by Parliament, & the undertaking had “not been completed” within the time limited in that behalf, the deposit fund should be applied towards compensating landowners &, in the case of a tramway co., the road authorities, & subject thereto, if, among other things, a receiver had been appointed, or the undertaking had been abandoned, for the benefit of the creditors of the co. The special Act of 1885 contained a substantially similar provision as to the application of the deposit fund if the co. did not complete the tramway within the time limit. In 1904, when the tramway had not been completed & before the expiration of the period for completion, a receiver of the undertaking of the co. was appointed & the uncompleted tramway was acquired by the London County Council under the powers of a special Act:—Held: (1) that both under the special Act of 1885 & under the general Act the deposit was paid to secure the completion of the undertaking by the co., & inasmuch as that event could never happen by reason of the transfer of the undertaking the time had passed within which the co. could complete; & (2) there had been an abandonment of the undertaking, by the co.; (3) the deposit moneys paid under the Act of 1885 were applicable for the benefit of creditors of the co. subject to the prior claims, if any, of the landowners & road authorities.—Re PECKHAM, DULWICH & CRYSTAL PALACE TRAMWAYS BILL, [1910] 2 Ch. 1; 79 L. SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

132. Definitions—Light railway—Whether “railway.”—A light railway constructed under an order made under 1896 Act is a “railway” within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 4, which exempts from the licence duty on “carriages” thereby imposed any carriage drawn or propelled upon a railway by steam or electricity or other mechanical power.—A. B. Construction of Order.

243. Purchase by local authority—Price—Basis of valuation.]—By an agreement entered into between an electric traction co. & the corpn. of a borough, after reciting that the corpn. had withdrawn their opposition to a Light Railways Order which the co. were promoting upon the terms thereinafter appearing, it was agreed that the co. should construct railway, No. 5 under the Order, & should on the expiration of a period of four years from the making of the Order, sell the railway to the corpn. at a price to be settled, in case of difference, by the Board of Trade, for which an arbitrator was subsequently substituted, & the Order authorised the corpn. to purchase this railway at the time & in the manner prescribed by the agreement:—Held: on the construction of the agreement & the Order, that the price must be fixed upon the basis of a valuation of the structural value of the railway regarded as a railway in situ capable of earning a profit, & not upon the basis of the value of the railway to the co. as an income earning concern.—DUDLEY CORPN. v. See Cases infra.

PART IV.

a. Procedure—When aid given to railway.—Although, under 54 Vict. c. 42, s. 26 (O.), it is necessary, when aid is sought to be granted to a street railway by a portion of a municipality, that a majority in number representing one-half in value of the persons shown by the last assessment roll to be the owners of real property in such portion should petition for the passing of the bye-law, it is sufficient if the bye-law is carried at the poll by a majority of those voting upon it.—ADAMSON v. ETOBICOKE TOWNSHIP CORPN. (1892), 22 O. R. 341.—CAN.

b. Submission to electors—Consent given to railway to use streets.—A bye-law passed by a municipal council by which consent was given to the use by the British Columbia Electric Ry. Co. of the street of the municipality for their tramway lines, was quashed because it had not been submitted to the vote of the electors of a municipality, as required by Municipal Clauses Act, 1906, s. 64.—Re POINT GREY BYE-LAW No. 15 (B. C.) (1911), 19 W. L. R. 638.—CAN.

d. ————A bye-law of a municipality purported to empower a street ry. co. to construct a line of railway upon certain streets of the municipality:—Held: the bye-law had no legal effect since it had not been submitted to the people as required by statute.—MITCHELL & DRESCH v. SANDWICH, WINDSOR & AMHERSTBURG RY. (1915), 26 O. W. R. 658; 3 O. W. N. 659; 7 O. W. N. 508; 32 O. L. R. 594; 22 D. L. R. 531; 19 Can. Ry. Cas. 300.—CAN.

f. ————By agreement between the city of Hamilton & the Hamilton Street Ry. Co. the latter was authorised to construct its railway on certain named streets & agreed to pay to the city, inter alia, certain percentages on their gross receipts:—Held: such payment applies in respect to all traffic in the city including that originating or terminating in the adjoining township of Barton.—HAMILTON STREET RY. CO. v. CITY OF HAMILTON CORPN. (1906), 38 S. C. R. 106.—CAN.

k. To order whom should pay for construction.—The Corp'n. of the city of Vancouver, wishing to alter the grading of four streets in the city which were crossed by the tracks of a Dominion ry. applied to the Board of Ry. Comrs. for Canada for authority to carry the streets over the railway tracks on bridges. Along two of the streets in question a railway co., working wholly within the Province under provincial statutory authority, ran tramways. The Board authorised the work & ordered that a part of the cost of construction should be borne by the provincial co., on the ground that that co. would benefit by the alteration:—Held: the order, so far as it imposed part of the cost of the proposed work upon the provincial ry. co., was not within the powers conferred upon the Board of Ry. Comrs. by a Railway Act & was invalid.—BRITISH COLUMBIA ELECTRIC RY. CO., LTD. v. VANCOUVER, VICTORIA & EASTERN RY. & NAVIGATION CO. & VANCOUVER CORPN., [1914] A. C. 1067, P. C.—CAN.

ff. Liability for rates—After termination of franchise.—A street ry. co. in Toronto was to be assessed in respect of repairs to the roadway traversed by the railway, as for local improvements, which, by the Municipal Act, constitute a lien upon the property assessed, but not a personal liability upon owners or occupiers after they have ceased to be such:

—Held: after the termination of its franchise the co. was not liable for these rates.—TORONTO CITY v. TORONTO STREET RY. CO. (1894), 23 S. C. R. 198.—CAN.

gg. Right to lay lines—Construction of authority given.—Where a municipal council granted to a railway co. authority to construct, maintain, & operate railways in its street, with the exclusive right to such portion of any street as should be occupied by the railway, but with the plain intent that the co. should have no concern whatever with any portions of any street not in actual occupation by their rails:—Held: a subsequent clause in the deed of grant, giving to the co. the refusal, on terms, of other streets in the city for railway purposes, was insufficient to constitute, contrary to the plain meaning of the previous stipulations, a right of monopoly in any of the streets of the city.—WINNIPEG STREET RY. CO. v. WINNIPEG ELECTRIC STREET RY. CO. & WINNIPEG CITY, [1894] A. C. 615.—CAN.

hh. Construction of judgment.—An Ord. in Council in pursuance of the judgment of their Lordships (1907) A. C. 315 ordered that subject to certain conditions contained in their agreement it was for resps. & not applts. to determine what new lines should be laid down on streets within the city of Toronto. Thereafter an order was made by the Ontario Railway & Municipal Board that resps. construct between ten & fifteen additional miles of single track, & the co. selected certain streets for that purpose. Subsequently the Court of Appeal for Ontario affirmed a decision of the said Board that the co. had the right to select:—Held: the judgment in (1907) A. C. 315 was perfectly clear & the Order in Council thereon was unaffected by Ontario Act, 8 Edw. 7, c. 112, s. 1.—TORONTO CORPN. v. TORONTO RY. CO., [1910] A. C. 312, P. C.—CAN.

ll. Omission to lay or keep rails flush with streets—What is appropriate form of action—Indictment.—Defts. Act of Incorpor. required that "the rails of their railway shall be laid flush with the streets & highways, & the railway track shall conform to the grades of the same, so as to offer the least possible impediment to the ordinary traffic of the said streets & highways":—Held: an omission to lay the rails flush with the street would be indictable, without showing that any unnecessary impediment was offered to the traffic.—*R. v. g. ———.—Duty of company to operate cars over street specified in prior agreement.—The promoters of a street ry. co. entered into an agreement with a city corpn. in 1888, & agreed to run cars along Douglas Street to the northern boundary of the city limits. They became incorporated as a joint stock co., & in 1890 obtained a charter authorising the construction of tramways connecting the country districts with the city system, & in pursuance of the new powers continued the Douglas Street tramway northerly along the Spanish road. Traffic on this extension was discontinued in 1898, because it did not pay. In 1892 the city limits were extended so as to include a portion of the Spanish road on which the tramway had been built. In 1894 the co. obtained a private Act for the consolidation & confirmation of their rights, powers, & privileges, & ratifying the agreement of 1888, between the city & the original promoters.—Held: in an action for a declaration that the co. were bound to operate their tram system along Douglas Street to the extended city limits, that the co. were not bound to do so. Quære, whether a rate-payer could sue.—*YATES v. rr. ———.—A newly constructed portion of a railway had a depression or "sink hole" in the roadbed which arose from an inherent weakness of the ground under the roadbed. The engineer, while driving a train over the said "sink hole," was killed by reason of the derailment of the train. At the time of the accident the deceased was driving the train at a rate of speed in excess of five miles per hour in violation of the express prohibition of the railway co.:—Held: the roadbed at the place where the accident occurred, although safe if passed over at the rate of five miles an hour, was dangerous if that speed were exceeded: that, therefore, the failure of the engineer to observe the express order of the railway co. was the proximate cause of the accident.—LEWIS v. GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RY. CO. (No. 2) (1914), 29 W. L. R. 969; 7 W. W. R. 504; affd., 52 S. C. R. 227.—CAN.

tt. ———.—Wrongful act of servant—Pushing newsboy off car.—Defts. were held not liable where the motorman of one of their electric cars, who had no control over or authority to interfere with passengers or persons on the cars, pushed off the car a newsboy who was getting on to sell a paper to a passenger.—COLL v. TORONTO RY. CO. (1898), 25 A. R. 55.—CAN.

uu. ———.—Standard of care.—It is the duty of a motorman in charge of an electric car on a street railway to take special care to have the car sufficiently under control to enable him to avoid collision with aged & infirm persons on foot whose infirmities are plainly evident & who may be crossing the line of railway at a street crossing.—*HAIGHT v. Part I.—In General.

SECT. 1.—CHARACTERISTICS.

1. What amounts to trespass—Injury resulting from legal act.—Trespass will not lie for an injury which is the consequence of a legal act.—WIGFORD v. GILL (1592), Cro. Eliz. 269; 78 E. R. 524.

Annotation:—Refd. Wiltshire v. Sildford (1827), 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 151.

2. ——— Purely accidental.—If in the prosecution of a lawful act an accident purely accidental arise, no action can be supported for an injury arising from such accident.—DAVIS v. SAUNDERS (1770), 2 Chit. 639.

3. ——— Unintentional act.—ANON. (1406), Y. B. 6 Edw. 4, fo. 7, pl. 18.

Annotations:—Consd. Lambert v. Bessey (1680), T. Raym. 467; Smith v. Kenrick (1849), 7 C. B. 515. Refd. Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 2 Wm. Bl. 892.

4. ——— ——No man shall be excused of a trespass . . . except it may be judged utterly without his fault (per CUR.)—WEAVER v. WARD (1616), as reported in Hob. 134; 80 E. R. 284.

Annotations:—Consd. Stanley v. Powell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 86. Refd. Anon. (1676), 1 Vent. 295; Bessey v. Olliot & Lambert (1682), T. Raym. 467; Dickenson v. Watson (1682), T. Jo. 205; Gibbon v. Pepper (1695), 2 Salk. 637; R. v. Keble (1656), 1 Ld. Raym. 138; R. v. Gill (1719), 1 Stra. 190; Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403; M'Manus v. Chickett (1800), 1 East, 106; Leame v. 34. —.—If A. imprison B., & in continuation of that imprisonment, A. deliver B. into the charge of C., who keeps B. in custody, the acts & declarations of C. are evidence against A., in an action for false imprisonment.

Pltf. who brings an action for false imprisonment against several defendants jointly, may either recover against all for any joint act of imprisonment committed by the whole of them, or may give evidence of an act of imprisonment committed by one, two, or more of the number, & recover against such deft. or defts. only (GARROW, B.).—*POWELL v. 35. —.—A sailor who had lodged for some weeks at a public-house, & also received advances of cash from the person who kept it, having been paid his wages in the presence of the father of the publican, went to the house of the latter, & there, after drinking some spirits, became intoxicated, & fell asleep. The father of the publican, in his son's presence, desired a young woman, an acquaintance of the sailor, to take the money out of his pocket, which she did, & laid it on the table. It was £13 17s. 6d. The publican took it up & said he would keep it till the man got sober. The father told her to say, when the sailor awoke, that his money was lost. The publican said she had better be there in the morning when he settled with the sailor. When he awoke & asked for his money, the father said it was all right till the morning. After this, by desire of the sailor, £1 in silver was given to the young woman out of the money, & the next morning, on his applying for the remainder, he was offered 2s. & some copper as the balance, after deducting what he owed the publican:—Held: a joint action of trespass was maintainable against both the publican & his father, & the sailor was entitled to recover the whole amount taken from him without any other deduction than that of the £1 afterwards given to the woman.—PEDELL v. RUTTER (1837), 8 C. & P. 337; 173 E. R. 521, N. P.

36. Action for trespass at particular time—Defendants present at different times—Duty of plaintiff to elect.—In a joint action of trespass pltf. should go for one trespass done at the same time, in which all were implicated; & if he goes for a trespass done at a time when all were not present he shall not afterwards be allowed to go for a time when they were.—SEDDLEY v. SUTHERLAND (1800), 3 Esp. 202; 170 E. R. 588, N. P.

37. — — — — —]—(1) Where a distress was put into pltf.'s premises for rent on the 13th, & on the fifth day after, the 18th, pltf. entered into an agreement, whereby, in consideration of the landlord giving her the furniture distrained for rent, she undertook to give possession of the premises on or before one week from the date thereof, that is, by the 25th:—Held: such agreement amounted to leave & licence, which covered the alleged trespasses of breaking & entering, stopping chimneys, taking keys, etc., committed after the 25th.

(2) When an action is brought for trespasses, alleged to have been committed within a certain time, which may have been committed within such time by some, but cannot possibly have been committed by all defts., pltf. must make an election, & proceed either for that set of trespasses which may have been committed by some, or by all; he cannot proceed against all, for those trespasses which could be committed only by some.—FELTHAM v. CARTWRIGHT (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 569; 7 Scott, 695; 9 L. J. C. P. 67; 3 Jur. 606; 132 E. R. 1219.

38. Person inducing others to trespass—Not committing trespass himself.—Where a person goes out sporting with his friends, & purposely leads them on to another's land, he is equally guilty of a trespass, although he may remain off the land whilst his friends go on it.—HILL v. WALKER (1806), Peake, Add. Cas. 234; 170 E. R. 256, N. P.

39. Necessity for suing all parties.—Where B. commits a trespass on land of A., by the direction & for the benefit of C., & A. sues B. alone, the ct. will not order C. to pay A.'s costs.

There is a material distinction between an action of trespass quare clausum fregit & an action of ejectment. In ejectment no person is allowed to defend as tenant but the party in actual possession; in trespass, all the parties may be sued. Before the writ issues pltf. should take the trouble to inquire what parties are chargeable with the trespass of which he complains (LORD TENTERDEN,

C.J.).—BERKELEY v. DEMERY (1830), 10 B. & C. 113; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 442; 109 E. R. 393.

40. Evidence—Judgment by default against one defendant—Evidence to affect others only required.—

In trespass against several, if any suffer judgment by default, pltf. need only give evidence to affect the rest. It is matter for the jury whether the trespass proved be the same as that confessed, but pltf. cannot be non-suited.—HARRIS v. BUTTERLEY (1776), 2 Cowp. 483; 98 E. R. 1109.

41. — — — — — Where justification that defendants acting in aid of civil authority—In dispersing riotous assembly.—Trespass by A. against B., C., D. & E. Plea, not guilty, & justifications (inter alia) that defts. were acting in aid of civil authority in executing a warrant, & also in dispersing a riotous & unlawful assembly, at which A. was present, etc.

A. proves that he was struck by B. whilst he & C., D. & E. were acting with a common object, as the members of a yeomanry corps of cavalry; he cannot go into evidence to show that other individuals were wounded on that occasion.—REDFORD v. BIRLEY (1822), 1 State Tr. N. S. 1071; 3 Stark. 76; 171 E. R. 773, N. P.

42. — — — — — Words of defendant indicating liability.—

A party of eight persons hired a carriage & four horses with two post boys for the day, to go to Epsom races. Deft., one of the party, was seated on the box, & could see what the post boys were doing. They left the line of carriages, without any directions to do so, & without deft.'s interfering to prevent it. In making an attempt to cut into the line again pltf.'s gig was upset. In answer to a demand for the name of the owner of the carriage, & the master of the post boys, deft. said he would be responsible. Three weeks afterwards, he said the accident was occasioned by pltf.'s fault, & that he had intended after they had got into the line to have pulled up & let pltf. in in front of them:—Held: in an action of trespass, upon this evidence deft. was liable as a co-trespasser, as present at & sanctioning the wrongful act of the post boys; & in such action it was immaterial whether the relation of master & servant existed between them or not.—M'LAUGHLIN v. PRYOR (1842), 4 Man. & G. 48; 4 Scott, N. R. 655; 11 L. J. C. P. 169; 6 Jur. 372; 134 E. R. 21.

43. Proof of joint trespass—Right to abandon joint trespass after proof—To prove different trespass by one defendant.—In an action of trespass against several, pltf. having proved a joint trespass committed by all defts. cannot waive that, & give evidence of another trespass committed by only one deft.—TAIT v. The judge, in summing up, told the jury that on the pleadings it was admitted that the goods were bonâ fide taken in execution under the writ; on which point, therefore, he did not ask their opinion; & that the main question was, whether or not the property was in pltf., the burden of proving which fact lay on him:—Held: a misdirection. The purpose for which these ponds were used was the storage of oysters, which were brought from elsewhere & laid down in the ponds in order to be fattened for the market. Certain ponds of this kind, which were enclosed by boards or concrete, were, & for more than twenty years had been, used in the manner above mentioned by pltf., who had purchased them in 1870 from others who had for a period of between twenty & thirty years previously so used them. There was some evidence that the foreshore had formed part of the waste of a manor, the lord of which had a several fishery thereon.

h. Notice of approval of application

Defts. were an urban district council which had been constituted in 1894, their district being carved out of that of a previously existing rural sanitary authority. A sewer had been made in the district by the rural sanitary authority, from which an inconsiderable quantity of sewage had been discharged into the sea near the oyster ponds. Defts. made certain new sewers, & connected them with the first-mentioned sewer, & the quantity of sewage discharged from that sewer was thereby greatly increased. The sewage so discharged caused a nuisance to pltf.'s oyster ponds through pollution of the same with sewage to an extent which rendered them unfit for use. In an action by pltf. against defts. in respect of the nuisance so caused:—Held: irrespectively of the question of title to the soil or to a several fishery, pltf., as occupier of the oyster ponds, was entitled to maintain an action for trespass to the same by wrongdoers; defts., not having any right to discharge sewage into the sea so as to cause a nuisance, & having by their acts of commission caused such a discharge of sewage, were wrongdoers; & therefore the action was maintainable.—*FOSTER v. 84. — — —.] — Action against true owner.] — Certain premises were let to pltf. by P., who had previously mortgaged them to defts., the trustees of a benefit building society, to secure payment of subscriptions, etc., which might become due from him to the society. The mtge. deed gave power to defts. to distrain the goods of P., on the premises, for arrears of subscriptions due to the society, as for rent due on a demise. Defts. distrained on the premises for subscriptions due from P., & seized pltf.'s goods. Pltf. replevied the goods, & recovered in the action of replevin, in the county ct., as damages, the amount of the expenses of the replevin bond. Having sustained further consequential damages by reason of the seizure of his goods, he subsequently brought an action of trespass in the superior ct. to recover these damages, & also in respect of the trespass to the land:—Held: (1) the judgment in replevin was a bar to the action in respect of trespass to the goods, inasmuch as the special damage was recoverable in the action of replevin; (2) with respect to the trespass to the land; the judgment in replevin was no bar to the action, but defts. were entitled to the verdict on a plea of not possessed, inasmuch as they had done no act to recognise pltf. as a tenant.

It is said that pltf. can recover in respect of the trespass to the land, because he was the person in actual possession. It is clear, however, that defts. were the real owners & entitled to the possession of the land, & as against them the tenant could be at the very most merely a tenant at sufferance, & could not maintain trespass as against them (BOVILL, C.J.).—*GIBBS v. 99. ———— Pltfs. were incorporated under a local Act of 1883, for protecting Canvey Island in Essex from inundation by the sea. They succeeded former comrs. appointed by an Act of 1792, which contained a power for these comrs. under sect. 13 to erect a new sea wall further inward, on giving compensation to the owner whose land was taken for this purpose. In 1813 the new wall, 4,300 feet in length, was built, & £150 given as compensation to the owner of the land taken. Under the Act of 1883 the property & rights of the former comrs. were vested in pltfs. who had power under that Act to hold lands. Pltfs. claimed to be owners in possession of the foreshore between the new & the old wall. Deflt. claimed under a conveyance of Apr. 1919, to be the freeholder in possession of a strip of land comprising part of this foreshore, & to be entitled as of right to excavate & remove shells & other drift even although as pltfs. alleged, it deprived the new wall of protection & support, & exposed it to injury by the action of wind & water. The greater risk to the wall in consequence of deflt.'s action was established by the evidence. In an action by pltfs. to restrain deflt. from so removing the drift, & from trespassing on their land:—Held: pltfs.

had established their statutory title under the Acts of 1792 & 1883 to the whole of the land taken & set out pursuant to sect. 13 of the first Act, & had exercised specific acts of ownership over the foreshore. The possession of pltfs. & of deflt. being at most doubtful or equivocal the law attached possession to the title.—CANVEY ISLAND COMRS. v. PREEDY, [1922] 1 Ch. 179; 91 L. J. Ch. 203; 126 L. He then brought trespass describing the premises as "a room of pltf." 1. Proof of former occupation.—In an action of trespass to a sheep station, in which deft. has pleaded "not possessed," pltf. is entitled to prove possession of the part of the station trespassed on, by showing that the former occupier, from whom he farm. Pltf.'s farm extended lower down on the one side of the stream than deft.'s & terminated opposite another farm, called C. which adjoined deft.'s, & which was bounded by the same continuous hedge:—Held: acts of ownership exercised by pltf. on the bed & banks of the stream & on the hedge at the farm of C. were admissible in support of pltf.'s claim.

It is impossible, in the nature of things, to confine the evidence to the very precise spot on which the alleged trespass may have been committed; evidence may be given of acts done on other parts, provided there is such a common character of locality between these parts & the spot in question as would raise a reasonable inference in the minds of the jury, that the place in dispute belonged to pltf. if the other parts did (PARKE, B.).—JONES v. 116. ————J.]—By an award made under an Inclosure Act, passed in 1766, two private roads, E. & H., were set out. About 1818, the road E. became a public highway. Down to 1863, the surveyors of highways for the parish of C., within which E. & H. were situate, had from time to time let the pasturage upon E. & H. to various persons. A local board was formed in 1863 for the parish of C., who in 1876 let the pasturage upon E. & H. to pltf. He thereupon commenced to depasture the herbage with his cattle on the road. Deft. interfered with pltf.'s enjoyment of the pasturage:—Held: the local board having no power to demise H., being a private way, pltf. had not sufficient exclusive possession as occupier to enable him to maintain an action.

It is difficult to say that there is a de facto possession, when there is no possession except of those parts of the lane which are in actual possession, & these is an interference with the enjoyment of the parts which are not in actual possession. My meaning is this, if there were an inclosed field & a man had turned his cattle into it, & had locked the gate; he might well claim to have a de facto possession of the whole field; but if there were an un-inclosed common of a mile in length, & he turned one horse on one end of the common he could not be said to have a de facto possession of the whole length of the common. If it would not be a de facto possession it would be a nominal possession. If no right were attached to it, it would not be a constructive possession (BRAMWELL, L.J.).—COVERDALE v. During four months in the year, A. exercised the privilege of shooting over the land, & by his permission another person took the grass:—Held: the payment of the rent, the exercise of the privilege of shooting, & the taking of the grass was sufficient evidence to show that A. was in the actual possession of the land, so as to entitle him to maintain trespass.

(2) A. occupied under a parol licence from the Crown, & the rent paid by him was much less than one third of the annual value of the land:—Held: as A. had no legal conveyance from the Crown by matter of record, & as the rent reserved was not one-third of the annual value of the land, as purchased, occupied the ground in question.—LESTER v. GIRARD (1848), 1 Legge, 463.—AUS.

On this receipt was indorsed a certificate of the sale & terms thereof, signed by the Crown land agents:—Held: sufficient, under 23 Vict. c. 2, to entitle pltf. to maintain trespass for cutting trees after the date of the certificate, but before the statute.—WHITING v. r. General entry on plot.]—The lines having been run by a provincial land surveyor between pltf.'s & deft.'s lot, it was found that deft. had encroached on a small portion of pltf.'s land, which he refused to give up:—Held: the general entry of pltf. on his lot, before deft. had encroached required by Crown Lands Acts, 1702 (c. 7), s. 5, he had no legal right to retain possession of the land as against the Crown, but as he occupied with the permission of the Crown, his possession was sufficient to enable him to maintain trespass against a wrong-doer.—HARPER v. Action against persons claiming right of way—Highway authority aiding in proof of right—Joinder of highway authority as defendant.]—Where an action for trespass is brought against persons who claim a right of way, & the highway authority of the district resolve to assist defts. in proving that there is such a right of way, such highway authority can be added as defts. to the action.

The owner of an estate closed & locked the gates of a carriage drive upon the estate, with the object of excluding the public. Three persons broke the locks & entered upon the drive for the purpose of asserting a public right of way over it, upon which the owner brought an action against them for trespass. The Andover Rural District Council, acting under Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 26, passed a resolution that the council should assist defts. in the action, in order that the right of way might be maintained, & instructed the clerk to the council to take all necessary steps. The owner thereupon obtained leave to amend his

n. Right of corporation to maintain action in absence of bye-law.]—A township corp., without having passed any bye-law on the subject, can maintain trespass for cutting & carrying away trees growing upon Govt. allowances for roads; for the power to pass bye-laws for preserving or selling such trees gave them also a right to recover from a wrongdoer their value, which

131. —Assignment to solicitor by way of security.—Subsequent trespass by execution against assignor.—After verdict, but before judgment, W, pltf. in ejectment, on July 11, assigned a field of potatoes, with the crop growing on it, which he held under a lease, the subject-matter of the action, to his attorney in the action, as a security for money advanced by the attorney, & for the amount due for costs already incurred in the action. One of defts., a sheriff's officer, on July 17, seized the crop of potatoes, under a fi fa, against W. On the same day, but afterwards, possession was delivered by another sheriff's officer of the field in question, under a habere facias possessionem, to W., who immediately transferred the possession to an agent attending for the attorney. On July, 30 the first sheriff's officer sold the potatoes, by auction, as a separate lot, after notice given him of pltf.'s title, to J, who, after taking an assignment of the lease from the sheriff entered & took the potatoes:—Held: an action quare clausum fregit lay for the attorney against the sheriff & his officers as his title related back to the time when it accrued.—RADCLIFFE v. PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4.—A.

f. Owner of private property.—The charter of the Nova Scotia Telephone Co. authorised the construction & working of lines of telephone along the sides of, & across & under, any public highway or street of the city of Halifax provided that in working such lines the co. should not cut down or mutilate any trees:—Held: the owner of private property in the city could maintain an action for damages to do all that might be fit for navigation, & to build locks, etc., upon any of the lands adjoining the rivers, etc., & to make towing paths; & it was expressly provided that the undertakers of the navigation should not make any trench, river, or watercourse, or use the locks, etc. upon the land of any person until a full agreement with, & satisfaction to the owners of the land had been made by the comrs. appointed by the Act, or by the persons authorised to make the navigation, nor until satisfaction should be paid to the respective owners of the lands, according to the determination of the comrs., or by agreement by the undertakers of the navigation. By a subsequent clause, the comrs. were to determine what satisfaction any person should have in respect of any prejudice, loss, or damage, sustained for such proportion of his lands next adjoining to the navigation as should be made use of for the purposes of the Act, in case the undertakers of the navigation should not have agreed beforehand, & satisfied the party so damaged. The proprietor of the navigation having brought trespass against the owner of the adjoining land, for cutting trees upon the bank of a channel made under this Act, the judge at the trial admitted evidence of acts of ownership exercised by the proprietors of the navigation upon other parts of the banks where the adjoining land did not belong to deft., & afterwards left the question to the jury, upon conflicting acts of ownership which were given in evidence; but stated, in the course of his address, that it might be assumed from the length of time that had elapsed since the passing of the Act, & from the provision that no land of any person was to be used until satisfaction was made to the owner, that some agreement had been made, by which all the land used for the purposes of the navigation by the proprietors thereof had been sold to them by the land owners. A rule having been obtained for a new trial:—Held: (1) by virtue of the provisions of this Act of 1664, the proprietors of the navigation did not necessarily acquire such an interest in the soil in a bank adjoining to & formed out of the earth excavated from a new channel, made for the first time under the Act, as would enable them to maintain trespass; (2) acts of ownership by the proprietor of the navigation upon different parts of the bank contiguous to new channels of the navigation made under the Act of Parliament were not admissible in evidence made under the Act of Parliament were not admissible in evidence to show that the soil in the bank in question belonged to the proprietor of the navigation.—HOLLIS v. GOLDFINCH (1823), 1 B. & C. 205; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 316; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 91; 107 E. R. 76.

Owner of sub-soil—Against exclusive possessor of surface.—The owner of the subsoil may maintain trespass against a person who has the exclusive right to the possession of the surface, for making holes of such a depth as to interfere with the right of the owner in the subsoil. Where the injury merely affects the surface, as in the case of a riding on a horse, the owner of the subsoil cannot in such case, sue in trespass.—COX v. GLUE, COX

Sect. 50 of Towns Improvement Clauses Act enacts that "the trustees of any turnpike road shall not collect any toll on any road within the limits of the special Act, or lay out any money thereon."

The provisional order, so far as the same was authorised by the Public Health Act, was afterwards confirmed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 103, & made absolute:—Held: the trustees of a turnpike road were entitled to maintain trespass for the removal of turnpike gates within the borough of T. by the local board of health acting under Towns Improvement Clauses Act 1847 (c. 34), s. 63, & believing that the same was legally incorporated by the provisional order into their local improvement Act.—*CLAYTON v. Plff. declining to sanction any other than a yearly letting, a correspondence ensued between him & deft., in which the latter intimated that, as he could not get a lease, he should leave as soon as he could, & he did leave before he had been six months in possession:—Held: he was not liable to plff., either in trespass or use & occupation; & semble, he was not liable at all.

The local education authority having ceased to maintain a non-provided school, sent their inspector, who informed the teachers & the children that the school would be closed, & told the children that they were to go to another school, & offered to the teachers employment, which they accepted, in other schools; & he wrote in the log book, "School closed, teachers transferred." The managers brought an action against the local education authority claiming damages for trespass & illegal acts in closing the school & inducing the teachers to leave the service of the managers without due justification:—Held: the managers not having pleaded or proved any special arrangement with the owner of the school building giving them possession in a legal sense, could not maintain the action.—*BLENCOWE v. Where such an ancient wall was pulled down by one of the two tenants in common, with the intention of rebuilding the same, & a new wall was built of a greater height than the old one; it was held, that this was not such a total destruction of the wall as to entitle one of the two tenants in common to maintain trespass against the other.—*CUBITT v. 146. ——Where two persons are tenants in common of a field, the merely putting, by one of them, a lock upon the gate, not shown to be kept locked, will not constitute an ouster so as to enable the co-tenant in common to maintain trespass. There must, for such a purpose, be other circumstances attending the act. A. & B. were, without the knowledge of C, tenants in common of lands. C. had held them under A. In Mar. 1867, C. received from B. notice to quit at the end of six months. He did not quit, but afterwards made an agreement with A.'s agent for the renewal of the tenancy, continued the cultivation of the land, & paid the rent under the new lease. While C. was still in possession B. demised the premises to D. as from Mar. 1868, for six months. In June, 1868, D. entered the land, cut the grass, put a lock on the gate, & carried away the grass, & stacked it as hay:—Held: assuming C. & D. to be tenants in common, these circumstances did not amount to an ouster, so as to enable C. to maintain trespass against his co-tenant in common, D.—JACOBS v. SEWARD (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 464; 41 L. J. C. P. 221; 27 L. T. 185; 36 J. P. 771, H. L.

148. Joint ownership—Owner of playing field—Field hired by committee—Plaintiff & defendant members of committee.—Trespass for assault. Plea: that deft. & twenty-one others were possessed of a close, & were thereon lawfully playing a lawful game at cricket: that pltf. came unlawfully on the close, & interrupted deft. & the twenty-one in playing the lawful game, whereupon deft., in his own right & by authority of the twenty-one, requested him to depart from the close, & desist from disturbing their game, which he refused:

whereupon deft. removed him out of the close. De injuriâ. The facts were that deft. & twenty-one others were playing, but were not otherwise possessed of the field: & pltf. interrupted them by remaining on the ground, occupied by the players, when requested to leave it:—Held: (1) the plea justified the trespass in right of the possession of the close, & was therefore not proved. Semble: that the facts might have constituted a justification in defence of the lawful game, if so pleaded.

By agreement between A., owner of a close, & the members of a committee of a cricket club, A. agreed to let to the committee, & the committee to hire, the close, to be used as a cricket ground by the club, & for that purpose only. Pltf. & deft. were members of the committee. Pltf. having sued deft. for an assault in removing pltf. from the close, deft. pleaded possession of the close in himself & justified the removal: pltf. replied that he & deft. were jointly possessed:—Held: (2) the facts supported this replication.—*HOLMES v. 155. —.]—The grant of a new lease in possession to a stranger with the oral assent of the lessee under a prior subsisting lease does not operate as a surrender at law of the prior lease, unless the tenant under such lease gives up possession to the new tenant at or about the time of the grant of the new lease to which he assents.

In 1884 N. granted a lease of certain coal mines to P. & others for a term of forty-five years from June 24, 1884. In 1887 N., with the oral assent of the lessees, granted a new lease to pltf. of, amongst other property, the same coal mines, for a term of forty-two years from June 24, 1887, but pltf. did not enter into possession of the mines under this lease, or do any working thereunder according to the covenants. The lease of 1884 was subsequently assigned by the lessees under that lease, & the coal mines comprised therein were worked by the assignees. Pltf. brought an action against N. & the assignees of the lease of 1884, claiming a declaration of his title & damages against N. for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment implied in the lease of 1887, & damages against the assignees of the lease of 1884 who had worked the coal. Pltf. alleged a binding agreement between him & the lessors of the 1884 lease, which precluded in equity the lessees & those claiming under them with notice from setting up the lease of 1884 against him:—Held: the lease of 1884 was not surrendered by operation of law; there was no such agreement between pltf. & the lessees of the 1884 lease as alleged by pltf.; pltf. having only an interesse termini, & never having been in possession, he could not maintain an action on the covenant for quiet enjoyment, or an action for trespass, or for damages in respect of trespass.—*WALLIS v. 162. Lessor retaining control of premises—Control of outer door.]—It is necessary to establish some criterion, & it is not always, perhaps, very easy to find one; but the one which has been adopted in such cases, & which is, perhaps, the most convenient, & the only one is, whether the landlord retains the control of the outer door, & has shown by his retaining the control of the outer door that he has the control of the whole of the premises; so that, although he may be liable to an action upon the breach of his contract to allow the tenant to occupy a portion of the premises so let to the tenant, yet the tenant could not maintain trespass against the landlord, because the landlord has retained in himself the dominion & control over the whole of the house (COCKBURN, C.J.).—R. v. pleaded, as to the breaking & entering the close & seizing & taking parcel of the goods & chattels, to wit, the other horse, a justification of the seizure of that horse as a heriot due in respect of another customary tenement whereof pltf.'s testator died seized. Pltfs. replied separately to each of the pleas, that defts. at the same time, place, & occasion, when they took the horse in the introductory part of that plea mentioned, also, seized & took the other horse, being the residue of the goods & chattels, under colour & pretence of the said heriot custom, & under an assertion & claim of right to seize & take the same other horse as & for the heriot custom:—Held: the replications were good, inasmuch as the seizure of the other horse rendered defts. trespassers ab initio as to the entry, as well as the seizure of the chattels.—*PRICE v. 176. Entry by police under warrant—Wrongful seizure of books & money.—[The British Columbia Prohibition Act, 1916 (c. 49), B. C., & amending Acts, consolidated for convenience in 1920, prohibited within the Province the keeping for sale or sale of "liquor" as therein defined, exception being made of liquor kept for export & in certain other cases. Penalties were thereby imposed which were to be recovered or enforced under the Summary Convictions Act, 1915 (c. 59), B. C., save so far as the Act itself provided. The Act itself contained sections dealing with procedure, & by ss. 48 & 49 police officers were given a right to search premises without warrant & to seize liquor believed to be intended for sale in violation of the Act. The Summary Convictions Act, 1915, provided procedure for the recovery or enforcement of penalties prescribed by any Act of the Province which did not itself provide the procedure.]

Appls., who were dealers in liquor as importers into & exporters from the Province, had in their warehouse there on July 15, 1920, a large stock of liquor. On a previous date a police officer had gone to the warehouse & purchased liquor, giving in payment marked money. On the date above named resp. police officers entered the warehouse & seized & removed the whole stock of liquor, together with books & papers & the marked money. A magistrate subsequently convicted appls. under Summary Convictions Act, 1915, of an offence under the Prohibition Act, finding that the whole stock of liquor in the warehouse was unlawfully kept there. Appls. sued resps. claiming replevin & other relief. At the trial appls. recovered the marked money, as to which there was no appeal. The books & papers were seized under a search warrant issued under the Summary Convictions Act, & had been returned to appls.:—Held: the police officers having lawfully entered appls.' premises did not become trespassers ab initio even if the seizure of the books, paper, & money was unlawful.—*CANADIAN PACIFIC WINE CO. v. He left their service, but refused to give up the cottage after notice to quit duly given. Thereupon by command of defts. several persons entered the cottage & removed pltfs. & their furniture, using no more force than was necessary for that purpose. In an action by pltfs. for assault, battery & trespass:—Held: defts. were not liable, their right of entry being a defence to civil proceedings for the acts complained of.—*HEMMINGS v. assignment mentioned, necessarily & unavoidably led him over them. Replication, that W. was seised of the farm, & demised it to J. as tenant from year to year; that J. entered & being indebted to B., assigned to him, amongst other things, all the growing & other crops which then were or might thereafter be found in & about the farm, as a security for the debt, with a power for B., in default of payment, to take possession; that B. made default; that the bridge, yards, fields, & folds in the new assignment mentioned, & also a certain garden, were parcel of the farm demised to J.; that, at the time in the new assignment mentioned, W. was possessed of the garden & fields in which there were growing & other crops belonging to J.; that while J. was in possession pltf., as the servant of B., entered & took possession & continued in possession of the growing crops, until W. became possessed of the bridge, yards, fields, & folds & of the garden; & that pltf. was removed by defts. from & off the bridge, etc., before a reasonable time had elapsed, & while the debt remained unpaid; & defts. dragged pltf. from the dwelling-house along the bridge & across the yards, fields, & folds, to the highway. On demurrer to the replication:—Held: (1) the plea to the new assignment was good, since it confessed & justified the trespasses therein alleged, namely, those committed on the bridge, yards, fields, & folds; & the stating in the plea that defts. removed pltf. to the highway, did not render that a part of the cause of action which it was necessary to justify, but was mere surplusage; (2) the replication was bad in substance, since it did not show any right in B. to retain possession of the premises after J.'s tenancy had ended.—*HAYLING v. Angry words passed, & B. told A. to leave his house, this A. refused to do unless he was paid. Upon this B. sent for a police officer, & had A. locked up in the watch-house:—Held: if A. was making a disturbance, B. would have been justified in turning him out of his house, but that he was not justified in imprisoning him.—*GREEN v. Replication de injuria:—Held: there being proof of the fact of a noise & disturbance in the house, in consequence of which deft. was legally entitled to remove pltf., the motive & intention of pltf. in so removing her could not be inquired into under the replication de injuria.—*OAKES v. The hall had always been used for the holding of the county musical festivals; but there was no evidence that the justices have under that Act. so directed it to be used:—Held: the stewards of one of these musical festivals had such a possession of the hall, that they might justify the turning out an intruder.—

Minister of chapel—Entry by clerk after dismissal.—Pltf. never received any appointment as clerk from deft., but continued to act as clerk without interruption until Aug. 18, 1855, when he received from deft. a notice to quit on the 26th inst. On Sept. 26, 1855, pltf. went to the vestry of the chapel to perform his duties as clerk, when deft. ordered him to leave, & on his refusal, had him turned out of the vestry room:—Held: the possession of the vestry room was in deft. as minister, so as to make the entry & remaining of pltf., the clerk, therein after a prohibition by deft. a wrong which justified defts. in removing pltf. & entitled defts. to judgment upon a plea alleging such facts by way of justification.—JACKSON v. COURTNEY (1857), 8 E. & B. 8; 27 L. J. Q. B. 37; 29 L. T. O. S. 262; 3 Jur. N. S. 889; 5 W. R. 752; 21 J. P. Jo. 499; 120 E. R. 3, Ex. Ch.

199. — — —.—If a person enter a house, with force & violence, the person whose house is entered, may justify turning him out, using no more force than is necessary, without a previous request to depart. But if the person enter quietly, a request to depart is necessary, before turning him out.—TULLAY v. REED (1823), 1 C. & P. 6; 171 E. R. 1078, N. P.

201. — — —.—TULLAY v. REED, No. 199, ante.

202. — — —.—A declaration in trespass alleged, that deft., on a certain day, assaulted pltf., & then seized & shook him, & struck him many blows. Second plea, a justification in defence of the possession of deft.'s close, which pltf. with a strong hand attempted forcibly to enter. Third plea, stating, that deft. was possessed of a cow, then being in a certain close; that pltf., against the will of deft., attempted to drive away the cow from the close & to dispossess deft. of her, & would forcibly & in breach of the peace have driven away & dispossessed deft. of her, wherefore, etc., justifying the trespass in defence of the possession of the cow. Replication, de injuria, & new assignment, that pltf. issued his writ, etc., not only for the trespasses in the pleas mentioned, but also for that deft., on other & different occasions, & with more force than necessary, seized & shook pltf.:—Held: it was unnecessary to allege in the pleas a request to pltf. to desist, before resisting with force.—POLKINHORN v. WRIGHT (1845), 8 Q. B. 197; 15 L. J. Q. B. 70; 10 Jur. 11; 115 E. R. 849; sub nom. PILKINGHOM v. WRIGHT, 6 L. T. O. S. 217.

203. Original entry by leave & licence.—Action for assault. Plea, that pltf. entered deft.'s close without leave & licence, & that deft. ordered him off: but he not going, deft. molliter manus, etc. Replication, de injuria:—Held: under this plea it is not necessary for deft. to rebut all leave & licence, because that is not material to the issue, deft.'s justification being complete, if he can show that he required pltf. to leave the close, & pltf. refused to do so, although pltf. had, in fact, entered at first by the leave & licence of deft., that leave & licence lasting only during deft.'s pleasure.—JELLY v. A. In General.

224. Several issues—Right to trial of all—Although issue of possession fails.]—In trespass quare clausum fregit, where there are several issues, & amongst them one on pltf.'s possession of the close, pltf. has a right to a trial of all the other issues, though it appears on the opening of the evidence that he was not in possession of the close.—*FRY v. 225. Whether triable at county court—Plaintiff having undisputed possessory title.]—An action for trespass to land to which pltf. has an undisputed possessory title is not an action in which the title to any corporeal hereditament is in question, & is therefore triable in a county ct.—*HAWKINS v. B. Damages.

See, generally, DAMAGES, Vol. XVII., pp. 76 et seq.

226. Right to recover damages—Discharge of water over land of plaintiff.]—Pltf. was the owner of land in the neighbourhood of Croydon. Defts. permitted the surface drainage from certain roads in their district to flow across pltf.'s land, & claimed the right to do so either on the ground (a) that there was a watercourse across the land, or (b) on the ground that there was a sewer which ran across pltf.'s land, into which they were entitled to discharge the water in question. It appeared that from time immemorial there had been "bourne flows" of underground water from the chalk, which bourne flows had on divers occasions flooded the land occupied by pltf., & had followed the channel or watercourse which deff. alleged was a watercourse or a sewer. Pltf. claimed damages for trespass & an injunction:—Held: upon the facts, the bourne course was not a "watercourse" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 17; it was not a sewer, & pltf. was, therefore, entitled to damages for trespass & an injunction.—PEARCE v. CROYDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1910), 71 J. P. 429; 8 L. G. R. 909.

227. What damages recoverable—Mesne profits—Against disseisor.]—As to cutting down of trees, grass, corn, & other things annexed to the soil, there are great variances of opinions in our books, not only against whom the action of trespass vi et armis shall be brought for recovery of damages, but also concerning the property of them. Therefore if one disseises me, & during the disseisin he cuts down the trees, or grass, or the corn growing upon the land, & afterwards I re-enter, I shall have an action of trespass against him vi et armis, for the trees, grass, corn, etc., for after my regress, the law, as to disseisor & his servants, supposes the freehold always continued in me; but if my disseisor makes a feoffment in fee, gift in tail, lease for life or years, etc., & afterwards I re-enter, I shall not have trespass vi et armis against those who came in by title; for this fiction of the law, that the freehold continued always in me shall not have relation to make him, who comes in by title, a wrong doer vi et armis for in fictione juris semper aequitas existit: but in such case I shall recover all the mesne profits against my disseisor, in the same manner as the disseisee in such cases should recover in an assize at the common law before Statute of Gloucester, c. 1, damages only against the disseisor. Also it is to be presumed, that the feoffee has given consideration or recompense to the disseisor, & that the lessee has paid rent to him, or other consideration, & therefore in reason the disseisor is to be charged with the whole. The same law, if my disseisor is disseised, & afterwards I re-enter, I shall not have an action of trespass against the second disseisor, because the said fiction of law, as to action, extends only to my disseisor; & if I should punish the second disseisor, he would be twice charged; & therefore I shall recover all the mesne profits against my disseisor, his servants & others who have committed the trespass by his command, & in his right ('OKE, C.J.).—LIFORD'S CASE (1614), 11 Co. Replication, admitting the writ & warrant, de injuriâ absque residuâ causa. It was proved that defts., who were bailiffs, in execution of the warrant broke open the outer door of pltf.'s house, & so gained an entrance, & arrested him:—Held: defts. having become trespassers ab initio by the breaking of the door, the jury were rightly directed that they might, even on the plea of not guilty, give damages in respect of all the injuries complained of in the declaration.—*KERBEY v. 230. — [Injury to reversion—Pulling down house.]—In an action for pulling down a messuage & premises in the possession & occupation of H. as tenant to pltf., to the injury of his reversionary estate & interest, etc.; deft. pleaded that the messuage & premises were not in the possession & occupation of H. as tenant thereof to pltf., nor did the reversion thereof belong to pltf. It appeared at the trial that H. held at a profit rent of pltf. who had a limited interest in the premises, but that H. had given up possession to deft. a short time before the Act complained of, without however assigning away his interest:—Held: (1) the plea was substantially proved, pltf.'s right to the reversion in the premises being the substantial question raised by it; (2) the correct measure of damage was the amount less by which the reversion would sell in consequence of the act of deft.—*HOSKING v. 231. — [Nominal damages—Where quantum of plaintiff's interest not proved.]—In trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s close, pltf. relied upon the bare possession, though it appeared that he had originally become possessed as tenant to one W. under a written agreement. Dft. proved that, five days after the commencement of the trespass, he obtained a lease of the close in question from W., which he produced. The judge told the jury, that, in the absence of proof of the quantum of pltf.'s interest in the premises, by the production of the written agreement, he was only entitled to nominal damages:—Held: no misdirection.—*TWYMAN v. By treaty between Her Majesty & the King of Samoa, dated Aug. 28, 1879, it was provided that civil suits in Samoa should be tried by the High Commr. In a suit in that ct. for the recovery of land in Samoa, & for damages for conversion of its produce, it appeared that defts. did not dwell within the bounds of the islands, but that they had a store in Samoa, affixed to which was a signboard with the name of their firm, where they carried on business by servants & agents:—Held: the measure of damages was the value of the produce which the lands were capable of yielding at the time they were taken possession of, after deducting the expenses of management. However wilful & long-continued the trespass might have been, there was no law which authorised the disallowance of such expenses or the infliction of a penalty on defts. beyond the loss sustained by pltf.—*McARTHUR & Co. v. 260. —[.]—Injury to reversion.]—An action brought by the reversioner of a cottage let on a weekly tenancy to restrain the continuance of a hoarding alleged to have been erected on pltf's. land, & to restrain a nuisance arising from the noise caused by the hoarding dismissed on the ground that he could not by reason of the tenancy maintain trespass, & that there was no injury to his reversion.

In considering whether an injunction should be granted, the amount of the injury sustained is material. Where a reversioner's possessory rights are being seriously injured by an act for which he would obtain very trifling damages at law, an injunction, being his only adequate remedy, may be granted.—*COOPER v. 261. Trespass unaccompanied by waste.]—This ct. has no jurisdiction to restrain a trespass unaccompanied by waste. Pltf. was seized of lands on each side of a public road through L. common, in the parish of R., & such lands were covered with valuable fir trees. The district board of R. proceeded, under the above Act, to cut down, & did cut down, some of the trees, on the ground that they were an obstruction to the public highway :—Held : prima facie the board were justified in their acts, & upon the case made against them an injunction to restrain them was refused.—*TURNER v. other ct. ought to restrain the proceedings before it; but where the question has come before another ct. in independent proceedings in which it is necessary to decide the whole matter between the parties, the ct. may in such case restrain the proceedings elsewhere by injunction in order to save expense. A dispute having arisen between defts., who were a local authority, & pltf. about a drain which pltf. had interfered with, defts. gave notice to pltf. that they would enter on his land & reinstate the drain; but they afterwards abandoned their intention, & instead took proceedings against him before the magistrate. Pltf. then brought an action against defts., claiming an injunction to restrain them from trespassing on his land, & from proceeding against him before the magistrate. In the statement of claim pltf. did not in terms allege that defts. threatened & intended to trespass on the land :—Held : as no intention to commit a trespass was proved or alleged, pltf. had not made out his case for an injunction against the trespass; & that being so, the ct. had no jurisdiction to restrain the proceedings before the magistrate.—*STANNARD v. Pltf. bought land on an unfrequented part of the coast, & stopped up several paths which defts. asserted were public highways. Defts. removed the obstructions placed by pltf. & he brought an action against them for an injunction to restrain them from trespassing on his land. The A.-G. was not a party to the action :—Held : as between pltf. & defts. there were no public rights of way; pltf. was entitled to a declaration to that effect, & defts. must pay nominal damages; but inasmuch as pltf. was not, in the present estate of the neighbourhood, injured by the public use of the ways in question, no injunction ought to be granted.—*BEHRENS v. D. Declaration of Right.

274. Jurisdiction of court.—The Duke of Rutland was the owner of certain moors over which he had rights of shooting. These moors were intersected by certain highways the soil of which was vested in the duke as owner of the lands on each side adjoining the highways. Pltf. went on to part of the highway, not for the purpose of using the highway as one of the public, for passing & repassing, but for the express purpose of interfering with the duke's right of shooting, which right was being then exercised by certain of his friends. The duke's keepers, in order to prevent that interference, seised pltf. & held him down until the shooting was over. In an action for assault, defts. pleaded justification, & alternatively, paid 5s. into ct. as sufficient to satisfy pltf.'s claim. The jury at the trial found a general verdict for defts.:—Held: the ct. had power under R. S. C., Ord. 25, r. 5, to make a declaration that pltf., on the facts, was, at the time when he interfered with the legal right of the duke, a trespasser.—HARRISON v. RUTLAND (DUKE), [1893] 1 Q. 276. Right to fish from towing paths of canal.—Under a canal Act authorising the construction of a canal, there was granted to each owner of land through which the canal was made the sole, several & exclusive right of fishing in so much of the canal as was made in, over, or through his land; but the right of fishery thereby granted was to be exercised so that the canal, towing paths, banks & other works should not be prejudiced or obstructed. Under a deed of Mar. 31, 1845, a certain manor & estate through which the canal passed became vested in the Earl of S.; there was no express grant of this particular right of fishery, but there were general words in the deed passing all fisheries, profits, advantages, & appurtenances, whatsoever to the manor & estate respectively belonging, or in anywise appertaining.

By a lease of July 23, 1910, the Earl of S. granted to an angling club, of which deft. was a member, the exclusive right to fish for & take away all fish in a specified portion of the canal, at an annual rent, & the lessees covenanted so to exercise their rights as not to prejudice or obstruct the towing paths, banks & other works of the canal. Pltfs. having brought an action to test a claim by deft. to fish in the canal from the towing path, without their consent:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to a declaration that deft. was not entitled to fish from the towing paths of the canal belonging to pltfs. without their consent, & that an injunction must be granted to restrain the trespass.—STAFFORDSHIRE & WORCESTERSHIRE CANAL NAVIGATION v. BRADLEY, [1912] 1 Ch. 91; 81 L. J. Ch. 147; 106 L. T. 215; 56 Sol. Jo. 91; 75 J. P. Jo. 535.

Plea, that the messuage, cottage, etc., were the soil & freehold of defts., wherefore they committed the trespasses in the messuage, etc., as they lawfully might for the cause aforesaid:—Held: (1) the plea of liberum tenementum was a good plea to this declaration, although the close was particularly described in the declaration; (2) it was not to be inferred from the declaration that there was any breach of the peace or forcible entry, the averment of vi et armis being a mere formal allegation that the defts. entered with some force, sufficient to enable them to get into possession.—*HARVEY v. I agree with the exception of pltf. in error that the question raised by the issue of not possessed is, whether pltf. was in actual possession or not; but it seems to me that as soon as a person is entitled to possession, or, which is exactly the same thing, any other person enter by the command of that lawful owner so entitled to possession, the law immediately vests the actual possession in the person who so entered (MAULE, J.).—*JONES v. If the land on which the fence is was not pltf.'s, then there is an end of the case. If it is, then deft. must prove a right of way such as to justify breaking down the fence & going all over the land so that it does not appear how the marking the plan can be so material as that deft. cannot go to trial without it; & if it were so, he should have applied for it before (ERLE, C.J.).—BEARD v. WATSON (1860), 2 F. & F. 33.

312. — Meaning of plea.—To a declaration in trespass quare clausum fregit, a plea denying the close to be pltf.'s is a denial of possession, if deft. was a wrongdoer; if otherwise, of the right to the possession; but on either supposition it is a denial of title, as even possession is title against a wrongdoer.—PURNELL v. YOUNG (1838), 6 Dowl. 347; 3 M. & W. 288; 1 Horn & H. 22; 150 E. R. 1153; sub nom. PARNELL v. YOUNG, 7 L. J. Ex. 80.

313. — Necessity for special plea.—Under an issue, in trespass quare clausum fregit, on a plea that the close was not the property of pltf., pltf.'s possession at the time of trespass is alone in issue, & deft. cannot set up title to the close, without pleading in confession & avoidance.

The plea of not guilty in trespass only puts in issue the fact of committing the alleged act of trespass, & not pltf.'s possession or right of possession, which, if intended to be denied, must be specially traversed. . . .

As mere possession is sufficient to maintain trespass against any one who cannot show better title, pltf.'s allegation, that deft. broke the close of pltf. is satisfied prima facie by proof that deft. broke a close in the possession of pltf.; & this is not only prima facie, but ultimately sufficient against any one who cannot avoid the effect of it by showing that, notwithstanding the actual possession by pltf., he, deft., has a right to it.

Under a plea which merely denies that the close is the close of pltf. deft. is to be considered prima facie at least a mere wrongdoer, & as against him possession is not merely evidence of title, but actual title. . . . If deft. not only contests the possession in fact, but also relies upon title, in case actual possession is proved by pltf., it is far more consistent . . . with the rules of pleading generally & with the principles of justice, that his defence on the ground of title should be pleaded specially, & not given in evidence under a traverse of an allegation in pltf.'s declaration, which is satisfied by proof of possession only (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—WHITTINGTON v. BOXALL (1843), 5 Q. B. 139; Dav. & Mer. 184; 12 L. J. Q. B. 318; 7 Jur. 722; 114 E. R. 1201.

according to the terms of a certain lease to pltf., & with a provision that he was to take the pine off the land known as the S. lot first, as pltf. was bound to take off the same. Pltf. subsequently purchased the fee simple of the S. land:—Held: pltf. was entitled to revoke any licence implied by such agreement, & to maintain trespass against deft. for removing from the lot formerly owned by S. pine saw logs, after notice forbidding such removal.—CAMPBELL v. An opportunity of letting offers, but the person who had the key having absconded, the landlord enters by placing a ladder against the house, & raising the first floor window, & after showing the house, leaves it in the same state as before. The house is afterwards entered by persons unknown, & some of the tenant's furniture & wearing apparel is stolen. Trespass is brought against the landlord for breaking & entering the house, & leaving it insecure, per quod tenant's furniture & wearing apparel were stolen:—Held: a plea of leave & licence was no answer to the action.—*ANCASTER v. At the trial there was no proof of any such grant as that stated in the plea, but it appeared that by a deed of that date R. W., being then seised in fee of the manor of Middleton, conveyed Forton Farm to F. C. reserving all royalties; but it appeared further that from the year 1753 the gamekeepers of the lord of the manor of Middleton were accustomed to sport over Forton Farm with the knowledge of pltf. & his landlords the owners of Forton Farm; that about fourteen years ago pltf. by desire of his landlord gave notice to the then gamekeeper of the lord of the manor not to trespass, but he afterwards continued to sport there by order of the lord, without any further interruption:—Held: it lay upon deft. upon this issue to prove, (a) that he had such a royalty: & (b) that at the time in question he was in the due exercise of it.—PICKERING v. The treasurer of the county ct. gave the registrar notice of his intention to audit the accounts on a Saturday, when, by a county ct. rule, the office closed at one o'clock. The treasurer went to the office after one o'clock, & finding it closed, broke the locks of an inner door & a cupboard in which the books were kept, & having taken away the books & audited them, returned them to the office. 361. — Extinguishing fire in preservation of shooting rights—Acts reasonably necessary.]
 If a fire breaks out on land, the tenant of the sporting rights is entitled to adopt such means on the land for extinguishing the fire as may in the circumstances be necessary for the preservation of his sporting rights. The justification of a trespass for that purpose depends on the state of things at the moment of interference, & not upon the inference as to necessity to be drawn from the event. It is not therefore the law that the intervention of the tenant should be proved by the event to have been in fact necessary for the preservation of the property in the sense that, but for that intervention his property would have been destroyed or injured; it is a good defence in law if, there being a real & imminent danger, the means taken by the tenant to avert it were reasonably necessary in the sense that they were acts which in all the circumstances of the case a reasonable man would do to meet such a real danger.

Pltf., an owner of land, let the shooting rights over the land to one C., whose bailiff & head gamekeeper deft. was. A fire broke out on the land, & while men in the employ of pltf. were endeavouring to beat it out deft. set fire to strips of heather between the fire & a part of the shooting where were some nesting pheasants, the property of his master. Shortly afterwards pltf.'s men succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Pltf. brought an action of trespass in the county ct. & the jury were asked two questions: (a) "Was the method adopted by deft. in fact necessary for the protection of his master's property," & (b) "If not, was it reasonably necessary in the circumstances." They answered the first question in the negative, the second in the affirmative. The county ct. judge gave judgment for deft.:—Held: upon the findings of the jury deft. was entitled to judgment.

362. — Underpinning adjoining wall—Danger of collapse during building operations.]—Pltf. was the landlord of certain premises & defts. entered into a contract with the Comrs. of Works for the extension of adjoining premises. A clause in the contract provided that defts. should indemnify the Comrs. against claims for damage, this clause not being limited to damage caused during the progress of the work. Defts. placed beneath pltf.'s wall a mass of brickwork & concrete, some of which would require to be cut away in the event of pltf. desiring to make a cellar. During the excavations there was danger of one of pltf.'s walls collapsing, & the architect representing the Comrs. ordered defts. to underpin the wall. Defts. underpinned the wall without pltf.'s consent, although the danger was not so imminent as to make it reasonably necessary to do the work without it. Pltf. brought an action of trespass against defts., & the latter claimed an indemnity from the Comrs. as third parties:—Held: the imminence of the danger did not affect the right of pltf. to complain of injury to his premises, & defts. had not justified the trespass & were liable to pay damages to pltf. but that they were entitled to an indemnity from the Comrs. as the contract provided that they were to proceed with the work in accordance with the instructions of the Comrs.' architect.—*KIRBY v. full satisfaction & discharge of all damages sustained by pltf. by reason of the trespass; & that, in pursuance of such agreement, deft., before the commencement of this suit, paid to pltf. £5, as a full satisfaction & discharge of all damages sustained by pltf. by reason of the trespass; & pltf. accepted the same from deft., as such satisfaction & discharge. Replication, traversing the agreement. Verdict was given for pltf. on that issue:—Held: satisfaction, independently of the accord, was no bar to the action, & therefore, the replication did not raise an immaterial issue.—BAINBRIDGE v. JAX (1846), 9 Q. B. 819; 16 L. J. Q. B. 85; 8 L. T. O. S. 213; 11 Jur. 123; 115 E. R. 1490.

367. —[.]—In an action for a trespass committed by deft. as servant & by command of P., acceptance of satisfaction by pltf. from P. is a defence. Where deft. introduces an immaterial averment in his plea, pltf. cannot in his replication so traverse the matters of the plea as to include such immaterial averment in the issue; therefore where deft. in trespass pleaded that the trespass was committed by command of P. & then stated an executed accord between pltf. & P. with the consent of deft., & acceptance thereof by pltf. in satisfaction of the trespasses:—Held: a replication traversing the accord & execution thereof with the consent of deft., was bad, for, as no rights of the deft. appeared to be compromised by the accord, his consent was unnecessary.—THURMAN v. The comrs., of whom deft. was one, appointed a committee to inspect a certain ditch, with a view to widening the same, & to report thereon. The committee having reported thereon in favour of widening the ditch, the comrs. appointed a second committee, of whom deft. was one, to confer with a surveyor respecting the work, with power to two of them to act. Deft. being afterwards told by the clerk to the comrs. that he might proceed without further instructions from the comrs., took pltf.'s land for the purpose of widening the drain, without having given him notice or obtained his consent. The land was taken for the bond fide purpose of widening the drain. Deft., before action, tendered £10 as amends, which pltf. refused to accept; but no tender was pleaded, nor was the amount paid into ct. The jury found the trespass, & that the damage amounted to £5:—Held: (1) although neither deft. nor the comrs. were authorised to take pltf.'s land without his consent in writing, yet deft. was entitled to the protection of the Act; (2) deft. was not bound to plead the tender, or pay the amount tendered into ct.—JONES v. 382. ——We will well agree that in some cases a man may justify the commission of a tort, & that is in cases where it sounds for the public good; as in time of war a man may justify making fortifications on another's land without licence; also a man may justify pulling down a house on fire for the safety of the neighbouring houses: for these are cases of the common weal. So also is it, if the sheriff pursue a felon to a house, & in order to take him break open the doors of the house, this is justifiable (per 'UR.).—MALEVERER v. d. Necessity — Deviation from highway—Highway impassable & out of repair.—Trespass quare clausum fracti: Plea, that at the time when, &c., there was a highway adjoining pltf.'s said land, which said highway was in certain places impassable & out of repair, wherefore deft., for the purpose of using such highway, necessarily deviated a little therefrom on to pltf.'s said land, going no further from said highway than was necessary, & returning thereto as soon as practicable,

388. Repairs of work on public navigable river—Failure of plaintiff to keep in repair.—Trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s manor. Pleas, first general issue; second, that from time immemorial there hath been & still is a public port partly within the said manor, & also in a river which has been a public navigable river from time immemorial, & that there is in that part of the port which is within the manor, an ancient work necessary for the preservation of the port, & for the safety & convenience of the ships resorting to it; that this work was, at the several times when, &c., in decay; that pltf. would not repair it, but neglected so to do, wherefore defts. entered & repaired. Replication, de injuria. Verdict for pltf. on first plea, & for defts. on the second:—Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto, as the second plea did not state that immediate repairs were necessary, or that any one bound to do so had neglected to repair after notice, or that a reasonable time for repairing had elapsed, or that defts. had occasion to use the port.—LONSDALE (EARL) v. 390. Entry by husband to reclaim wife—Admissibility of evidence of deed of separation.—(1) If a husband, by a deed of separation executed by himself, but not executed by either of the trustees, give his wife licence to live where she pleases, he is not justified in entering the house of a third person to reclaim his wife, as being improperly harboured there; & the husband, before doing so, should at least have given distinct notice to the third person, that, as far as by law he could, he revoked the licence.

(2) In an action of trespass, with a plea of justification that deft. entered pltf.'s house to reclaim his wife, who was wrongfully harboured there, a deed of separation of deft. & his wife is admissible in evidence, if executed by deft., although not executed by either of the trustees.

(3) Seemle: the daughter, or even a female servant, of the occupier of a house, has such a possession of her bedroom as will enable her to maintain trespass against a person who wrongfully forces himself into it while she is in bed.—LEWIS PONSFORD (1838), 8 C. & P. 687; 173 E. R. 674.

392. Right of way.—BEARD v. WATSON, No. 311, ante.

393. — Right over part of land—Way becoming impassable—Use of adjoining part.—It is not a good justification in trespass, that deft. has a right of way over part of pltf.'s land, & that he had gone over the adjoining land, because the way was impassable from being overflowed by a river.—TAYLOR v. WHITEHEAD (1781), 2 Doug. K. B. 745; 99 E. R. 475.

395. — Removal of obstruction.—Trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s close called the Moor Croft, which was set out by abutments, & breaking pltf.'s gates, hedges, & fences standing thereon, & destroying the grass growing thereon. Plea, that there was a public footpath over the close, & that deft., because the gates, etc., obstructed the way, pulled them down. Replication, joinder of issue. At the trial pltf. admitted the right of way alleged in the plea, & the judge thereupon directed a verdict for deft.:—Held: the ruling of the learned judge was right.—HUDDART v. RIGBY (1869), L. (a) Owner.

Taking goods intermixed with goods of another—Where distinguishable.—See BAILMENT, Vol. III., p. 71, No. 120.

397. Damage to bailed goods—By third party.—The owner of chaises & horses let out to hire is liable for accidents arising from misconduct or negligence of the drivers, not the person who hires the chaise, the owner may therefore maintain trespass vi et armis, for an injury done to his horses & carriage while so employed & against the person who has hired them.—*DAN v. r. What evidence admissible to prove plaintiff's title.—In an action of trespass de bonis asportatis, evidence of title to land in a foreign country is admissible to prove plaintiff's right to the property taken.—MANN v. CHAMBERLAIN (1828), N. B. Dig. 337.—CAN.

t. Person without possession.—A person purchasing a crop of wheat at sheriff's sale may bring trespass against a person converting or injuring it, though he may never have received possession of the field.—HEYDON v. CRAWFORD (1831), 3 O. S. 583.—CAN.

a.—The person clearing land under an agreement to enter upon & clear land, & take the wood after it is cut down in payment of the labour, may maintain trespass against the owner of the land for taking away the wood after it is cut down, although he has no possession in the land to enable him to maintain trespass quare clausum fregit.—HAMILTON v. McDONELL (1838), 5 O. S. 720.—CAN.

b.—Where a horse was stolen from plaintiff & bought by defendant at public auction, but not in market overt, & plaintiff afterwards seeing the horse took possession of it, & defendant immediately retook it :—Held : plaintiff had a right to retake it, no property having passed to defendant by the sale; & although it was in his possession only for a moment, yet the property reverted in him, & he could maintain trespass against defendant for the retaking.—BOWMAN v. YIELDING (1839), 3 Ont. Dig. 6751.—CAN.

c.—On June 7 defendant, a collector, seized plaintiff's vessel for a breach of the revenue laws. Plaintiff petitioned the Govt. & on July 7 received an answer from defendant informing him that the Govt. had refused to interfere. On July 8 plaintiff served a notice of claim :—Held : no notice having been given within the time allowed, the vessel was thereby condemned; & by the act of seizure plaintiff was deprived of his right of property, & therefore unable to maintain trespass.—DAME v. CARBERRY (1853), 10 U. C. R. 374.—CAN.

d.—Though plaintiff is not in possession of land, if he has the title he may, since 21 Vict. c. 20, s. 3, maintain trespass de bonis asportatis for carrying away trees from it.—HUMPHREYS v. HELMES (1861), 10 N. B. R. (5 All.) 59.—CAN.

e. Owner of land subject to estate for life.—The owner of land, subject to an estate for life, may maintain trespass de bonis asportatis for carrying away trees which have been wrongfully cut upon the land.—ALEXANDER v. HART (1858), 12 N. B. R. (1 Ham.) 161.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—A. (b).

399 i. Right to sue.—Where stones were maliciously removed & severed from the land & cut & shaped into mill stones :—Held : the person who had so taken them could not maintain trespass against the owner of such land, who had got them into his possession by directing the carriers of them to deliver them on his premises, as the property had not been changed by the work done to the stones.—BAKER v. FLINT (1833), 3 O. S. 89.—CAN.

399 ii.—Where personal property of defendant is in the actual possession of plaintiff under an agreement between them, the latter may sustain trespass against the former for taking it away.—HOLMES v. CLARK (1836), 2 N. B. R. (Ber.) 167.—CAN.

399 iii.—Trespass for taking plaintiff's cattle. Plea, not possessed. It was proved that the cattle had belonged to defendant, from whom plaintiff had leased them with a farm, but plaintiff had detained them after the term had expired, for which defendant had sued him & recovered damages to the value of the cattle after this action was brought :—Held : plaintiff could not treat this verdict as giving him a title to the cattle, by relation back, at the time this action was commenced.—ABRAMS v. MOON (1844), 1 U. C. R. 552.—CAN.

399 iv.—A. having a reversionary interest in goods leased to B. The sheriff seized them under an execution against B., but did not sell or remove them. A. sued the sheriff for an alleged injury to his reversionary interest :—Held : if any trespass was committed by the seizure, B. should sue & not A.—HENDERSON v. MOODIE (1846), 3 U. C. R. 348.—CAN.

399 v.—B. assigned to plaintiff certain household goods by a bill of sale, which contained a proviso for redemption on a day certain, with a covenant that in case of default in payment, or of B. attempting to dispose of the goods, plaintiff might take possession & sell or retain them for his own use, but which contained no clause authorising B. to remain in possession until default :—Held : plaintiff had sufficient right to possession of the goods to maintain trespass against the sheriff under a f. fa. against B., the jury having found the note to be bona fide.—PORTER v. FLINTOFF (1857), 6 C. P. 335.—CAN.

399 vi.—When plaintiff, a constable, had seized a horse under a distress warrant, & the horse escaped to a railway & was killed, owing to defendant's neglect to fence :—Held : plaintiff had sufficient property in the horse to entitle him to sue.—*SIMPSON v. 403. —.]—Deft., a naval commander, stationed on the coast of Africa, with instructions to suppress the slave trade, was requested by the Governor of Sierra Leone to obtain the liberation of two British subjects detained as slaves at the Gallinas by the son of the King of that country, & in effecting that object to use force, if necessary. He accordingly proceeded to the Gallinas with an armed force, & having landed at Dombocorro, took military possession of a barracoen belonging to pltf., who was a Spaniard, carrying on the slave trade at the Gallinas. He then communicated with the King of the country, & the two British subjects having been released, deft. concluded a treaty for the abolition of the slave trade in that country. In execution of this treaty, deft. fired the barracoens of pltf., & carried away his slaves to Sierra Leone, where they were liberated. Some of pltf.'s goods, used in the slave traffic, were claimed by the King as forfeited, & delivered up to him; other goods were destroyed. These proceedings having been communicated to the Lords of the Admiralty, & the Secretaries of State for the foreign & colonial departments, they respectively, by letter, adopted & ratified the act of deft. —*Held: pltf. had a property in his slaves, & might maintain trespass for their seizure, the slave trade not being piratical by the law of nations, & it not appearing that Spain had passed any law abolishing the slave trade pursuant to the treaty embodied in 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 6.—BURON v. 407. —.]—Actual possession.]—Pltf. & deft. were owners of boats employed in a fishery. Pltf.'s boat cast a fishing sear round a shoal of mackerel, with the exception of a comparatively small opening which the sear did not quite fill up, but through which, in the opinion of witnesses, the fish could not escape. Deft.'s boat then came in through the opening, & took the mackerel:—Held: pltf. could not maintain trespass for taking his fish, his possession not having been complete.

The fish were reduced to a condition in which it was in the highest degree probable that pltf. would become possessed of them. But . . . he had not become possessed. Whether the necessary possession be rightly described by the word "custodia" or "occupatio" . . . it is not attained until pltf. has brought the animals into his actual power (DENMAN, C.J.).—*YOUNG v. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—

A. (c).

1. Plaintiff having title to goods.]—

Though pltf. is not 'in' possession of land, if he has the title he may, since 21 Vict. c. 20, s. 5, maintain trespass

422. ———— Before wreck officially seized.]—The grantee of wreck has a special property in all goods stranded within his liberty, & may maintain trespass against a wrongdoer for taking them away, though such goods were part of the cargo of a ship from which some person escaped alive to land, & though the owners within a year & a day claimed & identified them; & though the taking was before any seizure on behalf of the grantee.

That the grantee of wreck may maintain an action of trespass, without seizure for wreck cast away within the precincts of his liberty, is clear. . . . The same is the case with respect to an estray. In both, the right to possession draws after it a constructive possession, which is sufficient to support the action (PARKE, J.).—DUNWICH CORPN. v. STERRY (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 831; 9 L. J. O. S. K. 423. Tenant—Against stranger—Severing fixtures.]—Where A. took the lease of a house & premises for a term of years, & took the tenant's fixtures in the house at a valuation from the landlord, & afterwards assigned the term to B., by way of mtge., expressly including the fixtures, & subsequently became bkpt.:—Held: the fixtures were not goods & chattels within the order & disposition of the bkpt., & did not pass to his assignees.

Suppose a person enters a house, & severs part of the materials of the house, cannot the tenant bring trespass de bonis asportatis? I am aware that, in the case of timber, the property in it, when severed, vests in the landlord; but you find no authority that the tenant cannot maintain trespass de bonis asportatis against a stranger who has severed & carried away the materials of a house (PARKE, B.).—*BOYDELL v. had either come to pltf.'s hands, or she had assented to the purchase, the cow was taken by deft.:—Held: A. had such a property in the cow as would enable her to maintain trespass.

The evidence shows a property in pltf. at her election; & by bringing the action, she has elected to take to the bargain, & to make the cow hers (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—THOMAS v. PHILIPS (1836), 7 C. & P. 573; 173 E. R. 253, N. P.

By the deed, the trustees were enabled to allow A. to remain in possession of any part of them until the remainder should be sold, & the debts collected. They sold part of the goods by public sale, describing them as A.'s property, & suffered him to remain in possession of the remainder, on the security of which B. knowing them to be the property of the trustees, gave credit to A. Execution afterwards issued at the suit of B., and the goods were sold under a fi. fa.:—Held: the trustees might recover against the sheriff in an action of trespass, B. having had notice of the change of property, & the possession of A. being consistent with the deed.—*WOODERMAN v. SECT. 2.—RELATION OF TRESPASS AND TROVER.

456. Trespass distinguished from trover.]—There is a great difference between trespass & trover, as to the action being local, etc.; for trespass is local, but trover is transitory. Trover lies for trees, when they are cut down, because then they are chattels; but before they are cut down they participate of the nature of the land, & trespass lies (POWELL, J.).

Trover lies for carrying it away [a tree that has been cut down], for it is a chattel so soon as it is severed from the freehold; & for the severing thereof trespass lies (HOLT, C.J.).—ANON. (1708), 11 Mod. Rep. 181; 88 E. R. 975.

Conversion is not a trespass. You could not in an action of trespass, after all the trespasses have been justified, go on with the action for conversion without new assigning it as a distinct trespass (ROLFE, B.).—*PRATT v. The rules also provided that if any member, "after he shall have obtained a boat by allotment, shall make default in paying the remainder of his subscription money, forfeits, & interest, in respect of every share he may hold in this society, when due, it shall be lawful for the committee, without any notice whatever, to seize every such boat so allotted to such defaulter, & let out the same for hire, for the benefit of all the members of the society; & the defaulter shall not be entitled to resume the possession of, or use such boat, until the expiration of three calendar months after he shall have fully paid all subscriptions, forfeits, & interest due from him."

W., a member of the society, became the allottee of a boat, & subsequently sold it to A., his landlord, for a certain sum credited to W. in his rent, A. at the time not having notice of the nature of the title of W. who subsequently became a defaulter to the society, who thereupon seized the boat:—Held: the society was entitled to the boat as against W., & semble; the special facts might be given in evidence under a plea of not possessed to a declaration in trespass by A.—*ATWOOD v. The true construction of the provision in Distress for Rent Act, 1738 (c. 19), s. 19, that the party may recover

521. — — — — —.]—Deft. obtained a judgment in the county ct. against J., a brother of plff. & a warrant of execution having issued to take J.'s goods, deft. by letter, informed the bailiff of the ct. that he "had reason to believe in the possibility of a third person claiming the goods, etc. at the address given on the back of the execution. He would, however, contest any claim that might be made, & he desired that the officer who levied would not in any way be deterred from putting the warrant in force, by reason of any party setting up a claim." The warrant was accordingly executed at plff.'s house, which was the address given on the writ, & certain goods of plff. were seized as well as those belonging to J. An action was then brought by plff. to recover damages from deft. for the trespass to his house & goods. At the trial several objections were taken by deft.'s counsel, & the judge nonsuited plff. with leave to move on all the points taken:—Held: the nonsuit was perfectly correct. The letter to the bailiff did not necessarily make deft. liable to an action. It contained no express authority to seize the specific goods that were seized, but was simply a direction to the officer not to be prevented by any adverse claim from seizing goods that were liable to seizure; or, in other words, to do his duty. Deft. therefore, as execution creditor, was not personally responsible for the wrongful act of the officer.—CRONSHAW v. CHAPMAN (1862), 7 H. & N. 911; 31 L. J. Ex. 277; 6 L. T. 54; 10 W. At the expiration of five days from the seizure the grantee began to remove the goods, & the grantor then tendered the amount due for debt, interest & expenses. The grantee refused to accept the tender, & the grantor brought an action, claiming in trespass for damages for removal of the goods, & for injury to them in the course of removal, & further, claiming to redeem:—Held: the action of trespass would not lie, as at the time of the removal of the goods the property in & the right to possession of the goods were in the grantee, & the grantor was only entitled to redeem on payment of the debt, interest & expenses, & the costs arising from the claim to redeem.

Deft. was present, but it did not appear he had heard what the comr. said. The jury having been directed to consider whether pltf.'s consent was obtained by an untrue representation, without any question being put as to deft.'s participation in such representation, & a verdict having been found for pltf., the ct. granted a new trial.—ROPER v. (2) Deft. had two horses at a livery stable, & wishing to try them, had them harnessed to a phaeton & driven by the groom of the livery stable keeper, deft. himself sitting beside the groom. Shortly after they started the horses were frightened by a dog & ran away. The groom begged deft. to sit still & do nothing; deft. complied, & left the guidance of the horses entirely with the groom. He endeavoured to turn them down a side street, so as to avoid running into a shop, & in so doing directed them so that they ran against female pltf. & injured her; had the groom not endeavoured to turn the horses, they would not have run against her. A. Assault.

(a) In General.

569. Necessity for physical contact.]—It is not an assault in law to give a person into custody upon a charge before magistrates.

It is not necessary that there should be personal contact to constitute an assault in point of law. The locking a man up in a room may be an assault (POLLOCK, C.B.).—REGLIN v. NELHAM (1846), 6 L. T. O. S. 455; sub nom. REYLIN v. NETHAM, 10 J. P. 203, N. P.

g. Locking person out of house.]—Deft. rented to pltf. for a short term a furnished house upon terms set out in a memorandum which was lost. Deft. demanded possession of the house & pltf. refused to leave. Deft. then went to the house with two men & told pltf.'s wife he had come to take possession, & proceeded to remove pltf.'s effects. Pltf.'s wife went out of the house to

(b) Menace of Violence.

577. General rule.]—TUBERVILLE v. SAVAGE, No. 558, ante.

578. Intention & ability to commit violence.]—A menace of violence, with present intention & ability to commit it, amounts to an assault in law. In an action for assault, the evidence was, that deff. brought men who "mustered round" pltf., & said that, "if he did not go out they would break his head," upon which he, being afraid that they would strike him, went out:—Held: an assault.—READ v. COKER (1853), 13 C. B. 850; 1 C. L. R. 746; 22 L. J. C. P. 201; 21 L. T. O. S. 156; 17 Jur. 990; 1 W. R. 413; 138 R. R. 1437.

579. Reasonable cause for apprehending violence.]—Pltf. was a domestic servant in the service of Capt. & Mrs. B. In consequence of a suspicion entertained by Mrs. B., she sent for the doctor & requested him to examine pltf. to see if she was in the family way. The doctor did so without using any force or doing anything more than was necessary for the purpose of the examination. Pltf. strongly expressed her dislike to take her clothes off, & cried most of the time, but offered no further resistance, & did what the doctor told her. She afterwards brought an action of assault against the master & mistress & the doctor. At the trial she swore that what was done was not done with her consent. The judge withdrew the case from the jury as against the master & mistress, & the jury found a verdict for the other deff.:—Held: to maintain the action pltf. must have been overpowered by force or must have had reasonable cause for apprehending violence; the facts showed that she reluctantly submitted to her mistress's orders; the case was rightly withdrawn from the jury as against the master & mistress, & the verdict of the jury was right.—LATTER v. BRADDELL (1881), 50 L. J. Q. B. 448; 44 L. T. 369; 45 J. P. 520; 29 W. R. 366, C. A.

584. Party almost within striking distance—When stopped.]—A. was advancing in a threatening attitude, with an intention to strike B., so that his blow would have almost immediately reached B., if he had not been stopped:—Held: it was an assault in point of law, though, at the particular moment when A. was stopped he was not near enough for his blow to take effect.—STEPHENS v. MYERS (1830), 4 C. & P. 349; 172 E. R. 735, N. P.

585. In answer to menace by plaintiff.]—(1) If, bring in an article removed & deff. locked the door & kept her out:—Held: this did not constitute an assault on pltf.'s wife.—NITAN v. MCANDREES (Man.) (1912), 22 W. L. R. 685; 8 D. L. R. 169.—CAN.

r. Resisting forcible entry.]—Pltf. herself held not to have been guilty of an assault in resisting with no more force than was necessary a forcible entry by deff.—GABLER v. CYMBALISKI, [1922] 2 W. W. R. 716; 15 Sask. L. R. 457.—CAN.

t. Action for indecent assault—Burden of proof.]—In an action for damages for indecent assault the burden of proof is on pltf., & substantially the same degree of proof is required as in a criminal case, because if the facts pltf. alleges did occur, a criminal offence was perpetrated.—MONTGOMERY v. SHINE (1878), 4 L. R. Ir. 288.—IR.

c. What must be proved in action against police officer.]—To make a relevant case of assault on the part of a police officer on duty, it is necessary to aver, either (1) that the order which the officer was seeking to enforce was unlawful, that is, not within the scope of his duty; or, (2) that the pursuer was willing to comply with the order, in which case the use of force would be unnecessary; or, (3) that the force was manifestly in excess of the requirements of the case.—MASON v. MORGAN (1864), 1 Bom. 205.—IND.

in an action for an assault, deft. plead that he was possessed of a public-house, in which pltf. was making a disturbance, & that, pltf. refusing to depart, deft. laid hands on him, & turned him out. This plea is proved, if it be shown that, in consequence of pltf. refusing to go, deft. assaulted him, with a view of turning him out of the house, though in fact deft. could not succeed in actually turning pltf. out.

(2) If A. comes up to attack B., & B. puts himself into a fighting attitude to defend himself, this is not an assault by B., & will not, in an action by B. against A. for an assault, support a plea by A. of son assault demesne.—MORIARTY v. BROOKS (1834), 6 C. & P. 684; 2 Nev. & M. M. C. 624; 172 E. R. 1419.

588. Pointing firearm—Loaded.—In an action for an assault the declaration stated that deft. assaulted pltf., "& also then presented a certain pistol loaded with gunpowder, ball, & shot, at pltf., & threatened & offered therewith to shoot pltf., & blow out his brains." To this deft. pleaded not guilty, & it was proved that the parties being on board a ship, deft., who was the captain, went into his cabin & brought out a pistol & cocked it, & presented it at pltf.'s head, saying, that if pltf. was not quiet he would blow his brains out:—Held: (1) if deft., at the time he presented the pistol, used words showing that it was not his intention to shoot pltf., this would be no assault; (2) it was incumbent on pltf. to substantiate the allegation in the declaration, that the pistol was loaded with gunpowder, ball, & shot, & unless the jury were satisfied that the pistol was loaded they ought to find for deft.—BRACE v. BARNARD (1840), 9 C. & P. 626; 173 E. R. 985, N. P.

587. ————]—A threat to shoot a person, coupled with the act of presenting a loaded fire arm at him, although it is "half-cock," is in law an assault.

To shoot a man is not a lawful way of repelling an assault. No doubt the charge of shooting with intent was idle, & the assault was only a misdemeanor. The handcuffing was utterly unlawful (WILLES, J.)—OSBORN v. VETICH (1858), 1 F. & F. 317.

B. Assault and Battery.

(a) In General.

Materiality of intention.—See Sub-sect. 1, ante.

588. Battery includes assault.—A declaration in trespass for assault & battery stated that deft. assaulted pltf., & wrenched a stick from his hands, & with the said stick, & with his fists, gave pltf. many violent blows, etc. Plea, as to the assaulting pltf. with the said stick & with his fists giving him blows, etc., son assault demesne:—Held: after verdict, the plea sufficiently justified the battery with the stick as well as the assault with it.

Every battery includes an assault (LORD ABINGER, C.B.)—BLUNT v. BEAUMONT (1835), 2 C. M. & R. 412; 5 Tyr. 1100; 4 Dowl. 219; 150 E. R. 178.

592. ————]—(1) One cannot justify a battery by barely showing an arrest.

There is no case in all the books that says that a battery may be justified, barely by showing an arrest; or, that it is repugnant to plead not guilty of the battery, & to justify the residue of the trespass by an arrest. . . . An arrest must necessarily be an assault, but is not necessarily a battery (LORD HARDWICKE, C.J.).

(2) It does not follow, that an arrest cannot be made without touching the person; for if a bailiff comes into a room, & tells deft. he arrests him, & locks the door, that is an arrest, for he is in custody of the officer (LORD HARDWICKE, C.J.).

(3) Supposing there was a laying on of hands in the present case, every laying on of hands is not a battery; for the party's intention must be considered: for people will sometimes by way of joke, or in friendship, clap a man on the back; & it would be ridiculous to say that in every such case a man must justify, & may not plead not guilty (LORD HARDWICKE, C.J.)—*WILLIAMS v. 598. Removing driver from place on vehicle—To ascertain name of owner of vehicle.]—13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 60, imposing a penalty on the driver of a cart, etc., for riding thereon under the circumstances therein mentioned, authorises a justice on his own view, or upon the oath of one witness, to convict the offender, & in case the offender refuses to discover his name, or the name of the owner of the cart, etc., he is subjected to a like penalty, & may, without warrant, be apprehended forthwith by the person seeing the offence committed. Where the driver of a waggon committed an offence within this Act, in the view of a justice, & having placed himself before the board on which his master's name was painted, so as to prevent the discovery of the owner, & the justice, in order to ascertain the name, stopped the horses & laid hands on the driver, & removed him from his position before the board, & thereby informed himself of the ownership:—Held: this was a trespass, & gave the driver a right of action.—JONES v. OWEN (1823), 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 600; 1 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 290; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 139.

599. Touching person in order to serve process.]—A person may, under particular circumstances, lay hands on another, in order to serve him with process.—HARRISON v. HODGSON (1830), 10 B. & C. 445; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 392; 3 Man. & Ry. M. C. 38; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 223; 109 E. R. 515.

600. —.]—Resp. was debt. in an action in the county ct. in which an order for discovery had been made against him. Applt., who was acting on behalf of the solr. for pltf., having overtaken resp. in the street, tendered to him the order for discovery, & resp. refused to accept & peruse it in the public street. Applt. thereupon thrust it into the inner fold of resp.'s coat. On a summons by resp. against applt. for assault, the justices convicted applt. on the ground that he had touched resp. unnecessarily & that the order would have been effectually served by applt.'s drawing the attention of resp. to it & dropping it in the street in his presence on his declining to accept it, but that resp.'s person was sacred & that applt. was not justified in laying hands upon him:—Held: the touching of resp. was not unnecessary, inasmuch as he refused to accept the document, & there being no evidence that applt. had touched resp. more than was necessary for the purpose of bringing the document home to him, the conviction must be quashed.—ROSE v. KEMPTHORNE (1910), 103 L. T. 730; 75 J. P. 71; 27 T. L. R. 132; 55 Sol. Jo. 126; 22 Cox. C. C. 356, D. C.

601. Forcibly cutting hair.]—If parish officers cut off the hair of a pauper in the poor house, by force, & against the will of such pauper, this is an assault.—FORDE v. SKINNER (1830), 4 C. & P. 239; 2 Man. & Ry. M. C. 294; 172 E. R. 687.

602. Moving on a person—By constable.]—A police constable is not justified under Metropolitan Police Act, 1829 (c. 44), s. 7, in laying hold of, pushing along the highway, & ordering to be off, a person found by him conversing in a crowd with another, merely because the person with whom he happens to be conversing, is known to be a reputed thief.—STOCKEN v. CARTER (1881), 4 C. & P. 477; 2 Man. & Ry. M. C. 498; 172 E. R. 780, N. P.

603. Throwing stone.]—A captain of a ship is not justified in throwing a stone at a person in a boat, who has fastened it to the ship, & thereby impeded & endangered it, for the purpose of making him let go, unless it was not possible either at the time or before the immediate pinch of the danger, to adopt any other mode for the purpose.—EYRE v. NORSWORTHY (1831), 4 C. & P. 502; 172 E. R. 800, N. P.

604. Ejection of servant from premises—By one of two partners—After expiration of notice to quit—Authority from other partner to remain.]—A servant of two partners may maintain trespass against one of the partners for turning him out of the joint dwelling-house, where the business is carried on, after the expiration of a notice to quit by that partner, if he has been authorised by the other partner to remain.—DONALDSON v. WILLIAMS (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 345; 3 Tyr. 371; 2 L. J. Ex. 173; 149 E. R. 432.

605. Resisting lawful expulsion from premises.]—If a person conducts himself in a disorderly manner in a public-house, & the landlord requests him to depart, & he refuse to do so, the landlord is justified in laying hands on him to put him out; & if, while the landlord has hold of him to put him out, the person lays hands on the landlord this is an assault.—HOWELL v. JACKSON (1834), 6 C. & P. 723; 2 Nev. & M. M. C. 627; 172 E. R. 1435, N. P. Annotation:—Reid. Sealey v. Tandy (1901), 85 L. T. 459.

606. Passive obstruction—Of entry to premises.]—A policeman prevented a member of a society from entering the society's room:—Held: if the policeman was wholly passive, & merely obstructed his entrance as any inanimate object would, this was not an assault by the policeman.—INNES v. WYLIE (1844), 1 Car. & Kir. 257; sub nom. INNES v. BOUCHER, 8 J. P. 280, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. INNES v. WYLIE, 3 L. T. O. S. 52, 74.

609. Criminal intercourse.]—Where there had been criminal intercourse, accompanied, in the first instance, with some degree of violence, an action was maintainable for an assault.—DESBOROUGH v. HOMES (1857), 1 F. & P. 6, N. P.

610. Touching person in order to attract attention.]—A person cannot justify giving another into custody for merely laying hands on him to attract his attention, provided it be not done hostilely.—COWARD v. BADDELEY (1859), 4 H. & N. 478; 28 L. J. Ex. 260; 33 L. T. O. S. 125; 23 J. P. 296; 5 Jur. N. S. 414; 7 W. R. 466; 157 E. R. 927.

611. Forcibly seizing property in possession of party—Rightful possession.]—Pltf. presented a cheque at a bank, which the cashier of defts., the bankers, took, & gave pltf. in return notes & gold. Whilst pltf. was counting the notes one of defts., having discovered that the drawer of the cheque had no assets, demanded the money back. Pltf. refused to give it up, & defts. thereupon took it by force. In an action by A. of assault & trespass for taking the money from him by force:—Held: he was entitled to recover.—CHAMBERS v. MILLER (1862), 13 C. B. N. S. 125; 1 New Rep. 95; 32 L. J. C. P. 30; 7 L. T. 856; 9 Jur. N. S. 626; 11 W. R. 236; 143 E. R. 50.

612. Medical examination of female.—A magistrate has no right to order an examination of the person of a prisoner. An examination by medical men, in pursuance of such an order, of the person of a female, in custody upon the charge of concealing the birth of her illegitimate child, constitutes an assault.—AGNEW v. JOHNSON (1877), 47 L. J. M. C. 87; 42 J. P. 424; 13 Cox, C. C. 625.

614. Resisting entrance of ministerial officer—Balliff—Acting in excess of authority.—B., a county ct. bailiff, went to levy a judgment debt on W. & calling at W.'s door; upon W. opening it, B. put his foot inside & tried to get in against the wish of W., who assaulted B. W. being summoned for assaulting B.:—Held: as B. was not in the execution of his duty in forcing a debtor's door, the justices properly dismissed the summons.—BROUGHTON v. WILKERSON (1880), 44 J. P. 781.

Annotation:—Fold. Rosser v. Conway (1893), 58 J. P. 350.

615. Constable—Resistance by wife of owner of premises.—C., a constable, in executing a warrant of distress for a general district rate in arrear went to the door of debtor's house & debtor's wife resisted his entry & assaulted him when entering against her will:—Held: the wife had implied authority to admit or exclude the constable executing civil process & was justified in using force to exclude him.—ROSSITER v. CONWAY (1893), 58 J. P. 350.

616. Overpowering force.—LATTER v. BRADDELL, No. 579, ante.

617. Running tramway in defective condition—Injury resulting.—Defts. were a co. authorised by Act of Parliament to run tramcars by steam, & had running powers over the line of another tramway co. along a highway. By reason of certain points upon such line being defective, a tramcar of defts., while being drawn by a steam engine, went off the line & injured pltf., who was upon the highway:—Held: the statutory powers of defts. could not be taken to authorise them to run their tramcars along the highway upon a tramway in a defective condition, the tramway being defective, defts. in running their tramcar on the highway were doing an unlawful act, & therefore defts. were liable as for a trespass in respect of the injury occasioned to pltf. by their immediate action.—SADLER v. SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE & BIRMINGHAM DISTRICT STEAM TRAMWAYS CO. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 17; 58 L. J. Q. B. 421; 53 J. P. 604; 37 W. R. 582, C. A.

Forcible feeding of prisoner.—It is the duty of prison officials to preserve the health of prisoners in their custody, & a fortiori to preserve their lives, & it is for the jury to say whether the means adopted by those officials, for example the feeding of prisoner by force, are necessary for that purpose.—LEIGH v. GLADSTONE (1909), 26 T. L. R. 139.

621. Forcible ejection from place of entertainment—Mistaken belief that seat not paid for.—Where therefore pltf., who had purchased a ticket for a seat at a cinema show, was forcibly turned out of his seat by the direction of the manager, who was acting under a mistaken belief that pltf. had not paid for his seat:—Held: in an action for assault & false imprisonment pltf. was entitled to recover substantial damages.—*HURST v. I. Lawful Correction.

663. Correction by father—Interference with.—In an action for assaulting pltf., defts. pleaded that pltf. was beating "a certain boy whose name is to defts. unknown," & that defts., to prevent his beating "the said boy," quietly laid their hands on him. Replication that, "the said boy" in the plea mentioned "was one Barnes, W., & was & is the lawful son of pltf.," of the age of ten years, & that "the said Barnes, W." refused to obey his lawful commands, whereupon pltf. moderately chastised him. Rejoinder, that pltf., at the time when, etc., was beating, "the said Barnes, W." with more violence than was proper & reasonable. Rejoinder, that pltf., "did not beat," etc., the said Barnes, W. "with more violence than was proper & reasonable." On the part of pltf., evidence was given, that pltf., just before defts. interfered with him, had been beating his son Barnes, W., who was ten years old, with a strap, but not immoderately; but the last witness for pltf. stated that pltf. had another son, aged eight. It was proved for defts., that, after pltf. had beaten his eldest son, Barnes, W., he began beating the younger, when defts. laid hold of him:—Held: on these pleadings the issue was limited to the question of the excessive beating of Barnes, W., & anything pltf. did to the younger boy was not in issue; & the judge at the trial would not allow any amendment as to the name of Barnes, W., as the two boys had both been beaten, & if the issue had been different pltf. might have adduced other evidence as to the extent of the beating of the younger boy.—*WINTERBURN v. the co. In 1908 it was considered desirable to reconstruct certain lines of tramway, & on May 7, an agreement was entered into between the corp. & plffs., for this purpose, which provided for facilities to plffs. to maintain the service of trams during the execution of the works & also that the corp. should insert in the contract, to be entered into by them with their contractor, a provision imposing upon the contractor full responsibility for all claims resulting from accident, injury, or damage sustained by the co. from the execution of the work. On May 15 the corp. entered into a contract with deff. for relaying the tramway lines; & by it deff. agreed to indemnify the corp. & undertook to be responsible for all damage consequent upon or arising out of the execution of the work. Plffs. were not parties to this agreement. During the execution of the work a tramcar became derailed & was overturned & damaged owing to deff.'s negligence, & plffs. were compelled to pay damages as compensation to passengers so injured:—Held: plffs. were entitled to recover from deff. damages for the injury to the tramcar, as well as the amount so paid to injured passengers. For the acts of deffs. injuriously affected both the proprietary rights of plffs. as lessees & their rights of passage on the highway; & inasmuch as, apart from the contracts of May 7 & 15, deff. would have been a trespasser ab initio & his dealings with the tramway a nuisance at common law, he could only justify such trespass & nuisance by relying on his contract with the corp., with which he had not complied.—*BIRMINGHAM CITY TRAMWAY CO., LTD. v. 683. Defence.—Must cover each separate trespass.—Where in an action for assaulting, beating, & ill treating, deff., as to the assaulting & ill treating, justified turning plff. out of his house, but the issue on the justification was found against him:—Held: upon the whole justification a battery appeared admitted, & the excuse not being proved, plff. was entitled to full costs, without a judge's certificate.—*JOHNSON v. Verdict for plff. on the general issue, & for deffs. on the remainder of the record. On motion to enter up judgment for deffs., non obstante veredicto, on the ground that the plea on which the verdict was found for them was an answer to the whole complaint, & that the dragging through the pond being mere aggravation, need not be justified:—Held: the plea was not an answer to the whole charge, as the dragging into & through the pond was a distinct substantive trespass, & not mere aggravation, & consequently that it should be justified.—*BUSH v. r. Right to amend declaration.—In an action for assault & battery plff.

(2) Semble: it is not necessary to reply excess in every case where the allegations in a declaration in trespass are covered by a plea of justification; but evidence of acts consistent with the declaration, but not within the justification, may be given under de injuriâ.

(3) Upon issue taken on a plea of son assault demesne, it is necessary to prove an assault commensurate with the trespass sought to be justified.—REECE v. TAYLOR (1835), 1 Har. & W. 15; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 469; 3 Nev. & M. M. C. 35; 5 L. J. K. B. 74.

688. — [In trespass, the count alleging that deft., on, etc., assaulted, beat & ill treated pltf., & then knocked him down on the deck of a ship, deft. pleaded, as to the assaulting, beating & ill treating, that deft. was captain of a vessel conveying passengers, of whom pltf. was one; that pltf. made a noise, disturbance & affray on board the vessel, & "was then fighting with a certain other person then also being a passenger," & "whose name is to deft. unknown," & was striving to beat such person, & also deft., so being the captain, etc.; whereupon deft., so being the captain, etc., for the preservation of the peace, & of order & discipline on the said vessel, & to separate pltf. & the said other person, & to prevent pltf. from beating the said person & deft., as he otherwise would have done, molliter manus, etc. It appeared on the trial that the person with whom pltf. had been fighting was not unknown by name, & was not a passenger, but the mate of the vessel:—Held: the justification was sufficiently maintained notwithstanding the variance, the name & description of the party not being material, but pltf. must recover for the knocking down, that being alleged as a distinct trespass from the assaulting, beating & ill treating, & not covered by the justification.—NODEN v. JOHNSON (1850), 16 Q. B. 218; 20 L. J. Q. B. 95; 16 L. T. O. S. 281; 15 Jur. 424; 117 F. R. 862.

689. — Traverse of locus in quo.—In trespass, if deft. justifies at another place or county & traverses the place alleged, where the place is not material, it is bad; for he must plead his justification where the cause arose.—PURSET v. HUTCHINGS (1601), Cro. Eliz. 842; 78 E. R. 1068.

690. — Justification must confess cause of action—Accident not justification.—Every justification must confess a cause of action. Therefore a plea to an action of assault & battery that deft. was on horseback, & his horse on a sudden fright ran away with him, that he called to pltf. to get out of the way, & upon his neglect the horse ran over him against deft.'s will, is bad.—*GIBBONS v. a. Excess of force—Whether evidence

693. — Whether defence must be specially pleaded.—Trespass against two for assaulting pltf. & tearing his clothes. The fourth plea stated, that before the committing those trespasses, pltf. was found by deft. on the land of W. S. in search of game, without the licence & against the will of W. S., & that pltf. had in his possession a hare which appeared to have been recently killed. Whereupon one deft. as servant of, & by command of W. S. demanded the hare, which pltf. refused to deliver, & had in his possession. That afterwards, & just before committing the trespasses, said deft. demanded the hare from pltf., & because he refused to deliver it, & kept it in his possession, both defts., as such servants, & by such command, in order to take the same for the use of W. S., seized pltf. & took it from him, according to the form of Game Act, 1831 (c. 32), s. 36. The fifth plea stated, that just before the trespasses, pltf. had in his possession a dead hare belonging to W. S. without his leave & licence; wherefore defts. did, as his servants, & by his command, demand the same from pltf., which he refused to deliver, & detained; whereupon defts., as such servants, etc., seized pltf., concluding as in the former plea. The replication to the fourth plea stated, that at the several times of the demands of deft. & refusal by pltf., pltf. was lawfully on the highway. A similar replication to the demand & refusal in the fifth plea. On demurrer to the replications:—Held: the fourth plea was bad, for not sufficiently showing when the second demand was made, or that it was made on the land of W. S.; & the fifth plea was also bad, for not stating that defts. gently laid their hands on pltf. in order to take the game, & that because he resisted, they necessarily committed the trespasses complained of, doing as little damage, & using as little violence to pltf. as they could on that occasion.—WISDOM v. HODSON (1833), 3 Tyr. 811.

At the trial, although one assault only was proved, the facts pleaded were held to be an insufficient answer to the facts declared on.—*STAMMERS v. The jury having found for deft.:—Held: the verdict was right; deft. having proved as much of his plea as was necessary to cover the declaration, & it not being necessary for him to

701. ——Trespass for assault & battery. Plea, that pltf. was deft.'s apprentice, & conducted himself improperly, wherefore deft. moderately chastised him. Replication de injuriâ:—Held: on these pleadings pltf. could not recover on the ground of the chastisement being excessive; for the replication de injuriâ put in issue only the cause alleged in the plea; that was, in this case, whether pltf. misconducted himself as an apprentice.

The plea says . . . "I had a right to beat my apprentice because he misconducted himself." That is, on the face of it, a satisfactory answer to pltf.'s complaint (BOLLAND, B.).—PENN v. WARD (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 338; 4 Dowl. 215; 1 Gale, 189; 5 Tyr. 975; 4 L. J. Ex. 304; 150 E. R. 146.

712. Directness & remoteness.—Remote consequences.—Special damage.]—(1) In an action for an assault, though deft. has not pleaded a justification, he may extract evidence in mitigation of damages, on the cross-examination of pltf.'s witnesses.

(2) Pltf. cannot give remote consequences in evidence as special damages.—MOORE v. ADAM (1816), 2 Chit. 198; subsequent proceedings, 5 M. & S. 156.

713. — — — — — Plaintiff turned out of train.—Loss of racing glasses.]—Pltf. was travelling with other passengers in a carriage of a railway co., & on the tickets being collected there was found to be a ticket short. Pltf. was charged by the collector with being the defaulter, & on his refusing to pay the fare or leave the carriage, he was removed from the carriage by the officers of the co. without any unnecessary violence. It turned out that pltf. had a ticket, & he brought an action for the assault against the co., laying as special damage the loss of a pair of race-glasses, which he had left behind him in the carriage when he was removed. There was also a count in trover; but there was no evidence that the glasses had come to the possession of any of the co.'s servants:—Held: pltf. could not recover for the loss of the glasses.—*GLOVER v. SUB-SECT. 2.—WHAT CONSTITUTES IMPRISONMENT.

714. General rule.]—Any restraint upon the personal liberty, not warranted by law, is a false imprisonment.—BRIDGETT v. COYNEY (1827), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 211; 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 1; 6 L. J. O. S. M. C. 42.

715. — — — — —.]—Deft., the owner of a beer-house, placed pltf. therein to carry on the business as his servant at weekly wages, with an agreement for a month's notice to determine the service. Having given him a week's notice, deft. made up the account & required pltf. to pay him the balance; & on pltf.'s refusal to accede to this request, on the ground that he had not received the stipulated month's notice, deft. brought in a superintendent & a sergeant of police, & one who, on pltf.'s attempting to go upstairs, refused to permit him to do so, & ultimately only allowed him to go accompanied by an officer. After some further altercation about the money, & pltf.'s again refusing to hand it over at the request of the superintendent, the latter asked deft. if he should take him: it did not appear what answer deft. made, but the officer took pltf. into custody, & entered a charge of embezzlement against him at the station house, & afterwards carried him before the magistrates, by whom he was discharged. In an action in the county ct. for the false imprisonment the judge told the jury that there were three questions for their consideration—(a) whether there was any imprisonment, (b) by whom it was committed, (c) whether there was any legal ground for it. Upon (a), he told them that "to constitute an imprisonment, it was not necessary that the person should be locked up within four walls, but that, if he was restrained in his freedom of action by another, that was an act of imprisonment, & that the way in which pltf. had been constrained in his own house & the restraint put upon his person by refusing him permission to leave the room & go upstairs in his own house, was in itself an imprisonment, independent of his being conveyed before a magistrate"; upon (b), "that, if they found deft. was the moving party in causing the imprisonment, he was responsible for it"; & upon (c), "that pltf., as tenant or as lawful occupier, under an agreement not then terminated, of the premises was not legally liable to be ejected by compulsion & without notice, & that, if he refused to leave the house, deft. could only eject him by adopting the proper legal proceedings to obtain possession, & that there was no evidence whatever to support of a person in a particular place, or the compelling him to go in a particular direction by force of an exterior will overpowering or suppressing in any way his own voluntary action. Is an imprisonment on the part of the person exercising that exterior will.—PARANAKSAM NARASAYA PANTULU v. STUART (1865), 2 Mad. 396.—IND.

718. ———.]—In trespass for false imprisonment, proof must be given of circumstances from which the judge & jury may decide whether there was or was not a restraint or detention of the person; & it is not enough for witnesses to swear that they considered pltf. was in custody, & thought that he was under restraint; nor is it enough to show that deft., at a police office, stood before pltf. & said, "You cannot go away till the magistrate comes," if it appears that he relinquished that attitude, & went to another part of the office before pltf. had made any attempt to depart.—CANT v. PARSONS (1834), 6 C. & P. 504; 172 E. R. 1339, N. P.

721. — Whether plaintiff must be aware of restraint.—Deft., a schoolmaster, improperly, & under a claim for money due for schooling, refused to allow the mother of an infant scholar to take her son home with her, & the son was, though frequently demanded by the mother, kept at school during a part of the holidays, but there was no proof that the infant knew of the demand or denial, or that any restraint had been put upon him; & an action of trespass for assault & false imprisonment having been brought by the infant:—Held: it was not maintainable.—*HERRING v. 719 iii. ——]—Holding a man by the sleeve with the thumb & finger, or even laying the hand on his shoulder or catching him by the shoulder does not amount to false imprisonment, where it is not said that he could not have got away if he had desired to do so. 731. ———— Plaintiff going to station voluntarily.—In an action of trespass & false imprisonment for causing a person to be taken to a police station house, if it appear that the going proceeded originally from pltf.'s own will, deft. will be entitled to a verdict on either "Not guilty" or "leave & licence," pleaded; but pltf. will not be deprived of his right to recover damages, if it appear that, being acted upon by deft.'s having made a charge of felony against him in the presence of a policeman, he went voluntarily with the policeman to the station house for the purpose of meeting the charge.—PETERS v. STANWAY (1835), 6 C. & P. 737; 172 E. R. 1442, N. P.

732. ———— No further action by defendant.—There was evidence to show that deft. upon a suspicion of felony had not merely made a complaint & charge to the police upon which they had of themselves acted & taken pltf. into custody, in which case trespass for false imprisonment would not have been maintainable, but deft. had expressly directed the police to take pltf. into custody, which was an imprisonment by deft. for which trespass would lie (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—*CHIVERS v. 737. ———— Confinement to house.—In an action against the Governor of Gibraltar, for assault & false imprisonment, it was proved that a party of soldiers, under the command of his military secretary, surrounded pltf.'s house, & that while a search was making in the adjoining house for a Spaniard who was suspected to be concealed there, pltf., in attempting to leave his house, was prevented from so doing by a sentinel placed at the door, who compelled him to return. The jury having returned their verdict for pltf.:—Held: they were warranted in coming to the conclusion that deft. had ordered the search, & the act complained of was a necessary consequence of the deft.'s orders.—*GLYNN v. 741. — Miner not allowed to leave mine till end of shift—Refusal by miner to work.]—A miner descended a coal mine at 9.30 a.m. for the purpose of working therein for his employers, the owners of the colliery. In the ordinary course he would be entitled to be raised to the surface at the conclusion of his shift, which expired at 4 p.m. On arriving at the bottom of the mine the miner was ordered to do certain work which he wrongfully refused to do, & at 11 a.m., he requested to be taken to the surface in a lift, which was the only means of egress from the mine. His employers refused to permit him to use the lift until 1.30 p.m. although it had been available for the carriage of men to the surface from 1.10 p.m. & in consequence he was detained in the mine against his will for twenty minutes. In respect of this detention the miner sued his employers for damages for false imprisonment:—Held: on the principle of volenti non fit injuria, the action could not be maintained.—HERD v. The magistrate heard the charge & remanded the prisoner. On a subsequent examination he was discharged, it being then discovered that the charge had been made under a mistake. The declaration charged the carrying pltf. in custody before a magistrate, & the remand, as distinct acts of trespass; & the jury gave damages for both:—Held: damages could not be given for *d. Defendants employing special constable.]—*C. was a special constable appointed by defts., who were wharfingers & shipowners, for the protection of their property & the keeping of order on their wharf. He was paid by defts. C. arrested pltf. & took him into custody on a false charge of having stolen goods from defts.' wharf. 774. — — — — —]—(1) To an action of false imprisonment & putting pltf. in irons, deft. pleaded that he was commander of a ship, & deft. was his servant, & had charge of his cabin & its contents, & access thereto; that two sums of money were stolen on two occasions out of deft.'s desk in his cabin, which had been opened by means of a key; that pltf. had access to where the key of the desk was kept, & that deft. believed no one could have had access to the key without the pltf.'s knowledge, & that deft. believed pltf. was either guilty or concerned in the stealing of the money. The plea averred that putting in irons was a reasonable mode of detainer. At the trial the verdict on this plea was found for deft.; & upon a motion in arrest of judgment, it was held to be a good defence to the action.

(2) The plea must show reasonable & probable grounds of suspicion. . . . It is enough if the plea sets out facts which raise a reasonable suspicion, without setting out all the evidence thereof (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).

Sect. 2.—False or illegal imprisonment: Sub-sect. 4, A. (b) & (c), & B.]

A. stated in the presence & hearing of pltf. that he had been so sent by pltf.; wherefore deft., having good & probable cause of suspicion, & vehemently suspecting that pltf. had, by such false & fraudulent pretences as aforesaid, unlawfully endeavoured to obtain from the bankers a blank cheque book for unlawful & unauthorised purposes, committed the trespasses complained of:—Held: the plea was bad, inasmuch as it neither alleged that a felony had been committed, so as to make it a good justification at common law, nor that pltf. had been "found committing" any offence against the provisions of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, so as to justify his apprehension without warrant, under sect. 63 of the statute.

The general understanding undoubtedly is that where a misdemeanour only has been committed a warrant must be procured (TINDAL, (C.J.)).—MATHEWS v. BIDDULPH (1841), 3 Man. & G. 390; 4 Scott, N. R. 54; 11 L. J. M. C. 13; 133 E. R. 1195.

779. ————.]—In an action for false imprisonment, deft. pleaded that his goods had been stolen, & having cause to suspect pltf. of the felony he gave her into custody, the plea stating several grounds of suspicion. Pltf. called a policeman to prove that deft. directed him to take pltf. into custody; & in his cross examination the policeman said that, at the same time, & in the presence of pltf., deft. stated that the goods had been stolen, & also stated some of the grounds of suspicion mentioned in the plea :—Held: (1) this was evidence for the jury to consider, & from which they might find, that the felony had been committed; & deft. had good cause to suspect pltf., if this evidence satisfied them that the facts really were so; (2) although in this plea deft. ought to set out his grounds of suspicion, yet that he would be entitled to a verdict without proof of the whole of them, if he proved that a felony was in fact committed, & proved so much of the grounds of suspicion as satisfied the jury that he had reasonable cause to suspect pltf.—WILLIAMS v. CROSSWELL (1846), 2 Car. & Kir. 422, N. P.

781. ————.]—A customer of a bank, having a paid cheque of his sent back to him by the bankers, altered the style of handwriting, so as to make it appear not his, & then returned it, declaring it to have been a forgery, & got credit from them for the amount on account; at the same time making a statement to the effect that pltf. had forced the cheque, supporting that statement by specific facts, which, if true, would have constituted reasonable ground for suspecting that pltf. had been guilty of forgery. The bank having thereupon given pltf. into custody on a charge of forgery :—Held: (1) there had been no forgery by the customer; (2) even if there had been, there was not, therefore, reasonable ground for suspecting pltf. to have been guilty of felony; (3) as the real offence committed was only misdemeanour in obtaining money by false pretences, there was no justification for giving pltf. into custody.—BRITTAIN v. BANK OF LONDON (1863), 3 F. & F. 465; 2 New Rep. 24; 8 L. T. 382; 11 W. R. 569.

783. ————.]—A private person is justified in arresting another on suspicion of having committed a felony if, & only if, he can show that the particular felony for which he arrested the other was in fact committed, & that he had reasonable & probable cause for suspecting the other of having committed it.—WALTERS v. SMITH (W. H.) & SON, LTD., [1914] 1 K. B. 595; 83 L. J. K. B. 335; 110 L. T. 345; 78 J. P. 118; 30 T. L. R. 158; 58 Sol. Jo. 186.

784. ————.]—(1) A private prosecutor not having the privilege that a police constable possesses of imprisoning a person on mere suspicion that a felony has been committed, false imprisonment results if the person is detained by the private prosecutor.

(2) What constitutes imprisonment has been long ago defined. It is to be found in a work of very good authority in the application of the common law, namely, Termes de la Ley, in these words: "Imprisonment" is no other thing but the restraint of a man's liberty, whether it be in the open field, or in the stocks, or in the cage in the streets . . . or in a man's own house, as well as in the common gaol; & in all the places the party so restrained is said to be a prisoner so long as he has not his liberty freely to go at all times to all places whither he will without bail or main, prise or otherwise (DUKE, L.J.).—MEERING v. GRAHAME-WHITE AVIATION CO., LTD. (1919), 122 L. T. 44, C. A.

785. ————.]—What amounts to.—A person of decent repute, while attending a fair at a town in which he was a stranger in the way of his business as a horse dealer having unknowingly uttered a forged note, for which he is afterwards apprehended by private persons without warrant, on his way home, & carried before a magistrate for examination by whom he is immediately discharged, cannot maintain an action for false imprisonment against those who so apprehended him under such circumstances. Those circumstances may be pleaded in justification &, if proved, will entitle deft. to a verdict; at least, the ct. will not grant a new trial where the jury have been so directed, although deft. had also pleaded the general issue.—GUPPY v. BRITTLEBANK & POTTER (1818), 5 Price, 525; 146 E. R. 683.

788. ————.]—It is doubtful whether in an action for false imprisonment mere personal resemblance between pltf. & the person who had committed a felony can afford reasonable ground of suspicion, justifying an arrest on the part of a private person without warrant. But at all events, the plea will fail unless either deft. himself saw the felony committed, or unless the person who saw it, & on whose information he acted, spoke positively to the identity.—RAYNER v. GERMAN (1859), 1 F. & F. 700, N. P.

789. ————.]—Under offences against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), ss. 23, 24, if a noxious thing is unlawfully administered with intent only to injure or annoy, & does in fact inflict grievous bodily harm, a felony is committed. Therefore in an action for false imprisonment on a charge of administering poison, the jury finding that a noxious thing had been so administered, & that it inflicted grievous injury in fact, & also finding facts which amounted to reasonable cause of suspicion:—Held: deft. was entitled to the verdict on a plea of justification on the ground of reasonable suspicion of a felony.—*TULLY v. The overseers of the poor, pending the protection, summon him for the non-payment of the three rates; he does not attend before the justices, but returns the summons to the assistant overseer, stating in writing on it the fact of his having a protection order, etc., & the assistant overseer sees the messenger of the Ct. of Bkpcy. in possession of his goods, which are afterwards sold. 829. ————.]—It is a rule of law that the jury must find the facts on which the question of reasonable & probable cause depends, but that the judge must then determine whether the facts found do constitute reasonable & probable cause. No definite rule can be laid down for the exercise of the judge's judgment. It is desirable that reasonable & probable cause should be an inference of fact for determination by the jury rather than by the judge.

L. was the owner of a rifle, which was left in the care of his coachman H. The rifle had been seen & admired by P. who said he wished he had one like it. It was stolen. H. told that fact to L. his master, & at the same time informed him that R., the coachman of a near neighbour, said he had seen it in a barn belonging to P.'s father, & P. hearing of this statement, denied it, & offered to take H. & R. to the barn & show them the gun he had there; that he did take them to the barn & showed them a gun, which was not L.'s gun, & that R. said that was not the gun he had previously seen in the barn. L. caused P. to be apprehended for felony. P. was tried & acquitted, & brought an action for a malicious prosecution. Whether L. saw R. before, or only after, the apprehension, was a matter of contradictory evidence at the trial. The jury found that he had not seen R. before ordering P.'s apprehension. The judge directed the jury that that being so, he considered L. to have acted on hearsay evidence alone, & therefore without reasonable & probable cause, & consequently that P. was entitled to the verdict:—Held: this was a misdirection, & there must be a new trial.—*LISTER v. 830. ————.]—It is a question for the judge to decide as to the "reasonableness of a pawnbroker's suspicion," under Pawnbrokers Act, 1872 (c. 93), s. 34, which enables a pawnbroker to give into custody a person offering in pawn an article which the pawnbroker "reasonably suspects" has been stolen; & in an action for false imprisonment against the pawnbroker, before pltf. can recover, he must show an absence of reasonable suspicion on the part of the pawnbroker.

A notice had been circulated by the police, describing several articles which had been stolen, & amongst them were two articles described as a "gold horseshoe pin, set with seven diamonds, massive," & a "gent's gold ring, set with three diamonds." This notice had been sent to deft., who was a pawnbroker. Some days after, pltf., a man of good character, entered deft.'s shop & offered to pawn a gold horseshoe pin, set with seven diamonds, & a gold diamond ring. Deft., after referring to the notice, asked pltf. if he was a dealer; pltf. said he was not. He then asked him where he got the articles, & he replied from a Mr. N. for the purpose of pawning, giving at the time Mr. N.'s address & his own name & address, which statements were correct. Deft., believing that the pin offered by pltf. was the stolen pin, sent for a constable, & gave pltf. into custody. In an action for false imprisonment against the pawnbroker:—Held: the question of the "reasonableness of the pawnbroker's suspicion" was a question for the

Where a plea of justification in such a case states that the pltf. committed the felony, the jury must try that question in the same way as if they were sitting in the criminal ct. trying pltf. for the offence itself; & if a witness, who admits that he stole similar property at the same time, be called to sustain the plea, though he is not exactly in the situation of an accomplice, yet it seems that his testimony ought to receive some confirmation.—*RICHARDS v. Stat. cap. 126, s. 11, though the fine was greater than the justices had power to impose by the Act.—DAVIS v. RAYMOND (1865), 11 N. B. R. (6 All.) 317.—CAN.

Damages for joint trespass—Assessed on whole injury sustained—Irrespective of degree of guilt of each joint trespasser.] — Where two persons are jointly sued for false imprisonment, one of whom has acted from improper motives, the damages ought not to be assessed with reference to the act & motives of the most guilty, or the most innocent party, but the true criterion of damage is the whole injury which pltf. has sustained from the joint act of trespass.—CLARK v. NEWSAM (1847), 1 Exch. 131; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 69; 16 L. J. Ex. 296; 9 L. T. O. S. 199; 11 J. P. 840; 154 E. R. 55.

853. Sum extorted by wrongful imprisonment.]

—A. being indebted in £17 19s. 6d. for poor rate, application was made to B. & C., two justices of Sussex, who issued a warrant to levy that sum & 6s. for costs, making in all £18 5s. 6d. No goods being found in Sussex, & A. having removed to London, B. & C. issued their warrant reciting the former warrant, & the fact that it was impossible to levy the "said sum" & commanding E., the constable of Sussex, to apprehend A. & take him to Petworth gaol, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, till he should pay the said sum. This warrant was backed by the Lord Mayor, & A. being thereupon taken by E. in London, was detained till he paid the sum of £18 5s. 6d. While he was in custody the clerk of his attorney requested a copy of the warrant, & after some demur he obtained it. After the discharge of A., the clerk served on E. a formal written demand for a copy of the warrant which was signed by the attorney of A., but no copy was given. In an action of trespass against B., D., and E. jointly:—Held: the damages could not be reduced to the amount of the costs merely, but pltf. was entitled to recover the rate, which, though a just debt, had been extorted from him by illegal means.—*CLARK v. The money having been paid into ct. by the sheriff, the usual summons was taken out & served on pltf.; but he did not appear, & the money was paid to the person at whose suit pltf. had been arrested:—Held: pltf. was not precluded from recovering the money from the sheriff.—*DE MESNIL v. Damages for loss of employment—Failure to attend at time for engagement—Failure due to physical effect of imprisonment.—[Deft., caused pltf. to be apprehended upon an unfounded charge, & to be detained from half-past one until two o'clock. In support of a claim for special damage in an action for false imprisonment, pltf. proved that he would have been engaged as a journeyman by S., if he had presented himself at the factory at two o'clock on the day in question; but that, being unwell from the treatment he had received, he went home, & did not go to the factory until the next morning, when he found that his intended employer had engaged another man:—Held: this damage was too remote.—HOEY v. FELTON (1861), 11 C. B. N. S. 142; 31 L. J. C. P. 105; 5 L. T. 354; 8 Jur. N. S. 764; 10 W. R. 78; 142 E. R. 749.

857. Loss of directors' fees.—[Pltf. was given into the custody of the police by deft. on a charge of larceny, & was taken to the police station, where deft. signed the charge sheet but went bail for pltf. Before the magistrates deft. wished to withdraw the charge, but they did not allow this & remanded pltf. on bail. At the adjourned hearing the magistrates dismissed the charge, the only ground being that the proceedings were not bonâ fide. In an action for false imprisonment the jury awarded pltf. general damages & a sum of £350, which he claimed as special damages for loss of directors' fees on the ground that when his co-directors saw that he had been taken into custody charged with larceny they demanded his resignation from the board & he resigned. It was admitted that this special damage would flow from malicious prosecution. The only claim was, however, for false imprisonment:—Held: as the inevitable result of the signing of the charge sheet was pltf.'s appearance before the magistrates, & as pltf.'s co-directors would hear of his arrest before the magistrates dealt with the case, it was open to the jury to take the view that the special damage flowed from the false imprisonment.—CHILDS v. LEWIS (1924), 40 T. L. R. 870.

B. Aggravation and Mitigation of Damages.

Aggravation & mitigation of damages generally, see DAMAGES, Vol. XVII., pp. 120 et seq.

858. Aggravation—Evidence of malice—Trespass to goods of plaintiff.—(1) In an action for false imprisonment, where a verdict with £200 damages was given for one night's confinement in a prison, evidence of a trespass by deft. on the goods of pltf., arising out of the same transaction committed on the following day, was admitted for the purpose of showing that deft. was actuated by malice:—Held: to be no ground for granting a new trial.

(2) Deft. having in mitigation of damages, adduced evidence of the state of accounts between himself & the owners of the fund which pltf. was removing under an irregular order, at the time of his being given into custody, & the jury having been told that the fact shown was no mitigation of deft.'s conduct, deft.'s witnesses were allowed to be cross-examined as to bill transactions between deft. & the owners of the fund, for the purpose of negating the state of accounts set up by deft., although it was objected that such an inquiry could not be gone into unless the bills were produced:—Held: to be no ground for granting a new trial.—*EDGEELL v. 859.—Persisting in charge—Plea of felony committed by plaintiff—Plea abandoned by counsel.—[To an action of trespass for false imprisonment, deft. pleaded, by way of justification, that pltf. had committed a felony. At the trial, his counsel abandoned the plea, & exonerated pltf. from the charge:—Held: it was not a misdirection in the judge, to tell the jury that the putting of such a plea on the record was a persisting in the charge contained in it, & was to be taken into account by them in estimating the damages.—WARWICK v. FOULKES (1844), 12 M. & W. 507; 1 Dow. & L. 638; 13 L. J. Ex. 109; 2 L. T. O. S. 331; 8 Jur. 85; 152 E. R. 1298.

g. Plaintiff stripped & searched by police.—[In an action for false imprisonment it appeared that deft. gave pltf. into custody on a charge of larceny; that thereupon pltf. was taken to the police office, & there stripped & searched in accordance with what was proved to be the practice of the police in such cases. The jury found for pltf. with £100 damages. Upon motion for a new trial on the ground that the evidence of searching was inadmissible, or that, if at all admissible it should have been alleged as special damage in the summons, & plaint, & also on the ground that the damages were excessive:—Held: the evidence was rightly admitted, & the verdict should stand.—DUNPHY v. MOORE (1865), 13 L. T. 119.—IR.

PART IV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT.

1. Aggravation—Oppressiveness of defendant.—[In trespass for false imprisonment, where deft. justified under a ca. sa., & pltf. replied that it had been set aside before action brought, the judge at nisi prius allowed pltf. to go into evidence of facts & circumstances previous to the arrest, with a view of showing the oppressive conduct of deft. in issuing the ca. sa.:—Held: such evidence was admissible as affecting the damages, though not the right of action.—ROBERTSON v. MEYERS (1850), 7 U. C. R. 423.—CAN.

m.—Offensive conduct at trial.—[A direction to the jury that offensive questions put by deft.'s counsel on cross-examination, after consultation with his client & a warning by the judge, might be considered in esti-barrister.]—D., an equity barrister of eminence, was arrested by the officers of the sheriff of Surrey, in mistake for another person of the same name, the officers acting bonâ fide, on information given them by the clerk of the attorney who had sued out the writ. Under such circumstances, & without any special damage, pltf. is entitled to substantial & liberal compensation. But where there is no special damage, 250 guineas is sufficiently in excess of what is required, as to be ground for granting a rule absolute for reducing the damages, or for a new trial.—DAVIDSON v. MOLYNEUX (1861), 17 L. T. 289.

861. Mitigation — Conduct of plaintiff.] — BINGHAM v. GARNAUT (1788), Bull. N. P. 17; 2 Roscoe's Evidence in Civil Actions, 19th ed. p. 802.

862. — Reasonable suspicion of felony.] — (1) If a constable tell a person given into his charge, that he must go with him before a magistrate, & such person in consequence goes quietly, without any force being used by that constable, it is a sufficient imprisonment to support an action of trespass.

(2) Evidence of reasonable suspicion of felony may be given in mitigation of damages, in an action of false imprisonment.—CHINN v. MORRIS (1826), 2 C. & P. 361; Ry. & M. 424; 172 E. R. 163, N. P.

Annotations:—As to (2) Apld. Idnford v. Lake (1858), 3 H. & N. 276. Refd. Perkins v. Vaughan (1812), 5 Scott, N. R. 881.

863. — —.] — Trespass was brought against three defts. for an assault committed in Bristol. Two of them were constables of Oxford, & had come down & taken pltf. at Bristol, thus committing the assault, on suspicion of his having stolen a horse belonging to the other deft. in Oxfordshire. The declaration set out all the trespasses to have been done without reasonable or probable cause. The two constables pleaded not guilty only:—Held: they might give that special matter in evidence in mitigation of damages, to show that there was reasonable & probable cause.—ROWCLIFFE v. MURRAY (1842), Car. & M. 513, N. P.

864. — Persistent annoyance.]—In an action for false imprisonment, by giving pltf. in charge to a police officer, deft. may, in mitigation of damages, go into evidence to show that pltf. had, for several days, been in the habit of going after him & annoying him.—THOMAS v. POWELL (1837), 7 C. & P. 807; 173 E. R. 352, N. P.

865. — State of accounts between plaintiff & defendant—Where trespass to goods proved in aggravation of damages.]—EDGELL v. FRANCIS, No. 858, ante.

866. — Recent losses of property—Inducing suspicion of theft.]—In an action for false imprisonment on a charge of stealing money, where there is no plea of justification, deft. cannot, in mitigation of damages, give evidence of recent apparent losses of money on his part, though offered for the purpose of explaining the circumstances which induced in his mind a belief in pltf.'s guilt.—YARDLEY v. HINE (1867), 17 L. T. 264.

mitting damages in an action for assault & battery, is erroneous, & where the jury, under the influence of such direction, found a verdict of $250, it was set aside.—DRISCOLL v. COLLINS (1892), 31 N. B. R. 601.—CAN.

n. Mitigation of damages—Endeavours to escape.]—In an action for malicious arrest the statement of defence set up that there was a warrant in the hands of a constable for the apprehension of pltf. on a charge of misdemeanour; that pltf. was avoiding arrest; that defts. therefore watched him, & when he endeavoured to escape detained him until the arrival of the constable, & then gave him into custody; & that defts. did this in the bonâ fide belief that they were justified in thus aiding the arrest:—Held.

although these facts did not constitute an answer to the action, yet they could be given in evidence in mitigation of damages, & therefore it was proper that they should appear upon the record. PURSLEY v. BENNETT (1885), 11 P. R. 64.—CAN.

Part I.—Nature and Subject-Matter.

SECT. 1.—NATURE OF TROVER

1. Historical origin of action.]—In form [an action of trover] is a fiction: in substance a remedy to recover the value of personal chattels wrongfully converted by another to his own use. The form supposes deft. may have come lawfully by the possession of the goods. . . . Where deft. takes them wrongfully & by trespass, pltf. if he thinks fit to bring this action waives the trespass & admits the possession to have been lawfully gotten (LORD MANSFIELD).—COOPER v. CHITY (1756), 1 Burr. 20; 1 Keny. 395; 1 Wm. Bl. 65; 97 E. R. 166.

2. —.]—The commencement of an action of trover, which may be abandoned at any time, & which assumes that the goods came into the possession of deft. lawfully, cannot, without more, be taken to be an election on the part of the assignees to avoid the transfer.—*NEWMHAM v. 9. Whether an action for a “demand.”—Trover is an action for a demand within the meaning of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92.—ROBSON v. ALEXANDER (1828), 1 Moo. & P. 448; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 111.

SECT. 2.—NATURE OF DETINUE.

10. Gist of action—Adverse detention.—To a declaration in detinue upon a special bailment of scrip certificates to be re-delivered to pltf. on payment of a sum of money, deft. pleaded that the scrip was deposited as a pledge & security for money advanced by him to pltf., & that on repayment thereof he tendered & offered to deliver up & return to pltf. the scrip certificates which pltf. then refused to accept & receive.—Held: the word “detain” in detinue means an adverse detention, & consequently the plea was bad, as amounting to non detinet.—CLEMENTS v. FLIGHT (1846), 16 M. & W. 42; 4 Dow. & L. 261; 1 New Pract. Cas. 567; 16 L. J. Ex. 11; 8 L. T. O. S. 166; 153 E. R. 1090.

11. —.]—In detinue the gist of the action is the detainer (WILDE, C.J.).—LOSSMAN v. WHITE (1849), 7 C. B. 43; 18 L. J. C. P. 151; 137 E. R. 18.

12. —.]—Wrongful parting with possession.—The action for detention supposes that deft. has the document or has wrongfully parted with it (per Cur.).—ROUX v. WISEMAN (1857), 1 F. & F. 45.

13. Whether founded on contract or tort.—Semble: detinue is an action of contract & not of tort.—HAND v. DANIELS (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 420; Rob. L. & W. 490; Cox, M. & H. 343; 14 J. P. 434; 14 Jur. 722.

14. —.]—The first count in debt was for a large sum of money; the second count was in detinue. A large sum was paid into ct. on the first count, & a verdict on the issue as to whether more was due, found for deft. On the count in detinue, the jury found for pltf. with 1s. damages. The judge certified to deprive pltf. of costs.—Held: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 126, s. 34, did not apply, inasmuch as detinue cannot be said to be brought merely to recover damages for a wrong.—DANBY v. LAMB (1861), 11 C. B. N. S. 423; 31 L. J. C. P. 17; 5 L. T. 353; 10 W. R. 43; 142 E. R. 861.

15. —.]—In an action claiming the return of a picture or its value & damages for its detention, pltf. recovered a verdict of £10, being its value as assessed by the jury, & 1s. damages for its detention.—Held: the action was founded on tort, within County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 5, & pltf. were entitled to their costs.—BRYANT v. HERBERT (1878), 3 C. P. D. 389; 47 L. J. Q. B. 670; 39 L. T. 17; 43 J. P. 52; 26 W. R. 898, C. A.

SECT. 3.—SUBJECT-MATTER.

SUB-SECT. 1.—GOODS MUST BE SPECIFIC.

16. General rule.—PRICE v. DAVIES (1676), Freem. K. B. 438; 3 Keb. 693; 89 E. R. 328; sub nom. DAVIS v. PRICE, 1 Vent. 317.

17. —.]—Defts. contracted to sell to K. 50 hogsheads of sugar, called double loaves at 100s. per cwt., to be delivered free on board a British ship; K. sold to pltf. by the same description & defts. assented to the resale, the sugar not having been delivered or weighed.—Held: pltf. could not recover for it in trover against defts., the first vendors.

Trover cannot be maintained but for specific goods (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—AUSTEN v. RAVEN (1812), 4 Taunt. 644; 128 E. R. 483.

Annotations :—Refd. White v. Wilks (1813), 1 Marsh. 2; Gillet v. Hill (1834), 3 L. J. Ex. 145; Laurie & Morewood v. Dudin, [1926] 1 K. B. 223.

18. —.]—ORTON v. BUTLER, No. 48, post.

19. —.]—Pltf., by bought & sold notes, contracted to sell to deft. oil at a certain price “to be free delivered & paid for in fourteen days by cash, less £2 10s. per cent. discount.” Having at the time oil at a wharf, he gave an order to the wharfinger to transfer some of that to deft. The wharfinger transferred it in his books to deft.’s name, & signed a notice of the transfer directed to deft., which pltf.’s clerk on the same day took to deft. & demanded a cheque in payment. Deft. refused to give the cheque, but retained the notice & got possession of the oil against the will of pltf., who, as the jury found, never intended to part with the notice or the oil except on condition

131. Whether founded on contract or tort.—Though the action of detinue partakes both of the nature of the action founded on tort yet no case has yet been decided that a verdict for one of several defts. in detinue must enure to the benefit of all as in other actions founded wholly in contract. By parity of reasoning defts., like pltf. in detinue, do not stand in the same position as in other actions on contract & are therefore not precluded from the consequence of a verdict passing in favour of one but against others.—BOARD OF LAND & WORKS v. GLASS, Sichel & MCKEYMORTON (1863), 2 W. & W. 58.—AUS.

1811. —.]—Detinue is an action of tort.—BYRNE v. M’EVOY (1871), 1 R. 5 C. L. 568.—IR.

that a cheque was given :—Held : as the sale was of no specific oil & as deft. refused to comply with the condition, no property passed to him by the transfer in the wharfinger's books, & pltf. could maintain trover.—GODTS v. ROSE (1855), 17 C. B. 229; 25 L. J. C. P. 61; 26 L. T. O. S. 240; 1 Jur. N. S. 1173; 4 W. R. 129; 139 E. R. 1058.

21. —.]—A declaration in trover must specify the quantity of the goods; but if the verdict finds that deft. converted them to his own use, it is not good though tantamount to not guilty.—GRAMVEI v. RHOROTHAM (1601), Cro. Eliz. 865; 78 E. R. 1092.

SUB-SECT. 5.—MONEY.

44. Necessity for identification.— - - v. THOMAS (1865), Y. B. 39 Edw. 3, fo. 7 b.

45. ——An action of detinue does not lie for money at large.—BANKS v. WHETSTON (1596), (Cro. Eliz. 457; Moore, K. B. 394; 78 E. R. 711).

46. ——Trover for money out of a bag is good after verdict; but damages for the conversion only, & not for the taking, can be given.—KINASTON v. MOOR (1627), (Cro. Car. 89; 79 E. R. 678).

47. ——Qu.: if a declaration in trover for fifty pieces of gold coined within the kingdom, without naming of what denomination of money, is good. Trover de viginti vasibus was too general. SALISBURY v. PROCTOR (1697), 5 Mod. Rep. 324; 87 E. R. 683.

48. ——A count stating that debt. had & received to the use of pltf. a certain sum of money, to be paid by debt. to pltf. upon request; & the non-payment upon request & that debt. converted & disposed thereof to his own use, is bad upon demurrer.

The action of trover is only maintainable for specific property; it will lie for so many pieces of gold or silver, & in that case debt. can only redeem himself by rendering to pltf. the same specific pieces. But in this case he clearly might do so, by returning an equal sum of money. There is, therefore, not merely a want of certainty in the count, but it states that which is not the subject of an action of trover at law (ABBOTT, C.J.)—ORTON v. BUTLER (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 652; 1 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 282; 106 E. R. 1329.

50. — Whether money must be in a bag.—Trover lies for "money in a purse," ut de bonis propriis, though the conversion be alleged in retardationem executionis testamenti; & the jury may find damages to the sum laid, & costs besides.—RIVERS v. OODSKIRT (1597), (Cro. Eliz. 568; 78 E. R. 812).

55. — Distinction between trover & detinue.—An action of trover lies for money, although it be not in bags; but not an action of detinue.—CLARK'S CASE (1613), Godb. 210; 78 E. R. 128.

56. Money delivered to defendant to keep.—Trover would lie for money which was delivered by pltf. himself to debt. to keep, though not in bags.—DAVIES v. DYOS (1648), Aleyn, 91; 82 E. R. 931.

57. Purchase of securities with bankrupt's money.—Seizure of part of securities by assignee.—Whether trover lies for purchase-money of remainder.—A. knowing of B.'s bkpcy. at the request of B.'s wife & with his money buys thirty South Sea bonds & gives them to her. B.'s assignee seizes twenty-two as part of the bkpt.'s estate, he cannot maintain trover against A. for the money with which he purchased the other eight.—WILSON v. POULTER (1730), 2 Stra. 859; 1 Barn. K. B. 118, 284; 93 E. R. 898.

59. Bill of lading representing specie.—JACKSON v. ANDERSON, No. 60, post.

60. — Where whole converted.—F. advised pltf. that he had remitted to them 1,969 dollars, consigned to L. L. received 4,700 dollars & pledged the bill of lading to debt. who received the price of the dollars at the bank of England, where they were deposited for safe custody, on a sale of them to the bank:—Held: (1) the letter was a sufficient appropriation of the dollars to pltf.; (2) although no specific dollars had been severed for pltf. yet, as debt. had converted all pltf.'s & all his own, trover would lie for pltf.'s share; (3) although the dollars remained in the same unaltered custody, yet the delivery, by debt., of the bill of lading, which was the symbol of them, & the receipt of the value, was a conversion.—JACKSON v. ANDERSON (1811), 4 Taunt. 24; 128 E. R. 235.

85. — — — — — [In trover for paper, it appeared that pltf. & deft. had been in partnership together as paper manufacturers & iron merchants. The partnership was dissolved by a deed, which recited, that it had been agreed that the business of a paper manufacturer should belong exclusively to deft., & the business of an iron merchant to pltf., but that pltf. should receive out of the stock paper to the value of £898 4s. 11d., which should remain in the paper mill for a year, at his option. The deed also recited, that in performance of that arrangement paper to the value of £898 4s. 11d. had been delivered to pltf., & same was then in the mill, as pltf. acknowledged. It was then witnessed, that in performance of the arrangement pltf. & deft. dissolved partnership, & pltf. assigned to deft. the stock-in-trade of the business of a paper manufacturer, except the £898 4s. 11d. worth of paper so delivered to pltf. as aforesaid, & deft. assigned to pltf. the stock-in-trade of the business of iron merchants: there were also mutual releases. No paper whatever was set apart or delivered to pltf., but the jury found that deft. had converted the whole stock:—Held: (1) the parties were estopped by the deed, to say that no such delivery had taken place; (2) as deft. had converted the whole, pltf. might maintain trover for his share of the stock, although no specific portion had been set apart for him.—*WILES v. 87. ———.]—A. entrusted B. with goods to sell in India, agreeing to take back from B. what he should not be able to sell, & allowing him what he should obtain beyond a certain price, with liberty to sell them for what he could get if he could not obtain that price; B. not being able to sell the goods in India himself, left them with an agent to be disposed of by him, directing the agent to remit the money to himself in England:—Held: A. could not maintain trover against B. for the goods.

The conduct of deft., however, cannot amount to a conversion in any point of view. It is agreed that mere negligence is not sufficient. . . . To support an action of trover there must be a positive tortious act (HEATH, J.).—BROMLEY v. COXWELL (1801), 2 Bos. & P. 438; 126 E. R. 1372.

88. ———.]—A horse was kept at deft.'s stables; & one day, when he was from home, three or four of his servants being in charge of the premises, the horse was taken away. Deft. blamed his ostlers for letting it be taken; but on being himself remonstrated with, replied, that it was of no consequence, because he was indemnified:—Held: in such case, trover would not lie.

It appears, on the evidence, that the horse has been got away by C.; & that his taking it might, & ought to have been prevented by deft.'s servants; but, unless they concurred, C. was a trespasser; & deft. is not liable in trover though he may be in another form of action (ABBOTT, C.J.).—BARNARD v. HOW (1824), 1 C. & P. 366; 171 E. R. 1233, N. P.

91. ——— Interference to prevent damage to chattel.]—Where an injury has been done to a chattel belonging to another, in endeavouring to do a service to such person out of charity, or to prevent mischief, from the act of such persons, an action of trover will not lie for it.—DRAKE v. SHORTER (1802), 4 Esp. 165; 170 E. R. 678, N. P.

92. ——— Demand by owner without tender of compensation.]—A quantity of timber, placed in a dock on the bank of a navigable river, being accidentally loosened, is carried by the tide to a considerable distance, & left at low water upon a towing path. A. finding it in that situation, voluntarily conveys it to a place of safety, beyond the reach of the tide, at high water. A. has no lien on the timber for the trouble or expense to which he may have put himself in the carriage of it, but is liable to an action of trover, unless he deliver it up to the owner on demand, though nothing be tendered him by the owner by way of compensation. But in such a case, in all probability, A. might maintain an action against the owner for a compensation.—NICHOLSON v. CHAPMAN (1793), 2 Hy. Bl. 245; 126 E. R. 536.

95. ———.]—To constitute a conversion of goods, there must be some repudiation by deft. of the owner's right, or some exercise of dominion over them by him inconsistent with such right. A. sent by railway from Paris seven cases of pictures, etc., addressed to "A. Custom House, London Bridge, via Dunkirk, per Steamer." Upon their arrival at Dunkirk, one of the packages was found to be damaged, & was, according to the course of proceedings in France, detained there for official examination; the remaining six being sent forward by B., the agent at Dunkirk of the railway co., & also of the steam shipping co., under a bill of lading making them deliverable "to Custom House, London Bridge, or to order," upon payment of freight. These six cases duly arrived in London, & were received by A. The remaining case, having been examined & re-packed, was forwarded by B., by another vessel belonging to the same co., under a bill of lading making it deliverable "to C., to hold at the disposal of A., Custom House, London Bridge, or to his order," upon payment of freight. Both bills of lading contained a memorandum stating that the goods were to be taken out twenty-four hours after the steam boat was reported at the Custom House, or the same would be transhipped into lighters, or warehoused, at the expense & risk of the proprietors of the goods. Upon the arrival of the vessel in London, the last-mentioned case was landed by C., who was the agent in London of the shipping co., who paid the duty on the contents, & placed it, in his own name, in a free warehouse on Brewer's Quay, a usual & accustomed & proper place for the purpose. The wharfinger shortly afterwards, for his own convenience, & without the knowledge of C., removed the case in question, with other goods, to another warehouse of the same description belonging to him, in Seething Lane,

Secl. 1.—What amounts to conversion: Sub-secl. 1.] where it was destroyed by an accidental fire:—Held: C. did not exceed his duty, in landing & warehousing the goods, & consequently was not guilty of a conversion, or responsible for their loss, although the jury found that he was not acting with a view to do his best, or as a prudent man would have acted intending to do his best, for the benefit of the owner of the goods, but with a view to his own profit; & the circumstance of his having paid the duty upon the goods made no difference.

There is no doubt that a negligent dealing by a bailee with goods is not a conversion (MAULE, J.).—HEALD v. CAREY (1852), 11 C. B. 977; 21 L. J. C. P. 97; 18 L. T. O. S. 64, 209; 16 Jur. 197; 138 E. R. 762.

Deft. was the owner of a close, & plff. of certain timber which was buried in the soil. Deft. dug a hole, for the purpose, as he alleged, of making a saw pit, & in so doing cut through plff.'s timber:—Held: the motive of deft. in so making the hole should not be left to the jury to consider in judging as to whether or not a plea of justification was proved.—SIMMONS v. LILLYSTONE (1853), 8 Exch. 431; 22 L. J. Ex. 217; 21 L. T. O. S. 45; 1 W. R. 198; 155 E. R. 1417.

97. —.]—When a man perfectly well knows that the goods belong to another, & will not let him have them, he is liable in an action of trover, & the law calls his refusal to let him have them, "a conversion" (POLLOCK, C.B.).

When a man detains another's goods, he knowing that they belong to that person, or with the means of knowing it, & if he had made proper inquiry he would have ascertained they were his, in my judgment the detention of those goods is what the law has thought fit to apply the term "conversion" to. It may be an unfortunate term to use, but it is as old as the time of Lord Holt (MARTIN, J.).—PILLIOT v. WILKINSON (1863), 2 H. & C. 72; 2 New Rep. 175; 32 L. J. Ex. 201; 8 L. T. 361; 9 Jur. N. It divests the true owner of no right, & it does not physically interfere with his control or possession of the goods. But if in addition to negotiating a sale the broker meddles with the goods themselves & hands them to the buyer with the object & intention of transferring to the buyer the property & possession in pursuance of the unauthorised sale, then he makes himself liable in trover to the true owner, for he is guilty of an act in relation to the goods themselves which is inconsistent with the rights of the true owner (BIGHAM, J.).—EDELSTEIN v. SCHULER & Co., [1902] 2 K. B. 144; 71 L. J. K. B. 572; 87 L. T. 204; 50 W. R. 493; 18 T. L. R. 597; 46 Sol. Jo. 500; 7 Com. Cas. 172.

99. —.]—A railway co., received fourteen drums of crude phenol to be forwarded to the order of certain consignees. When the goods arrived at a station near their proper destination they were by mistake & without the authority of the real consignees delivered to deft. through his agent at the station, & deft. appropriated six of them to his own use. He subsequently returned eight of the fourteen to the railway co. The real consignees brought suit against the railway co. for misdelivery of six drums of phenol & recovered £82. In an action by the railway co. & the real consignees against deft. for conversion, or alternatively for money paid, deft. proved that he was expecting creosote in casks on another order at the same time & contended that as the railway co. had misled him by delivering creosote, they were estopped from recovering damages for the conversion:—Held: there was no estoppel & deft. was liable for conversion.

Dealing with the goods in a manner inconsistent with the right of the true owner amounts to a conversion, provided it is also established that there is an intention on the part of deft. in so doing to deny the owner's right, or to assert a right which is in fact inconsistent with the owner's right (per Cur.). LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO., LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. & GRAESER, LTD. v. MACNICOLL (1918), 88 L. J. K. B. 601; 118 L. T. 596; 34 T. L. R. 280; 62 Sol. Jo. 365, D. C.

100. —.]—C., the landlord of a house, the rent of which was in arrear from the tenant, being informed that E., the holder of a bill of sale of the tenant's furniture in the house, was removing the furniture between 8 & 9 o'clock in the evening, went to the house, accompanied by a policeman, & informed E. that he was the landlord & that unless a quarter's rent, which he claimed to be due, was paid to him he would not permit the furniture to be removed. Thereupon, no physical force having been used, E. desisted from removing the furniture & quitted the house, leaving a man behind in possession. On the following day C. levied a distress on the goods in the house for the quarter's rent. E. brought trover against C. for the wrongful conversion of his goods, & the jury having found a verdict for the deft.: Held: discharging a rule for a new trial, C. had not so interfered with the possession or dominion of the goods as to amount to a conversion, or to give the plff. E. a right to maintain trover.

The depriving an owner of the use of his goods so as to amount to conversion, must be a total & entire deprivation of the general dominion over them, a preventing him from doing anything at all with them, & not merely preventing him from using them in one particular way.—ENGLAND v. COWLEY (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 126; 42 L. J. Ex. 80; 28 L. T. 67; 21 W. R. 337.

101. —] Disposition for own benefit or that of another — Possession obtained fraudulently.—Though a fraudulent vendee may be sued in trover by the vendor, yet the right of action does not exist against every person into whose hands the property may have passed subsequently.

If G. obtained the goods from plffs. by fraud, & sold them to defts., yet, if defts. were not privy to the fraud, they are not liable to the plffs. in trover.

G. bought cotton goods of plffs. to the amount of £816, & they were afterwards sold by R. to defts. for £589. No transactions were shown between G. & R.:—Held: the connection between plffs.

& debts. were too remote to raise a cause of action, unless the jury were convinced that G. obtained the goods originally by fraud, & debts. bought them under circumstances which must have convinced them that the goods were so obtained.—SHEPPARD v. SHOOLBRED (1841), Car. & M. 61, N. P.

102. — Possession obtained innocently.]

—Any person who, however innocently, obtains possession of the goods of a person who has been fraudulently deprived of them, & disposes of them, whether for his own benefit or that of any other person, is guilty of a conversion. Where, therefore, B. had fraudulently obtained cotton from F., & H., whose ordinary business was that of a cotton broker, & who was utterly ignorant of the fraud of B., purchased it from B. in the belief & expectation that M., one of his ordinary clients, would accept it, & M. did afterwards accept it, though H. only received from M. a broker's commission & not a trade profit on the sale:—Held: in this instance H. had made himself a principal, & by transferring the cotton to M. had committed an act of conversion, which made him liable in trover to F., the real owner of the cotton. HOLLINS v. FOWLER (1875), L. R. 7 H. L. 757; 41 L. J. Q. B. 169; 33 L. T. 73; 40 J. P. 53, II. 1.; aff. S. C. sub nom. FOWLER v. HOLLINS (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 616, Ex. Ch.

106. — Defendant claiming right to goods in himself.]—(1) If a person detains goods under any claim of interest in himself, so as to deprive the person entitled to the possession of them of his dominion over them, it is a conversion.

F., being in possession of a billiard table, which pltf. had lent to him on hire by bill of sale assigned the goods in his house, & with them the billiard table, to deft. Deft. took possession, but did not remove the table. Pltf. demanded the table. Deft. desired to see the writing under which it was lent to F. On the following day pltf.'s son produced the document upon which an agreement for the sale of the billiard table, which had not been carried into effect, was indorsed. Deft. was at first willing to give up the table, but subsequently wished to consult his attorney. Pltf. refused to permit deft. to have a copy of the document, & gave him notice that he would call for the table on the following day at 12 o'clock. Accordingly at that hour pltf. called & saw deft.'s man, but did not get the table, the room in which it was being locked. The table was afterwards seized by F.'s landlord for rent. In an action for trover by pltf. for the table:—Held: there was evidence from which the jury were warranted in finding a conversion of the table by deft.

(2) So, notwithstanding that deft. might have given directions to his man to give up the table when called for, such directions not having been communicated to pltf. Qu.: whether deft.'s taking possession of the table under the bill of sale was not a conversion.

(3) There is no more common cause of action than where an owner of goods complains that another has wrongfully taken possession of them. The law has provided four forms of action applicable to such a state of things. (a) The action of trespass, which appears more immediately directed to the taking of a man's property out of the possession of the owner; (b) the action of replevin in respect of goods taken but restored to the owner by process of law. But at common law the more direct remedy for the recovery of possession, or damages, where a chattel was detained from the owner, was the action of detinue. There existed, however, an objection to that action, which was that deft. was entitled to wage his law, & the consequence was, that deft. in an action of detinue, by himself swearing to the non-existence of the cause of action, could at once defeat pltf. In consequence of this, the cts. of law, in very early times, invented the action of trover. They permitted pltf. to state that he lost goods which he never lost, & that deft. found goods which he never found, & that deft. converted the goods so found to his own use. The cts. took upon themselves to prohibit deft. from denying either the averment of the losing or the finding by deft.; & thus they gave an action, a species of action on the case, in which deft. could not wage his law. That, I believe, was the origin of the action of trover—an action devised for the purpose of preventing pltf.s. from being defeated by the wager of law. The origin of the action of "indebitatus assumpsit" was the same. For the purpose of preventing the wager of law in an action to recover a debt, the cts. devised the action of "indebitatus assumpsit," wherein it was alleged that deft. was indebted to pltf., & being so indebted, he promised to pay the debt, but broke his promise. This was an action on the case, & wager of law could not be made. This, I believe was the true origin of the action of trover, & in my judgment, we ought to extend its operation to all cases where a right of action in detinue properly exists, & not throw difficulties in the way of a man's recovering where his goods are wrongfully detained (MAITIN, B.).—*BURROUGHS v. A. Taking.

(a) In General.

115. Wrongful taking.]—A wrongful taking is sufficient to support a count in trover, without proving a subsequent demand & refusal.—GRAINGER v. HILL (1838), 4 Bing. N. C. 212; 1 Arn. 42; 5 Scott, 561; 7 L. J. C. P. 85; 132 E. R. 769; sub nom. GRANGER v. HILL, 2 Jur. 235.

116. — Necessity for intent to convert.—To use of taker or third person.]—Trover for two horses. It appeared at the trial that deft. was the manager of a ferry from B. to L. & that pltf. embarked on board deft.'s ferry boat at B. having with him the horses in question, for the carriage of which he had paid the usual fare. When deft. came on board, it having been suggested that pltf. had behaved improperly on board, he, deft., told pltf. he would not carry the horses over the water, & that he must take them on shore. Pltf. refused to do this, & deft. took them from pltf. & put them on shore, & they were conveyed to an hotel kept by deft.'s brother. Pltf. remained on board & was conveyed over the water. On the following day pltf. sent for the horses, but they were not delivered up; a message was, however, afterwards sent to pltf., that he might have the horses on sending for them & paying for their keep, but that if he did not send for them, they would be sold to pay the expenses. The latter was accordingly done, & this action was brought. The defence set up was, that pltf. having miscondacted himself on board, the horses were put on shore in order to get rid of pltf. by inducing him to follow them.

The judge, in summing up, told the jury that deft. by taking the horses from pltf. & turning them out of the vessel, had been guilty of a conversion, unless they thought pltf.'s conduct justified his removal from the steamboat, & he had refused to go without his horses:—Held:

this amounted to a misdirection, as a mere wrongful asportation of a chattel does not amount to a conversion, unless the taking or detention of the chattel is with intent to convert it to the taker's own use, or that of some third person, or unless the act done has the effect either of destroying or changing the quality of the chattel.—FOULDES v. WILLOUGHBY (1841), 8 M. & W. 540; 1 Dowl. N. S. 86; 10 L. J. Ex. 364; 5 Jur. 534; 151 E. R. 1153.

119. Wrongful seizure by officer—Seizure of game by constable.—In Poaching Prevention Act, 1862 (c. 114), s. 2, "the value" of the game which is to be restored to an innocent person from whom it has been taken by a police officer, in pursuance of the power of seizure given by the sect., means the value of the game at the time of the termination in favour of the innocent person of proceedings subsequently taken against him by the police officer under the provisions of the section, & not the value of the game at the time it was seized.

A police officer seized certain partridges' eggs in accordance with the provision of Poaching Prevention Act, 1862 (c. 114), s. 2, under which partridges' eggs are "game," but subsequently took out a summons against the person from whom he seized them, charging him before justices with an offence against Game Act, 1831 (c. 32), s. 24, which contains no power of seizure. A conviction under the summons was on a case stated by the justices, quashed. By order of the justices the eggs were destroyed:—Held: the police officer was liable for the value of the eggs at the time they were seized in an action founded on trover, inasmuch as it is a condition subsequent to any steps that a police officer takes under Poaching Prevention Act, 1862 (c. 114), s. 2, that he should continue to proceed under that section in order to be entitled to its protection. If he seizes game with a bona fide intention of acting under Poaching Prevention Act, 1862 (c. 114), s. 2, but subsequently proceeds under a different statute his act of seizure is thereby rendered unlawful & he becomes in law a trespasser.—*STOWE v. 120. Taking possession of effects of testator—Appointment as executor revoked.—Where an exor. had obtained probate of a will, with notice that testator had made a subsequent will, appointing another exor., & he acted by taking possession of testator's effects:—Held: the exor. under the second will, who had obtained probate might maintain trover for the effects so taken possession of.—*WOOLLEY v. 121. Taking excessive toll.—Where a person entitled to toll of a commodity, wheat, for instance, takes more than he is entitled to, an action of trover lies against him for the excess, although the part lawfully taken be mixed up with the excess.—*NORMAN v. 122. Removal of virgin soil by tenant.—If a tenant of land, during his tenancy, remove a dung heap, & at the time of his so doing, digs into & removes virgin soil that is beneath it, the landlord may maintain either trespass de bonis asportatis or trover for the removal of the virgin soil.

I am of opinion that, if a tenant, during the tenancy, remove virgin soil, it becomes by operation of law the personal property of the landlord (PARKE, B.).—HIGGON v. MORTIMER (1834), 6 C. & P. 616; 172 E. R. 1389, N. P.

123. Taking under threat—Sufficiency of duress.—Pltf. being lawfully possessed of certain bills of exchange given him by D., a trader, deft., acting on behalf of creditors of D., who had taken proceedings to make him bkpt., came to pltf. when ill in bed, & demanded the bills, & on pltf.'s refusal to give them up, told him that if he did not the expense of the bkpcy. would fall on him, & the comr. would be very severe with him. Pltf. was much agitated, & delivered up the bills. Pltf.'s agent afterwards, while the bills were in deft.'s possession, informed him of the circumstances under which they had been given to pltf., & told him that he, deft., & his employers had no right to them; but deft., notwithstanding, handed them over to his employers. In trover for the bills:—Held: (1) the original taking was not a conversion, inasmuch as there was no such duress as would have avoided a contract, or have enabled pltf. to maintain trespass de bonis asportatis; (2) deft. was guilty of a conversion by delivering the bills to his employers after notice of the facts. —POWELL v. HOVLAND (1851), 6 Exch. 67; 20 L. J. Ex. 82; 16 L. T. O. S. 369; 155 E. R. 456.

124. Taking property of lunatic—For purpose of protection.—The wife of a lunatic ordered the medical gentleman having the care of the lunatic to take from him certain letters & papers, which was done accordingly:—Held: the medical gentleman was not liable in an action of trover

125. Removal of fixtures—By outgoing tenant.]—Pltf. purchased a farm from the devisees in trust of the father of deft., & the premises were conveyed by a deed, to which deft. was a party, as one of the devisees. Pltf. demised the premises to M. immediately after the conveyance, & deft., who was in the occupation of the farm, at the time of the conveyance, under a lease from the devisees, removed some rick staddles, a thrashing machine, & a granary from the premises after the demise to M. The deed conveyed the land & all fixtures: the articles in question had been put on the land by deft.'s father:—Held: the removal of it [the granary] would not support a count for an injury to the reversionary estate of pltf., nor a count in trover.—WILTSHEAR v. COTTELL, (1853), 1 E. & B. 674; 22 L. J. Q. B. 177; 20 L. T. O. S. 259; 17 Jur. 758; 118 E. R. 589.

127. Removal of goods by assignee in bankruptcy.]—Pltf. agreed with K. to purchase from K. 100 out of 200 quarters of barley which pltf. had seen in bulk & approved of; & he paid part of the price. It was agreed that pltf. should send sacks for the barley, & that K. should fill the sacks with the barley, take them to a railway, place them upon trucks free of charge, & send them to pltf. Pltf. sent sacks enough for a part only of the 100 quarters; these K. filled; & K. also endeavoured to find trucks for them, but was unable to do so. Pltf. repeatedly sent to K. demanding the barley. K. finally detained it, & emptied the barley from the sacks back into the bulk. K. having become bkpt. after he had emptied the barley from the sacks into the bulk & defts., his assignee, having removed the whole together:—Held: this was a conversion, by the assignee, of all the barley, if any, which, by the putting it into the sacks, had become pltf.'s property.—ALDRIDGE v. JOHNSON (1857), 7 E. & B. 885; 26 L. J. Q. B. 296; 3 Jur. N. S. 913; 5 W. R. 703; 119 E. R. 1476.

128. Sailing with goods—Without giving bill of lading.]—Pltf., a salt merchant at Liverpool, was in the habit of shipping cargoes of salt there for M., a merchant in London, on board vessels chartered by M., charging him a commission in addition to the price, & getting bills of lading making the salt deliverable to his order, which bills of lading he sent with the invoice & a draft at four months to M. In Nov. 1863, M. chartered the ship "S. F.," belonging to defts., to carry a cargo of salt from Liverpool to Calcutta,—freight to be paid one-third by freighter's acceptance at four months from the sailing of the vessel, the remainder on delivery of the cargo at Calcutta.

Pursuant to instructions from M., pltf. proceeded to load the "S. F.," & had shipped 1,007 tons, for which he took the mate's receipts, in his own name, when he learned that M. had stopped payment. He thereupon refused to load any more, & defts. filled up the loading themselves. Pltf. then produced to defts. the mate's receipts for the 1,007 tons, & demanded a bill of lading for that quantity, making it deliverable to his order. This defts. refused, & the vessel sailed with the salt on board:—Held: it was properly left to the jury to say whether or not pltf. put the salt on board the "S. F.," with the intention of passing the property therein to M.; & the jury having found that pltf. did not intend to pass the property to M., the sailing from Liverpool without giving pltf. a bill of lading in exchange for the mate's receipts, as demanded, was a conversion; & the proper measure of damages was, the value of the salt at Liverpool at the time of sailing.—FALK v. FLETCHER (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 403; 5 New Rep. 272; 34 L. J. C. P. 146; 11 Jur. N. S. 176; 13 W. R. 346; 144 E. R. 501.

129. Leaving man in possession—Goods in cart.]—Trespass for stopping & turning back pltf.'s cart, & seizing & converting the goods in it. Pltf., not guilty, as to converting the goods: judgment by default, as to stopping & turning back the cart. Evidence, that deft. had authorised the stopping & taking back the cart, & saying to a man, that he left him in possession. The judge thought this not sufficient evidence of the conversion of the goods; & therefore, the jury found a verdict for deft. upon the issue; & gave nominal damages on the judgment by default:—Held: to be right.—*HOPKINS v. 137. ——— Sale by bailiff.]—Where, under an execution in the county ct., goods of which the owner is entitled to take possession are seized & sold by the bailiff, the bailiff is liable in trover at the suit of the owner.

Goods were seized by the high bailiff in execution of a judgment recovered in the county ct., which were not the property of judgment debtor, but had been let to him by claimants under a hire purchase agreement. The goods were sold by the high bailiff & possession delivered to the purchasers. The hire-purchase agreement provided that if the goods were taken in execution claimants might without previous notice terminate the hiring & re-take possession. Claimants did not know of the seizure until after the goods had been sold & possession delivered to the purchasers, when they served notice upon the high bailiff that the goods belonged to them, & claimed damages from him for conversion:—Held: as at the time of the sale claimants were entitled under the agreement to retake possession of the goods, the sale was an act of conversion as against them for which they could maintain trover against the high bailiff.—JELKS v. HAYWARD, [1905] 2 K. B. 460; 74 L. J. K. B. 717; 92 L. T. 692; 53 W. R. 686; 21 T. L. R. 527; 49 Sol. Jo. 685, D. C.

138. Attachment of goods in hands of garnishee.]

—Semble: the attaching by process from the Sheriffs Ct. in London of property in the hands of the garnishee is not such a conversion as will enable the owner to maintain trover.—MALLALIEU v. LAUGHER (1828), 3 C. & P. 551; 172 E. R. 541, N. P.

139. Seizure of fixtures—Execution against lessee—Fixtures assigned to plaintiffs.]—A tenant's right to things affixed to the freehold is at an end if he omits to detach them during his term or possession; & he cannot afterwards treat them as chattels, in an action of trover brought against the sheriff, for taking them under a writ of fi. fa.

Accordingly, where the lessee of certain collieries, assigned goods & chattels, & engines partly affixed to the freehold, to plffs., & the lessor afterwards took possession of the collieries & engines, by reason of a forfeiture:—Held: plffs. could not maintain an action of trover against the sheriff, who had taken the engines under a fi. fa. against the lessee, inasmuch as the latter had not detached them during the continuance of his possession.—MINSHALL v. LLOYD (1837), 2 M. & W. 450; Murp. & H. 125; 6 L. J. Ex. 115; 1 Jur. 336; 150 E. R. 834.

140. Effect of bankruptcy of debtor.]—(1) The words "fraudulent & void as against the assignee of such" persons contained in Judgments Act, 1837 (c. 110), s. 59, do not mean fraudulent & void absolutely, but only as to the assignee, so that a transaction forbidden by that sect., & declared "fraudulent & void as to the assignee," may be valid as to other persons.

Where therefore F., a debtor, intending to petition the Insolvent Debtors' Ct., voluntarily gave Y., one of his creditors, a warrant of attorney on which Y. entered up judgment & issued execution, & the sheriff seized & sold the goods; & F. afterwards presented his petition, & an assignee was appointed:—Held: the assignee could not treat the transaction as void from the beginning, & maintain trover against Y., on an alleged wrongful conversion at the time of the seizure.

(2) The assignee brought trover, alleging in the first count, that the creditor Y. wrongfully deprived F. of the goods. Y. pleaded not guilty, & also the warrant of attorney & the execution under it. The assignee replied, that after Judgments Act, 1837 (c. 110), & within three months before F.'s imprisonment, F., being in insolvent circumstances did, with the intent of petitioning the ct., etc., voluntarily, fraudulently, & contrary to the statute, charge his estate in favour of Y., a creditor, by means of a warrant of attorney, fraudulent & void within the statute, whereby Y. obtained execution, etc.:—Held: on this pleading trover was not maintainable against Y.—YOUNG v. 142. Evidence of conversion—Receipt of poundage by sheriff.]—A sheriff, before the passing of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, having no notice of a previous act of bkpcy. committed by a trader, seized his goods under a fi. fa., but withdrew upon an arrangement entered into between the execution creditor & the trader, receiving however his poundage in the ordinary manner. A commission was afterwards issued on this act of bkpcy.:—Held: the assignees might maintain trover against the sheriff for the goods seized.

145. Detaining furniture of tenant—After expiration of tenancy.]—Pltf. hired a part of deft.'s house, & there resided for some time, furnishing the rooms & bringing goods there. On the expiration of the tenancy, deft. refused to permit him to take away his goods, on pretence that the rent was not paid, & he proceeded to lock the doors of the rooms & otherwise prevented pltf. from taking away his goods. Pltf. brought trespass, but was nonsuited on the ground that trover was the proper form of action, the owner of the house having sufficient possession for an unlawful conversion to rest upon:—Held: the nonsuit was right.—*HARTLEY v. B. recovered judgment in ejectment, & upon execution of the writ of possession, turned A.'s servants off the premises, refusing, at the same time, to allow them to remove the lime remaining on the premises. Upon trover for the lime:—Held: these facts did not necessarily amount to a conversion.

148. Detention of fixtures by lessee—Fixtures mortgaged by previous lessee.]—A., having mortgaged to pltf. the fixtures in a house of which he was tenant, before the fixtures were severed, surrendered his lease to his landlord, who demised to deft. Dft. then entered & took possession of the house, together with the fixtures:—Held: the mtgr. could not defeat his own act by the surrender, & pltf. had a right to enter & sever the fixtures notwithstanding; & they were entitled, in an action of trover for the fixtures, to recover their value.—*LONDON & WESTMINSTER LOAN & DISCOUNT CO., LTD. v. 151. Sale of wood by copyhold tenant.]—Where by agreement dated 1656, between the lord & certain tenants of customary tenements within a manor, the tenants covenanted, that they, their heirs & assigns, would not cut down, sell or dispose of any wood standing or growing, or hereafter to stand or grow, without the licence of the lord, & the lord covenanted to set out yearly, upon the request of tenants, sufficient for the repairing of their houses, etc., & other necessary uses in & about the tenements, & that in case any of the tenants, their heirs, or assigns, should plant any wood upon the tenements, it should be lawful for them to cut down, use, & dispose of all or any such wood for repairing their houses, etc., of for any other their necessary uses without disturbance of the lord:—Held: deft., who was tenant of one of the customary tenements comprised in the above agreement, was not entitled without licence of the lord to cut down & sell wood which had been planted on the tenement by a tenant since the agreement, & having so done, the lord might maintain trover against her for the wood.—BLACKETT v. LOWES (1814), 2 M. & S. 494; 105 E. R. 465.

152. Sale on plaintiff's account.]—Proof that deft., in trover, stated that he sold the property in question on pltf.'s account is not primâ facie evidence of a conversion.—ENGLISH v. CHARTERS (1816), 2 Stark. 30; 171 E. R. 562, N. P.

153. Sale by order of court—Delivery of ship's register to purchaser.]—The owner of a ship consigned her to persons abroad who hypothecated her, & directed the captain to sign a bottomry bond. On her arrival in London, he, by their direction, delivered the register to deft., the agent of the consignees, who gave it to their solr., to institute proceedings in the Ct. of Admty., on the bottomry bond. The ship was sold, by order of that ct., & the register decreed to be given up to the purchaser. The owner became bkpt., & his assignees brought an action of trover for the register:—Held: they could not recover, as they might have appeared in the Admty. Ct., & prevented the sale of the vessel, & as the delivery of the register to the purchaser, under the decree of that ct., was not a conversion.—HOSSACK v. MASSON (1820), 4 Moore, C. P. 361.

154. Sale by broker.]—(1) N. & co., commission agents, employed defts., who were sworn brokers, to buy eighteen chests of indigo for them at one of the East India co.'s sales. N. & co. dealt on behalf of another party, pltf., but this was not mentioned. Defts. paid for the chests & kept the India warrants, & the goods remained in the co.'s warehouses. The principal, being informed of the purchase, paid N. & co. the amount. They afterwards directed defts. to sell the indigo, & apply the proceeds in reduction of a balance due to them from N. & co., which was done; the defts. not knowing that any other party had a claim to the goods, & never having been paid, specifically, for the advance which they had made in respect of them. There had been a running account between N. & co. & defts. for some time, during which the latter held a number of warrants for indigos purchased by them for N. & co., & for which defts. had made advances. N. & co. occasionally withdrew the warrants, & at or near the same time paid in money to their account with defts., to about the value. There was no express agreement as to this, but an understanding that the warrants were not to be taken away upon credit. The payments were made & entered generally. Between the time of purchasing the eighteen chests & that of the direction to resell them, N. & co. had paid in this manner more than the value of the eighteen chests, but had also, during all that time, been indebted to the defts. in a larger amount. On trover brought by the principal against defts.:—Held: the above payments on account could not be considered as appropriated to the discharge of defts.' claim on the eighteen chests, & they consequently had a lien upon these at the time of the sale, which, under the circumstances, was an answer to the present action.

(2) N. & co. purchased & paid for twenty-three chests of indigo, on behalf of the same principal, & were paid the amount by him, but retained the warrants, & the chests remained in the East India co.'s warehouses. Being desirous of withdrawing some other warrants which they had in the hands of defts., they deposited these in lieu of them; & they afterwards authorised defts. to sell the twenty-three chests, & appropriate the proceeds, which they did, not knowing that any party was interested in them but N. & co. At the time of this transaction N. & co. were creditors in account with their principal to an amount much below the value of the indigo:—Held: the sale of the twenty-three chests was a conversion, & defts. were liable to the principal in trover.—TAYLOR v. KYMER (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 320; 1 J. J. K. R. 114; 110 E. R. 120.

The broker did not offer the diamonds to either firm, but gave them to B., asking him to sell them. B. took the diamonds to F. & W., explaining that he came from the broker, & asked them to purchase them on joint account with himself. F. & W. agreed, & paid the price required by the broker, debiting B. in their books with one-half thereof, & afterwards disposed of the diamonds, crediting B. with half the profits realised. In an action for conversion by pltf. against B. & F. & W., the jury found that the broker obtained the diamonds from pltf. by larceny by a trick; that F. & W. had acted in good faith but that B. had not:—Held: for the particular purpose of purchasing the diamonds B., F. & W. were partners; & though F. & W.

159. Sale by auctioneer.—[If a person is stopped with a horse under suspicious circumstances, & the horse be placed at an inn by the police, the innkeeper has no lien on the horse for its keep, & if an auctioneer, by the direction of the innkeeper, sell the horse for its keep, he is liable to be sued in trover by the owner of the horse.—*BINNS v. 160. — — ——[The nephew of pltf. having a horse to sell, some negotiations took place between them; but as they could not agree as to price the horse was not sold; subsequently, however, pltf. wrote to his nephew, making an offer for the horse, stating in his letter that he should consider it a bargain if he did not hear to the contrary. His nephew did not reply, & having a sale shortly afterwards of some of his effects, the horse was sold by mistake, the auctioneer having had instructions from the nephew not to sell it. Two days after the sale the nephew wrote to pltf., the contents of which letter showed that he intended to accept his uncle's offer. In an action by pltf. against the auctioneer for the conversion of the horse:—Held: as there was no memorandum in writing binding the nephew at the time of the sale, & no evidence that he had at that time accepted the offer, the property in the horse had not then vested in pltf., & he could not rely on the subsequent letter of the nephew, as that would not relate back so as to complete pltf.'s title at the time in question.—*FELTHOUSE v. A separate commission issued against M. alone on Nov. 7; on Nov. 8 the goods were sold by deft., as sheriff; on Nov. 9 a joint commission issued against M. & H., under which pltf.s were appointed assignees; & pltf.s afterwards, & after the goods were delivered to the purchasers, demanded them of defts., who refused them:—Held: the sale, & not the demand & refusal, constituted the conversion.—*EDWARDS v. B. never paid pltf. the price of the horses & carriages, & absconded from deft.'s inn without paying his bill, & leaving the horses & carriages there. Subsequently, having been taken into custody on a charge of swindling, he re-assigned the horses & carriages to pltf., to whom, however, deft. refused to give them up until B.'s bill was paid. Deft. afterwards sold the horses by public auction, & still retained the carriages:—Held: the sale by deft. of the horses was a wrongful conversion, for which pltf. could maintain his action, & the measure of damages was the value of the horses.—MULLINER

163. Sale by mortgage—Lease.—Deft. having in his possession a lease belonging to S., which had been deposited with him as a security for moneys advanced by him to S., & upon which he claimed a lien for costs as against S. & also as against the assignee appointed under a commission of bkpt. issued against S. in 1830, concurred with the assignee in the sale of the lease, & received from him, in satisfaction of his demand, the amount of the purchase-money, & also received with the assent of the assignee certain sums due for rent of the premises, etc. The sale took place after deft., as solr. to the assignee, had notice that a petition to supersede the commission, on the ground of the insufficiency of petitioning creditor's debt, was pending. In Jan. 1832, the commission against S. was superseded, & in Mar. a second fiat issued against him:—Held: the assignees under the last-mentioned fiat were entitled to recover from deft. the several sums so received by him from or with the assent or under the authority of the assignee under the superseded commission.

If, instead of keeping the thing pledged, he sells it, or enables any other person to sell it, by concurring in the sale, he is guilty of a direct conversion, & makes himself liable for the value of the lease in an action for trover (TINDAL, C.J.).—(CLARK v. GILBERT (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 343; 2 Scott, 520; 1 Hodg. 347; 5 L. J. C. P. 61; 132 E. R. 135.

164. — Shares.—Defts., who were stockbrokers, bought certain shares on behalf of pltf. In pursuance of an arrangement between pltf. & defts. the shares were entered on the register in the name of defts., & held by them as security for the purchase-money. Defts. made repeated applications to pltf. for payment of the purchase-money, but never received more than a portion of it. The co. announcing a scheme of reconstruction, defts. wrote to pltf. for instructions & for payment of his debt. Receiving no reply they applied for shares in the new co. in their own names. They subsequently sold these shares in the belief that they were rightful owners. Pltf. now alleged that the sale was improper & claimed redemption of the shares, or in the alternative damages for improper conversion:—Held: defts., as mtgees. of the shares with no fixed time for payment, were entitled to sell them on giving reasonable notice to the mtgor.; their letters to pltf. demanding payment constituted such notice; & they were not precluded from exercising their power of sale by the fact that they sold in the belief that they were absolute owners; consequently the sale was good, & defts. were only liable to account for the proceeds as mtgees.—DEVERGES v. SANDEMAN, CLARK & Co., [1902] 1 Ch. 579;

165. ——Pltf. instructed defts., a firm of stockbrokers on the London Stock Exchange, to effect some "carrying over bargains" on certain shares. In the contracts sent to pltf. defts. inserted a figure, followed by the word "net" to indicate the number of pence per share charged for the transaction. This led pltf. to assume that the charge was a contango rate paid wholly to the jobber, & that defts. received nothing thereout by way of remuneration for arranging the carrying over which was contrary to the fact. It was, however, proved that this method of signifying a commission did indicate to members of the London Stock Exchange, & even to other persons, that the charge included a remuneration to the broker as well as the jobber's contango rate. Pltf. having failed to pay the accumulated differences due from him on these transactions, deposited by way of security with defts. a certificate for certain other shares & executed a transfer in blank. Ultimately defts., after giving due notice to pltf. closed their account with him & sold those other shares accounting afterwards to pltf. for the proceeds:—Held: defts., as mtgees., had an implied power of sale over the whole of the shares deposited with them; they had executed that power reasonably; & there had no wrongful conversion.—*STUBBS v. (2) A pipe of wine belonging to pltf. was deposited in deft.'s cellar, & was bottled at a time during which there were conflicting claims to it by pltf. & the assignees of the party to whom it was sent, & who resided in deft.'s house; by whom, or by whose orders the wine was bottled, did not appear, though there was some evidence that it was likely to be injured from not being bottled:—Held: it was a question for the jury, whether the act of bottling operated as a conversion; (3) it was a question for the jury to say, under all the circumstances, whether the drinking of a part of the wine, taken in connection with the bottling, amounted to a conversion; & they having found that it did not, the ct. refused to disturb the verdict.

The mere taking away & destroying a part of property which is in the hands of a bailee, who may deliver up the rest, is not a conversion of the whole, so as to enable the party entitled to maintain trover for the whole.—*PHILPOTT v. Before the fourteen days had expired, A. gives B. notice not to deliver the hemp to C. 184. Delivery by master of ship—To indorsee of bill of lading—After notice of stoppage in transitu.]—The owner chartered his vessel to N., who put her up as a general ship for Calcutta. Pltfs. bought spelter for C., & at C.'s request put it on board the vessel, receiving the mate's receipt, the course of dealing between pltfs. & C. being that the property in the goods was not parted with to C. unless C. paid for them. C. did not pay for the spelter or obtain the mate's receipt from pltfs., but by means of the shipbrokers, without the knowledge of pltfs., obtained the bill of lading & indorsed it away for value. Subsequently C. stopped payment, whereupon pltfs. gave notice to the owner of the ship that they held the mate's receipt & were unpaid vendors, & that they stopped the goods in transitu. The owner wrote to the master at Calcutta to warehouse the goods, as the property was disputed; but the master being indemnified, delivered the goods to the indorsee of the bill of lading:—Held: the goods belonged to pltfs., & had not passed to C., & the delivery of the goods to the indorsee of the bill of lading was a conversion.—*SCHUSTER v. 185. Delivery of stolen goods by police officer.—When a subordinate police officer having the possession of stolen goods, after a demand by the true owner for their delivery to him, delivers the same to a person other than the true owner, he is liable in trover although he acted upon the orders of a superior officer. A. bought a gig. It was stolen from him, & afterwards found by the police in the possession of B. B. was indicted for larceny of the gig & acquitted. B. on his acquittal wrote to the police officer in possession of the gig demanding delivery of it to him, & A. afterwards by letter & personally applied for its delivery over to him. The police officer acting on the instruction of his superior officer, after giving notice to A. of his intention to do so, delivered the gig to B. as the person from whom it had been taken by the police:—Held: the police officer so delivering it was liable in trover to A., who was found to be the true owner of the gig.—WINTER v. BANCKS (1901), 84 L. T. 504; 65 J. P. 468; 49 W. R. 574; 17 T. L. R. 446; 19 Cox, C. C. 687, D. C.

186. Re-delivery to unpaid vendor—By warehousemen—Stoppage in transitu.—S. bought a quantity of barley from B., which was sold "on rail" at a certain railway station, & the seller gave a written order to the railway co. directing them to transfer the barley "to await the order of S." On the arrival of the barley at the station the co. sent to S. an advice note, stating that the goods awaited his orders & were then held by them, not as common carriers, but as warehousemen.

S. did not reply to this advice note or inspect the barley, but afterwards he unsuccessfully tried to resell the barley, using a sample obtained from the seller. S. became bkpt. soon after without having paid for the barley, & B. as unpaid vendor claimed & obtained from the co. redelivery of the barley to him.

In an action by the trustee in the bkpcy. of S. against the railway co. for conversion of the barley:—Held: the transit & the right to stop in transitu ceased when by agreement between S. & the co., which must be taken to have existed after a reasonable time from the receipt of the advice note, the co. held the goods as warehousemen for S. & not as common carriers, & the transit being at an end, the delivery of the goods by the co. to the vendor was a conversion for which they were liable.—TAYLOR v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO., [1901] 1 K. B. 774; 70 L. J. K. B. 499; 84 L. T. 770; 49 W. R. 431; 17 T. L. R. 394; 45 Sol. Jo. 381; 6 Com. Cas. 121.

187. ———.—T. bought certain goods from R. on Mar. 10, 1913, for shipment to South Africa. On Mar. 13 the buyers sent shipping instructions to the sellers directing them to forward the goods by the quickest route to defts.' steamship Armada Castle at the Docks, Southampton. Accompanying the instructions was a note on defts.' printed form addressed to the L. & S. W. Ry. requesting them to receive the goods for shipment per Union Castle Line. The documents gave the marks to be put upon the bales & the destination, viz. Algoa Bay. The goods were packed by the sellers' instructions, at Manchester, & handed, in pursuance of the buyers' instructions, to the G. N. Ry.,

who passed them on to the L. & S. W. Ry., who delivered them to defts. alongside the Armada Castle. The buyers, on Mar. 17, sent shipping instructions giving the marks, destination Algoa Bay, & description of the goods. On the same day the buyers, in anticipation of insolvency, wrote to defts. to stop all their shipments per Armada Castle, promising further instruction later. Defts. received the instructions & letter by the same post, & held back one package which had not been already shipped.

The bale remained in the custody of defts., who charged the buyers with warehouse rent for it, until Apr. 26, 1913, when defts. delivered it to the sellers, who had not been paid & who claimed the right to stop in transitu. Pltf., who was the trustee of the buyers under a deed of assignment dated Apr. 24, 1913, sued defts. for conversion of the bale:—Held: though the original transit was to Algoa Bay, that transit had been ended by the buyers at Southampton as they were entitled to do, as they had not contracted with the sellers that the goods should go to Algoa Bay, & therefore the attempted stoppage in transitu by the sellers was too late, & defts. were liable for delivering the goods to the sellers.—REDDALL v. UNION CASTLE MAIL S.S. CO., LTD. (1914), 84 L. J. K. B. 360; 112 L. T. 910; 13 Asp. M. L. C. 51; 20 Com. Cas. 86.

188. Delivery under alleged illegal contract—Illegality due to outbreak of war.—Resp., a British subject residing in Manchester, was in the habit of consigning Manchester goods to customers in Beyrout. The course of business was for him to draw a bill at sight on the customers for the amount in sterling, representing the cost of the goods & commission, & to hand it, with the bills of lading & invoices, to the Manchester branch of applts., a bank incorporated in Turkey. The Manchester branch then made an advance to him on the bill, & sent the documents to their Beyrout branch, who collected the price from the customer in exchange for the goods. On the Manchester branch being advised by the Beyrout branch that the price had been paid, a cheque for the sterling value of the goods, less any advance made, was handed to resp. In accordance with this practice resp. consigned to Beyrout goods which arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, on Nov. 5, 1914, between this country & Turkey, on which date applts. held the bills & the documents representing the goods. The bills were in the following form: "Please pay to our order value cheque on London the sum of £ sterling. Shipping documents attached to be given up on payment." After the outbreak of war the Beyrout branch of applts. delivered the goods to the customers, taking payment in piastres of a sum fixed by the Beyrout branch as the price of sterling in London, & on the conclusion of the war, the piastres having fallen in value, applts. claimed that they were only liable to pay resp. an amount in sterling which at the then current rate of exchange represented the value of the piastres they had received for the goods.

Resps. sued applts. to recover the sterling amount of the bills, or, alternatively, damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: the bank at Beyrout & the Syrian merchant both being Turkish subjects, the outbreak of war did not prevent the delivery of the goods to the customers, & the claim for conversion failed.—*OTTOMAN BANK v. 191. Using building materials.—Contract ended by building owner.]—Pltf. agreed to build a house for deft., who prepared a specification which contained particulars of the different portions of the work. Under the head "Carpenter & Joiner" there was specified the scantling of the joists for the different floors, the rafters, ridge & wall pieces, but no mention was made of the flooring. The specification stated that "the whole of the materials mentioned or otherwise in the foregoing particulars, necessary for the completion of the work, must be provided by the contractor." At the foot of the specification pltf. signed a memorandum, whereby he agreed with deft. "to do all the works of every kind mentioned & contained in the foregoing particulars, according in every respect to the drawings furnished or to be furnished, for the sum of £1,100. The house to be completed & fit for deft.'s occupation by Aug. 1, 1858." Pltf. prepared the flooring boards, brought them to the premises, & planed & fitted them to the several rooms, but refused to lay them down without extra payment, because the flooring was not mentioned in the specification, whereupon deft. put an end to the contract, took possession of the works, & proceeding to complete the building used the flooring boards so prepared & fitted by deft.:—Held: pltf. could not maintain trover for the flooring boards left on the premises by him & subsequently used by deft.—WILLIAMS v. FITZMAURICE (1858), 3 H. & N. 844; 32 L. T. O. S. 149; 157 E. R. 709.

192. Using workman's tools.—Detained as security by employer.]—In an action by a working bricklayer against his employer for detention of his tools, etc., & also for extras on a contract:—Held: the contract being in writing was necessary for the latter part of pltf.'s claim, it was not so as to the former; there being no clause in the contract as to the tools, etc., except that pltf. was to provide them, & deft. having claimed to detain them as security for repayment of alleged overpayments, & having admitted that he had used some of them, he had no right to detain the goods unless there was an agreement to that effect, & even if there was, the user was a conversion.—POULTON v. WILSON (1858), 1 F. & F. 403.

193. User by purchaser from sheriff.—Damage to chattel.]—The mere sale by the sheriff, not in market overt, under a fi. fa. of a chattel let to the execution debtor, without notice of the owner's interest in it, is not a conversion or ground of action against the sheriff, but an absolute sale & delivery of the chattel under the sale, to a purchaser; & a user by the purchaser, causing damage to the chattel, constitutes a cause of action.—LANCASHIRE WAGGON CO. v. FITZHUGH (1861), 6 H. & N. 502; 30 L. J. Ex. 231; 3 L. T. 703; 158 E. R. 206.

G. Obstruction of Access to Goods.

194. Preventing access to chattel by rightful owner.]—If deft., by his acts, prevents pltf. from obtaining access to a chattel, to which he is entitled, such prevention by deft. is evidence of a conversion.—WANSBOROUGH v. MATON (1835), 4 L. J. K. B. 154.

196. —.]—Article purchased.]—To a declaration against defts. who were auctioneers, for non-delivery of a rick of hay sold by them to pltf. at an auction on July 24. Defts. pleaded (a) that they did not promise, & (b) that they did deliver. The hay had been sold by defts. for the landlord under a distress for rent, & a week was fixed by one of the conditions of sale as the time for taking away the hay. Several persons at the sale having objected to the period as too short, a written permission was obtained by defts. from the tenant, that the hay might stay on the premises until Sept. 28. This permission was indorsed by defts. on the conditions of sale. Pltf. having purchased the hay, & having obtained permission from defts. to remove it, subsequently & before Sept. 28, went to the land for the purpose of removing it, but was prevented doing so by the tenant:—Held: there was a sufficient delivery of the hay by defts. to pltf. to prevent their liability, as they had done all in their power to give pltf. the possession of it.

g. Use of animal.]—A., having been arrested at the suit of B., placed a mare in B.'s possession, on an agreement that if R. proved a demand against A., by his own oath or that of others, B. was to pay it & keep the mare till repaid. B. did pay £10, but it was not shown that he did so in consequence of its being sworn to; & the mare remaining with him, he used her once in the plough:—Held: such use of the mare was not a conversion.—FORRESTER v. D. afterwards verbally assented to these terms, with the exception of the ton of iron; & in the course of the conversation, advised C. to remove the fittings at once, & subsequently told him that he could not allow the engine to remain on his premises beyond quarter-day. Before quarter-day, C. sold the old engine to pltf.; but debt. refused to let pltf. have it, alleging that the bargain was, as the written proposal rather imported, that it was not to be removed until the new engine was completely fitted up, & that this had not been done. In an action against D. for conversion of the old engine, the judge told the jury it was for them to consider, under all the circumstances, whether or not the contract between C. & D. was for an immediate transfer of the old engine, & if so, to find for pltf., which they did.—Held: as the written proposal had not been accepted simpliciter, the real contract was by parol; the direction was right; & there was evidence to sustain the verdict.—STONES v. The agreement then provided that, in the event of the organ being completed & erected as aforesaid, & the sum of £768 or any part thereof not being paid at the time or times thereinbefore mentioned, then it was thereby declared & agreed that the whole sum or balance, with the interest then due thereon, should become due & payable to W., & might be sued for & recovered accordingly; & in the meantime, & until the balance & interest should be paid & discharged, W. should have a lien on the organ; & in default of any or either of such payments as aforesaid at the time or times thereinbefore mentioned, W. might either dispose of or remove the organ as he might think proper. The instalments being unpaid A. demanded the organ of the vicar of C. & the churchwardens. The vicar kept the church door locked, & refused to allow the organ to be removed, claiming a lien upon it. The churchwardens did nothing.—Held: the vicar was liable in trover, & not the churchwardens.—WALKER v. CLYDE (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 381; 142 E. R. 500.

He paid into debts.' bank to his own credit certain post office orders belonging to pltfs. which debts. subsequently cashed. The Post Office regulations with regard to post office orders provide that, when presented for payment by a banker, they shall be payable without the signature by the payee of the receipt contained in the order, provided the name of the banker presenting the order is written or stamped upon it:—Held: there had been a wrongful conversion of the post office orders above mentioned by debts.—FINE ART SOCIETY v. A cheque was drawn on deft. bank in London in favour of pltf.s., specially indorsed by pltf.s. to a firm in London & posted for collection to that firm, but it never reached them. After the posting a forged indorsement was put on the cheque, & it was presented at defts.' bank in Paris by a person, purporting to be the last indorsee, who had no account at defts.' bank. Defts. paid the cheque, & sent it to their bank in London, who credited their bank in Paris with the value. The London bank refused to deliver the cheque to pltf.s. The cheque, when it reached defts., was crossed generally. 208. ———. ———. ———. In good faith.—In accordance with law merchant.—Pltf.s., a partnership firm at Liverpool, sold certain goods to the N. P. co. & drew upon the co. a bill for a large amount payable in three months in payment for the goods. The N. P. co. accepted the bill payable at deft. bank at Liverpool, where they kept their account. Shortly before the bill became payable the N. P. co., who were then overdrawn at deft. bank, asked that bank to order payment of the bill & charge to the account of the N. P. co. Deft. bank were willing to act upon this advice because they had an arrangement for a running overdraft with the N. P. co., & the bill was within the limits of that overdraft. When the bill became due it was brought by W., a servant of pltf.s., to a partner of pltf. firm, who, at W.'s request, indorsed the bill in blank. W., instead of taking the bill to pltf.s.' bank for the purpose of collection, through the Clearing House, presented the bill for payment over the counter to deft. bank & received the money, which he then fraudulently converted & stole. Pltf.s. sued deft. bank to recover the amount of the bill on the grounds of negligence, money had & received, & conversion of the bill. Evidence was given at the trial that there is an almost universal custom at Liverpool that trade bills should be presented through the Clearing House for payment to the bank at which they were accepted payable, but evidence was also given that presentation of such bills over the counter, though most unusual, was not irregular:—Held: deft. bank were also not liable to pltf.s. for the conversion of the bill, because the bill was a negotiable instrument, & they paid it in good faith without notice of any defect in title & in accordance with the law merchant. A bank was not bound to make inquiries merely because a bill indorsed in blank or an open cheque was presented for payment over the counter. According to the law merchant such presentation, although unusual, was always recognised as due presentation; sufficient to require the bankers to pay, in the absence of very special circumstances of suspicion, which were not present here.—AUCHTERONI & CO. v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD., [1928] 2 K. B. 294; 97 L. J. K. B. 625; 139 L. T. 344; 44 T. L. R. 441; 72 Sol. Jo. 337; 33 Com. Cas. 345.

209. ———. ———. ———. Solicitors acting as bankers.—Cheques paid out of funds belonging to plaintiff.—To party indebted to plaintiff.—Pltf.s. were a limited co. formed to amalgamate certain firms & cos. controlled by F., two of the directors of pltf.s. being F. & deft. T. The latter was a member of the firm of T. & C., who were the solrs. of pltf.s. & also of F. Pltf.s. had moneys standing to their credit in the books of T. & C., & F. also had a running account with T. & C. During a period when F. was in debt to pltf.s. he drew for his own purposes on the moneys standing to the credit of pltf.s. in the books of T. & C. At the time of these transactions deft. T. was not aware of F.'s indebtedness to pltf.s., but the ct. found that deft. T. knew enough of F.'s methods to be put on inquiry as to what F. was doing. Subsequently pltf.s. brought the present action against T. in respect of these moneys on the ground of conversion & for money had & received & for breach of duty & negligence as one of their directors & as their solr. Deft. T. pleaded acquiescence by pltf.s.:—Held: deft. T. was liable in conversion.—FENTON TEXTILE ASSOCN., LTD. v. THOMAS (1929), 45 T. L. R. 264.

210. Taking cheque improperly filled up by clerk.—Pltf., a stockbroker, employed a confidential clerk. On settling days on the Stock Exchange, it was pltf.'s practice to sign a number of blank cheques & to hand them over to the clerk, giving him authority to fill in the names of persons with whom pltf. did business & whose accounts he wished to settle, & the amount of the sums due to him. The authority of the clerk was absolutely limited to this. The clerk had entered into betting transactions with defts. & had incurred certain debts. To pay these debts he wrongfully filled in seven of the blank cheques with the name of defts., who took them in good faith, & certain sums which he owed them from time to time.

Pltf. sued defts. for damages for the conversion of the cheques & their proceeds:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover. When the holder of a negotiable instrument was not a holder for value, the drawer of the instrument was not estopped from saying as against such holder that the body of the instrument had been wrongly filled up.—*PAINE v. In such a case, the evidence being that the porter, having received cattle without giving a ticket, put them into a pen, & said it was all right, & that the cattle had never been delivered to or for the owner, who had applied for them; there being no evidence as to what had become of the cattle :—Held : (1) the co. were not liable as carriers, there being no evidence that they received the cattle as carriers; (2) they were not liable for the conversion of the cattle, there being no evidence, except of loss.—SLIM v. Dft. had not in fact ordered any barley of pltfs. G. called on deft., who showed him the documents, & told him it was a mistake. G. said that it was so, & asked deft. to indorse the order to him, for the purpose, as he said, of saving the expense of obtaining a fresh delivery order. Dft. indorsed the order to G., who possessed himself of the barley & disposed of it, & then absconded. On the trial of an action of trover for the barley, the jury found that deft. had no intention of appropriating the barley to his own use, but indorsed the order for the purpose of correcting what he believed to be an error, & returning the barley to pltfs. :—Held : deft., having indorsed the order without any occasion to do so, & without authority, was liable.

was, that when the deed was demanded from deft. he said he would not deliver it up, but that it was then in the hands of his attorney, who had a lien upon it:—Held: insufficient.

To make a demand & refusal sufficient evidence of a conversion, the party when he refuses must have it in his power to deliver up or detain the article demanded (per cur.).—SMITH v. YOUNG (1808), 1 Camp. 439; 170 E. R. 1014, N. P.

Annotations:—Refd. Featherstonhaugh v. Johnston (1818), 8 Taunt. 237; Catterall v. Kenyon (1842), 6 Jur. 507.

262. Demand by vendors of goods—Repayment of purchase-money on refusal—Necessity for new demand.—Where plffs. sold goods to T., who paid for them, & was to take them away, but deft. becoming possessed of the place in which the goods were deposited, plffs.' attorney, accompanied by T., demanded them of deft., telling him that they belonged to plffs., & that they had sold them to T.; to which deft. answered that he would not deliver them to any person whatsoever, & afterwards plffs. repaid the money to T. & brought trover against deft.:—Held: this demand & refusal were sufficient evidence of a conversion to support the action, & a new demand by plffs., after they had repaid the money to T., was not necessary.—PATTISON v. ROBINSON (1816), 5 M. & S. 105; 105 E. R. 990.

263. Joint owner—Demand by one in own name.—Where two or more who are jointly interested in a chattel, deposit it with a stranger, a demand by one in his own name only, & not on behalf of all, will not entitle such one to maintain detinue for it.—ATWOOD v. ERNEST (1853), 13 C. B. 881; 22 L. J. C. P. 225; 21 L. T. O. S. 185; 1 W. R. 436; 138 E. R. 1449; sub nom. ATTWOOD v. ERNEST, 1 C. L. R. 738; 17 Jur. 603.

264. ———.—Four partners pledged goods with deft., with a power of sale, as security for repayment of advances made by deft. to them. Afterwards the partnership was dissolved & the property of three of the four partners vested in plff. under several deeds of assignment. Plff., without authority from the fourth partner, tendered to deft. the amount for which the goods were a security, & demanded the whole of the goods. Deft. refused to deliver the goods to plff.:—Held: the refusal by deft. was not such a conversion of the goods as would entitle plff. to maintain an action of trover against deft.—HARRIS v. GODSELL (1870), 1 L. R. 5 Q. B. 422; 39 L. J. Q. B. 185; 18 W. R. 954.

Annotations:—Mentd. Hawksley v. Outram, [1892] 3 Ch. 359; Jacobs v. Morris, [1901] 1 Ch. 261.

265. General demand.—In an action for damages for conversion it was proved that plff., an exor., had made a general demand of "the goods of the deceased," & that deft. had replied in effect that the goods were claimed by another party:—Held: the demand not being specific, the refusal of deft. did not render him liable in the action.—NIXON v. SEDGER (1890), 7 T. L. R. 112, C. A.

266. ———. In excess of plaintiff's right.—In an action of trover for timber, the only evidence of a conversion was, that plff.'s agent gave to deft. a written demand of "all those staves, deals, & quarterings now in your yard," & inquired whether deft. intended to give them up; to which his answer was, "I do not." Plff. was entitled only to demand the quarterings:—Held: the general demand & refusal was sufficient evidence of a conversion of the quarterings.—GREENSLADE v. EVANS (1848), 12 L. T. O. S. 124.

Issue of writ as sufficient demand.—See Sub-sect. 1, B., ante.

SUB-SECT. 3.—SUFFICIENCY OF REFUSAL.

A. Action for Conversion.

(a) In General.

267. Mere refusal.—ISAACK v. CLARK (1615), 2 Bulst. 306; Moore, K. B. 841; 80 E. R. 1143; sub nom. ISACK v. CLARKE, 1 Roll. Rep. 126.

L. 577.

268. ———.—In 1820 the right to recover certain court rolls & other documents accrued; in that year a letter demanding them was written, & in 1822 another letter on the subject was written. No distinct refusal was shown. A bill to compel their delivery was filed in 1844:—Held: it was too late, Stat. Limitations being a bar, as the letters, followed by non-compliance, were sufficient evidence of conversion; but leave was given to bring an action.—WELLS (DEAN & CHAPMAN) v. DODDINGTON (1845), 2 Coll. 73; 14 L. J. Ch. 304; 5 L. T. O. S. 170; 9 Jur. 768; 63 E. R. 642.

270. Refusal must be absolute.—PHILPOTT v. KELLEY, No. 168, ante.

271. ———.—Bailee of a gun overcharged & burst it. The owner required him forthwith to deliver it back in the same good plight in which he received it. Bailee refused to do the repair, & the gun not having been returned, the owner brought trover:—Held: the refusal to comply with a demand of redelivery, qualified as above, was not of itself evidence of a conversion.—RUSHWORTH v. TAYLOR (1812), 3 Q. B. 699; 3 Gal. & Dav. 3; 12 L. J. Q. B. 80; 6 Jur. 915; 114 E. R. 674.

273. Must relate to act of conversion.—WEYMOUTH v. BOYER, No. 343, post.

274. Demand by party unknown—Or not properly authorised.—Where in an action of trover the demand of the goods is not made by the party himself, a refusal, on the ground that the party applying is unknown, or not properly authorised, is not sufficient to support the action.—SOLOMONS v. DAWES (1794), 1 Esp. 81; 170 E. R. 287, N. P. Annotations:—Refd. Garland v. Carlisle (1837), 11 Phil. N. S. 421, p. 520; Charrington v. Johnson (1845), 13 M. & W. 856.

275. Persons refusing must have power to deliver or detain.—SMITH v. YOUNG, No. 261, ante.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.—

A. (a).

267 i. Mere refusal.—PARKER v. BLIGH (1910), 9 E. L. R. 94.—CAN.

270 i. Refusal must be absolute.—Where a demand is necessary in trover to prove a conversion, if it be oral, the answer must be positive; & where an oral demand was made on deft. while driving at a distance from his house, where the property demanded was, & no answer was returned:—Held: no evidence of a conversion.—McLEAN v. GRAHAM (1838), 5 O. S. 741.—CAN.

270 ii. ———.—ANNAND v. MERCHANTS' BANK (1878), 12 N. S. R. (3 R. & C.) 229.—CAN.

275 i. Persons refusing must have power to deliver or detain.—WALKER v. CUNNINGHAM (1877), 12 N. S. R. (3 R. & C.) 1.—CAN.

275 ii. ———.—Where a deft. had already sold the goods in a manner which the ct. considered to have been authorised by plff.; though the goods were demanded of him & he refused them, nevertheless:—Held: to make the demand & refusal sufficient evidence of a conversion he must have had it in his power to deliver up or detain the articles demanded.—RICHARDSON v. HARRISON (1850), 3 Nfld. L. R. 153.—NFLD.

Sect. 2.—Demand and refusal: Sub-sect. 3, A. (a) & (b).]

276. —.]—Trover for a bill of exchange. Pleas, not guilty; & not possessed. At the trial it was proved that pltf. had demanded the bill from deft., who said it was in the hands of his attorney; but if pltf. would call again on a day named he would give him the bill. Another demand was made on the day appointed, but the bill was not forthcoming. Verdict passed for deft. On motion to set aside the verdict & enter it for pltf. or for a new trial:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the verdict upon the plea of not possessed, but the ct. refused to disturb the verdict on the issue of not guilty, holding that the conduct of deft. did not amount to a conversion, & that the jury were warranted, upon the facts, in finding for deft.—TOWNE v. LEWIS (1849), 7 C. B. 608; 13 L. T. O. S. 71; 137 E. R. 241.

Annotations:—Consd. Pillott v. Wilkinson (1864), 3 H. & C. 345. Reid. How v. Kirchner (1857), 11 Moo. P. C. C. 21.

277. Person having custody ignorant of real owner — Refusal until ownership proved.]—Refusal to deliver goods, by person ignorant of real owner, no evidence of conversion.—GREEN v. DUNN (1811), 3 Camp. 215, n.; 170 E. R. 1359, N. P.

Annotation:—Reid. Garland v. Carlisle (1837), 11 Bli. N. S. 421, p. 520.

278. Refusal by general agent—Necessity for proof of special authority.]—In an action of trover against deft., for not delivering some wine deposited with her by way of security for an advance of money:—Held: it was not sufficient evidence of a conversion to show that her son, who acted as her general agent, refused to give it up; & it was necessary to prove, that such agent acted under a special direction, in order to make deft. liable.—POTHONIER v. DAWSON (1816), Holt, N. P. 383; 171 E. R. 279, N. P.

Annotations:—Reid. Martin v. Reid (1862), 11 C. B. N. S. 730; Donald v. Suckling (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 585; Burdick v. Sewell (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 363.

279. Article received for repair—Refusal to deliver until cost paid.]—The servant of deft., a coach spring maker, received a spring of pltf.'s to repair, & promised to bring it back by a certain hour. Dft., after that, refused to return without being first paid for the repair:—Held: not a sufficient conversion to support trover.—FAIRMAN v. GRIMBLE (1826), 2 C. & P. 266; 172 E. R. 120, N. P.

280. General refusal—Just reason for refusal—No reason given.]—If, upon a demand of goods, & a refusal to deliver them, there is, in fact, a just reason for the refusal, unless he who demands will make a certain compensation; but the person, who holds the goods, does not allege the just reason as an excuse, & gives a general unqualified refusal; his doing so is evidence of a conversion sufficient to maintain trover.—THOMPSON v. TRAIL (1826), 6 B. & C. 36; 2 C. & P. 334; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 31; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 34; 108 E. R. 366.

281. Title to some goods only.]—Qu. whether in trover, if seven things are demanded when there is a right to five only of them, a general refusal is evidence of a conversion of such five.—ABINGTON v. LIPSCOMB (1841), 1 Q. B. 776; 1 Gal. & Dav. 230; 10 L. J. Q. B. 330; 6 Jur. 257; 113 E. R. 1328.

Annotation:—Reid. Harrison v. Powell (1894), 10 T. L. R. 271.

282. Refusal to deliver to particular person—Willingness to deliver to another.]—A., who was paying his addresses to a lady, lost her letters & two memorandum books containing remarks of his own; B. found them, & kept them, on the ground that the books contained matter injurious to him, & also showed them to others; A. sent a person to demand them of B., who, at first, refused to give them up at all, but before the person left, said he would not give them to him, but would to C. or D. C. went, & B. offered to give him the letters & one book, which C., after consulting with A., accepted, saying that he made a sacrifice to obtain the letters:—Held: there was a conversion of the whole; but the verdict was only for nominal damages.

The refusal to deliver to one person, though accompanied by a declaration of willingness to deliver to another, is a conversion (PATTESON, J.).—CLENDON v. DINNEFORD (1831), 5 C. & P. 13; 172 E. R. 855, N. P.

Annotation:—Distd. Philpott v. Kelley (1835), 3 Ad. & El 106.

283. Refusal to give complete delivery—Retention of some articles demanded.]—CLENDON v. DINNEFORD, No. 282, ante.

284. Refusal followed by offer to restore—Before issue of writ.]—Defts. had in their possession a boiler belonging to pltf's. Pltf's demanded it, & defts. at first refused to restore it; but afterwards, & before the issuing of the writ, tendered it:—Held: no conversion.—HAYWARD v. SEAWARD (1832), 1 Moo. & S. 459.

285. Ambiguous statement followed by non-delivery.]—A. lent goods to B., who died, & on his death the goods came into the possession of C., who, when the goods were demanded of him, said that he should do nothing but what the law required. C. did not afterwards deliver up the goods:—Held: in an action of trover, to be a sufficient conversion by C.—DAVIES v. NICHOLAS (1836), 7 C. & P. 339; 173 E. R. 151.

286. Reference to solicitor.]—The widow & administratrix of an insolvent, being applied to by his assignees for some papers that had been in his possession at the time of his decease, answered that they were in the hands of her attorney:—Held: not sufficient evidence of a conversion to sustain an action of trover.—CANOT v. HUGHES (1836), 2 Bing. N. C. 448; 1 Hodg. 410; 2 Scott, 663; 5 L. J. C. P. 177; 132 E. R. 176.

287. Refusal on ground of property.]—TRIPP v. ARMITAGE, No. 335, post.

288. Refusal by deceased person—Action against executor.]—In trover against an exor., it appeared that the watch which was the subject-matter of the action had been given by testatrix to one S. in Sept. 1837; that S. redelivered it to testatrix in Mar. 1838, for the purpose of its being pawned by her; that, on its being demanded by pltf. in Dec. 1838, testatrix said that she would consult her solr.; & that testatrix died in Mar. 1839:—

286 i. Reference to solicitor.]—Where the solr. of pltf. went to the Bank of Upper Canada & demanded from the president certain boats, & the president told him he had no answer to give, & referred him to the solr. of the bank, who told him that he was not authorised to give any answer:—

Held: sufficient evidence of a demand & refusal to support trover.—McDONELL (BETHUNE'S ASSIGNEE) v. BANK OF UPPER CANADA (1850), 7 U. C. R. 252.—CAN.

i. Refusal by servant.]—Though a refusal by a servant to give up property in his possession, until he can obtain directions from his master, may not amount to a conversion; he has no right to insist on the owner of the property obtaining the master's consent to the delivery.—RUEL v. McLEROY (1855), 9 N. B. R. (3 All.) 212.—CAN.

g. Refusal after action.]—BLACKLEY v. DOOLEY (1889), 18 O. R. 381.—CAN.

Held: this was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding a conversion within six months before the death.—RICHMOND v. NICHOLSON (1839), 8 Scott, 134; 9 L. J. C. P. 1.

289. Articles "mixed up with other concerns."—INNIS v. FITCH (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 99.

290. Reference by defendant to third person—Defendant having control of goods.—MARSHALL v. NEWSOME (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 203; 7 Jur. 991.

291. Refusal to deliver document—Without order of court.—In pursuance of a contract for the sale of an estate an abstract of title was delivered, & afterwards returned to deft., who was solr. for the vendor, with remarks & queries. The vendor failing to make out a good title within the time agreed upon, a suit was instituted by the purchaser to compel a specific performance. During the pendency of this suit, the purchaser demanded the abstract from deft., who continued solr. for the vendor in the suit. Deft. answered that he could not part with it without an order from the ct. of, or a master in, Chancery:—Held: in an action of trover by the purchaser, such refusal was not evidence of a conversion.—MACKERETH v. DUNN (1843), 7 Jur. 278.

292. Expression of intention to consult solicitor—Followed by non-delivery.—(1) A written notice of demand, to deliver up certain deeds, was served on three defts. at different times & places:—Held: it was for the jury to say, from the whole of the evidence, whether defts. had not previously agreed to act in such a manner, with reference to the deeds in question, as to render their refusal, although separately given, evidence of a joint conversion.

(2) On one of defts. being served with notice of demand, he merely said, "that he would consult his attorney":—Held: this expression, coupled with his subsequent conduct in not giving up the deeds, amounted to evidence of a conversion.—ATKIN v. SLATER (1844), 1 Car. & Kir. 356.

293. ————BURROUGHS v. BAYNE, No. 106, ante.

294. Joint refusal.—ATKIN v. SLATER, No. 292, ante.

295. Refusal entailing slight delay.—The mere fact of a demand & refusal is not conclusive of a conversion, but may be rebutted by surrounding circumstances. Where, therefore, furs were deposited to secure a debt, for which an action was commenced, & stayed upon a judge's order to pay debt & costs, & were demanded upon tender of the debt & costs, but refused by deft., on the ground that his clerk had managed the case, & that he must first see him:—Held: the furs having been tendered in a very short time afterwards, there was no evidence of conversion.—EVANS v. BELL (1847), 10 L. T. O. S. 109.

296. Evasion of delivery.—MYERS v. MARKS, No. 181, ante.

297. Hesitation as to delivery.—SCHREIBER v. ARTIGUES (1853), 21 L. T. O. S. 142.

298. Refusal because article destroyed—Defendant not called as witness to destruction.—In an action for the conversion of a bill of exchange, it being proved that deft. had said, in answer to a demand for it, that he could not give it up because it had been burnt, & deft. not being called as a witness:—Held: the case was rightly left to the jury, & their verdict for pltf. was justified by the evidence.—M'KEWEN v. COTCHING (1857), 27 L. J. Ex. 41; 6 W. R. 16.

Annotation:—Menid. West v. West (1911), 17 T. L. R. 476.

299. Claim of lien—Excessive claim.—Where a party claims to detain goods upon two causes of lien, in such a way as to dispense with tender of either, he is guilty of a conversion unless he can sustain both.—KERFORD v. MONDEL (1850), 28 L. J. Ex. 303; 33 L. T. O. S. 289.

—Refd. Allen v. Smith (1863), 11 W. R. 440. Watson v. Pearson (1863), 11 W. R. 702; The Norway (1864), Brown & Lush, 377.

300. Action on promissory note—Payment of amount into court—Refusal to deliver cancelled note—Until money drawn out.—A promissory note having been sued upon in a county ct., & the money paid into ct., & a demand was made for the cancelled note after the holder had notice of the payment, but before he had had time to take the money out of ct.:—Held: his refusal to give up the note did not constitute a detention.—NORTON v. BLACKIE (1864), 13 W. R. 80.

301. Refusal to sign bill of lading—By master of ship.—By a charterparty defts. agreed to carry for pltf. a cargo of coke from C. to B., the master to sign the bill of lading as presented within twenty-four hours after the cargo should be on board, or pay 4d. per ton per day for each day's delay as damages. The cargo having been loaded, a bill of lading was presented to the master, which he refused to sign without inserting a clause that the vessel should not be liable for duties on cargo caused by non-arrival before a specified date. Pltf. having declined to accept such a bill of lading, the master sailed with the cargo for B. without signing any bill of lading. Pltf. directed their consignee to deduct the penalty under the foregoing clause. The master was willing to deliver the cargo on payment of the freight in full, but the consignee having insisted upon deducting the penalty, the master declined to deliver the cargo, & landed it & stored it at B.:—Held: there had been no conversion of the cargo.—JONES v. HUGH (1879), 5 Ex. D. 115; 49 L. J. Q. B. 211; 42 L. T. 108; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 248, C. A.

(b) Delivery made Dependent on Unwarranted Condition.

302. Payment of expenses—Keep of lost dog.—Trover lies for a dog that was lost, & which deft. refuses to deliver, unless paid for his keeping.—BINSTEAD v. BUCK (1776), 2 Wm. Bl. 1117; 96 E. R. 660.

Annotations:—Consd. Nicholson v. Chapman (1793), 2 Hy. Bl. 254; Jebara v. Ottoman Bank, [1927] 2 K. B. 254.

303. — Of auctioneer—Goods sent by wrong-doer.—The hirer of a piano, who lends it to an auctioneer to be sold, is guilty of a conversion; & so is the auctioneer who refuses to deliver it up unless the expense incurred be first paid.—LOESCHMAN v. MACHIN (1818), 2 Stark. 311; 171 E. R. 656, N. P.

304. Demand of inventory & receipt.—If A. has in his possession a box containing papers belonging to a person deceased, & send the box with its contents to his solrs. with directions to deliver the box & papers to the exor. on his giving an inventory of them, & a receipt:—Held: trover lies against the solrs. if they refuse to deliver the box & papers to the exor., he refusing to give an inventory & receipt, although the solrs. offered to give them up if the exor. would give an inventory & receipt.

Defts. had no right to insist upon an inventory before they delivered up the box. Pltf., as exor., was entitled to the possession of the papers of deceased, & that being so he is entitled to recover in this action (ABBOTT, C.J.).—COBBETT v. CLUTTON (1826), 2 C. & P. 471; 172 E. R. 213, N. P.

305. Payment of debt due.—If a person who has possession of another's goods is desired by the owner to send them to a particular place, & he not only refused to send them to that place, but says generally that he will not deliver them up unless payment of a debt due from the owner to him is guaranteed; such general refusal is evidence of a conversion, although he might not be bound to send the goods to any particular place.—SHARP v. PRATT (1827), 3 C. & P. 34; 172 E. R. 311, N. P.

306. Payment of salvage.—(1) A vessel having run ashore on the coast of Essex was assisted by the owner of a smack, who put down an anchor & an hawser attached to the vessel for the purpose of securing her. The smack then left her for the purpose of carrying away some of her stores, with the intention however of returning. The owner of another smack came to her afterwards, & finding no one in or near the vessel & her deck under water, took away the anchor & hawser, & delivered them up to the deputy vice-admiral of Essex:—Held: the anchor & hawser were not parted with, or left & abandoned, within the meaning of 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 1, & the deputy vice-admiral was not justified in detaining them until salvage was paid, or security given for its payment.

(2) The deputy vice-admiral, who received the anchor & hawser, alleged to have been left at sea, from the finder, refused, on application by the real owner, to deliver them up until the salvage was paid, or security given for the payment of it:—Held: this was a conversion; but if he had merely refused to deliver them up until it was ascertained whether salvage was due or not it would not have amounted to a conversion.—CLARK v. CHAMBERLAIN (1836), 2 M. & W. 78; 2 Gale, 217; 6 L. J. Ex. 2; 150 E. R. 676.

Annotations:—As to (2) Distd. Kerford v. Mondel (1859), 28 L. J. Ex. 303. Apd. Burroughes v. Bayne (1860), 5 H. & N. 296.

307. Carriage of goods to particular station.—Pltfs. bought timber at Hull, which was by their direction delivered to the York & North Midland Ry. co. at Hull, to be forwarded to pltfs. at Nottingham. The timber was carried over the Ambergate Ry. co. to the Nottingham station, which belonged to the Midland Ry. co., & came into the possession of the Midland co. Pltfs. made a written demand of the timber on the Midland co., with an offer to pay any expenses to which it was liable, but this was refused, & they were told that they could only have it by taking it back to the first station on the Ambergate line, five miles from Nottingham:—Held: evidence of a conversion by the Midland Ry. co.—ROOKE v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1852), 2 Saund. & M. 81; 20 L. T. O. S. 178; 16 J. P. 821; 16 Jur. 1069.

308. Delivery of bills of lading.—Shipping brokers having represented that a ship, described as on their "line," would sail on or about a certain day. Qu.: whether there is evidence in which a jury can find them liable as on a warranty that she should so sail. Seemle: if they, without authority in fact, reship the goods in another ship, insuring them in their own names, & refusing delivery except on handing over the bills of lading sent by the first ship, there being no authority in law, so to act, there is evidence of a conversion on which they may be liable.—SIMPSON v. YOUNG (1859), 1 F. & F. 708, N. P.

309. Demand of receipt—Knowledge of plaintiff's ownership.—A person having in his possession the goods of another, whom he knows to be the owner, has no right to retain them until he has a written receipt for them.—BARNETT v. CRYSTAL PALACE CO. (1861), 2 F. & F. 443, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, 4 L. T. 403.

310. Payment of freight & charges.—Pltf. contracted to purchase a certain quantity of goods from P. & co. P. & co. purchased the goods from C., whom they paid, & shipped them from Cyprus to London for & on account of defts., & delivered the invoice to pltf. They drew a bill on pltf.'s firm in London to the order of C. C. discounted it with defts. & forwarded it to defts.' London agents, together with bills of lading drawn to the order or assigns of P. & co., with instructions that pltf.'s London firm would be ready to accept & pay it at maturity against the delivery of the bills of lading. The bill being presented to pltf. he refused to accept it without receiving the bills of lading. Thereupon defts. took possession of the cargo, & notwithstanding that pltf. offered to pay the bill of exchange, refused to deliver to him the bill of lading without payment of the bill, together with the freight & charges, & eventually sold the cargo for less than its value. On a special case the arbitrator found, as a matter of fact, that the parties had intended that the property should pass to pltf. on shipment of the goods:—Held: such finding was justified by the facts; the property had passed to pltf., on the tender of payment of the bill of exchange, & as defts. had no title to the goods, pltf. could maintain an action against them for the conversion thereof.—MIRABITA v. IMPERIAL OTTOMAN BANK (1878), 3 Ex. D. 164; 47 L. J. Q. B. 418; 38 L. T. 597; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 591, C. A.

(c) Refusal during Reasonable Time for Inquiry.

311. Refusal not tortious.—CLARK v. CHAMBERLAIN, No. 306, ante.

312. ——On July 24 goods were pledged with deft., a pawnbroker, in the name of Mary Warne, & the duplicate was made out accordingly; she was, in fact, the wife of pltf. Vaughan, but it did not appear that this fact was then known to deft. A few days afterwards the same person applied to deft. for a copy of the duplicate, & a form of declaration of the loss of it, pursuant to 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 99, 16, & Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (c. 62), s. 12. On Aug. 6, pltf. produced the duplicate to deft., & demanded the goods, tendering the money advanced on them & the interest, but deft. refused to deliver them, on the ground of the declaration having been obtained. Pltf. applied to a magistrate to compel him, & deft. then, on Aug. 9, learnt that the party who pledged the goods was pltf.'s wife:—Held: upon these facts the judge at the trial was wrong in directing the jury that the detention of the goods was in point of law a conversion, & he ought to have left it to them to say whether deft. had a bonâ fide doubt as to the title to the goods, & if so, whether a reasonable time for that doubt to be cleared up, by the party's going before a magistrate & verifying the declaration, pursuant to the 39 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 16, & elapsed on Aug. 6; &

if it had, the refusal then to deliver them to pltf. amounted to a conversion.—VAUGHAN v. WATT (1840), 6 M. & W. 492; 9 L. J. Ex. 272; 151 E. R. 506.

314. —.]—(1) Pltf.'s watch, which had been bought some years previously at deft.'s shop, was stolen from pltf., who gave information of the theft to deft. The watch was pledged with a pawnbroker, & eventually, together with a large number of other unredeemed pledges, was sold by auction in a room on the first floor of a building in the City of London, which room was used solely for the sale by auction of all classes of goods. Shortly afterwards the watch was purchased in a jeweller's shop in the country by B., who sent it to deft. for an opinion as to whether it was a genuine antique watch. Deft. wrote both to pltf. & to B., telling them that it was the watch which had been stolen, & inquiring as to their wishes in the matter. No answer was sent by pltf. to deft.'s letter, but a few days afterwards a clerk of pltf.'s solrs. called at deft.'s shop &, on being shown the watch, demanded that it should be then & there handed over to him, & on this request being refused at once served deft. with a writ in detinue which he had taken out on behalf of pltf. about two hours previously:—Held: upon the facts given in evidence there had been no wrongful refusal on the part of deft. to return the watch to pltf. before the date of the issue of the writ, & pltf. had no cause of action against deft. either in detinue or in trover.

The authorities show clearly, as one would expect, that a man does not act unlawfully in refusing to deliver up property immediately upon demand made. He is entitled to take adequate time to inquire into the rights of claimant (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).

(2) The next event in the history of the case is the issue of the writ, & pltf. must establish that at the moment of its issue he was in a position to bring an action of detinue: in other words, that there had been a wrongful denial by deft. of pltf.'s title to the watch (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—(LAYTON v. LE ROY, [1911] 2 K. B. 1031; 81 L. J. K. B. 49; 105 L. T. 430; 27 T. L. R. 479; 75 J. P. 521, C. A.).

(d) Claim by Third Party.

315. Whether refusal sufficient.—A. brought an action of trespass against B. for taking away a filly; B. justified the taking as the servant of C. The jury found a verdict for A. with damages, subject to a reference to D., one of the jurors, to ascertain to whom she belonged, which was to depend on whether a scar should appear on a certain part of her body, & in case it should, the verdict for A. was to stand, if not, it was to be entered for B. The filly was delivered to D. by the consent of all parties, he made his award & found her to belong to A., & accordingly ordered the verdict found for him to stand. C., ten days after the award, demanded the filly of D., who refused to deliver her, & a fortnight after, he brought an action of trover for her recovery:—Held: the detention of the filly by D. did not, under the circumstances, amount to a conversion, as C. was no party to the original action, & as it did not appear that he was authorised by B. to make the demand, to whom alone D. was bound to deliver her, he only being liable for the damages awarded to A.—GUNTON v. NURSE (1821), 2 Brod. & Bing. 447; 5 Moore, C. P. 259; 129 E. R. 1039.

316. —.]—The captain of a ship, who had taken goods on freight, & claimed to have a lien upon them, delivered them to a bailee. The real owner demanded them of the latter, & he refused to deliver them without the directions of the bailor:—Held: the bailor not having any lien upon the goods, the refusal by the bailee was sufficient evidence of a conversion.—*WILSON v. 317. —.]—In an action of trover for a chaise, it appeared that B. had hired the chaise in question from pltf., & had placed it at livery with deft., & that whilst it was in deft.'s possession, in the City of London, it was attached by process out of the Sheriff's Ct. Pltf. demanded the chaise, but deft., alleging that it had been attached, refused to deliver it:—Held: there was no evidence of a conversion by deft., the chaise being at the time of the demand in the custody of the law, & not of deft.—VERRALL v. ROBINSON (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 495; 4 Dowl. 242; 1 Gale, 244; 5 Tyr. 1069; 150 E. R. 213.

WALKER & HAWES* (1839), 3 J. P. 504.

322. —.]—A wharfinger received notice that certain goods deposited at his wharf were marked with a fraudulent imitation of a trade mark, & that the owner of the trade mark was about to apply to the Ct. of Ch. for an injunction to prevent the sale of the goods; after the injunction had been granted, but before the wharfinger had notice that it had been granted, he refused to deliver the goods to the owner:—Held: he was justified in equity in such refusal, & the owner of the goods would be restrained from suing him at law for a wrongful conversion of the goods.—HUNT v. MANIERE (1865), 5 New Rep. 295; 34 L. J. Ch. 142; 11 L. T. 723; 11 Jur. N. S. 73; 13 W. R. 363, L. JJ.

328. —].—Pltf., a British subject, instructed his London bankers to transfer certain shares to defts. "to the order of" a German bank, which had arranged to transfer them to New York. The shares were accordingly handed over to defts. "to the order of" the German bank, but the latter failed to give directions for their transfer to New York, & when war broke out between England & Germany the shares were still in deft.'s hands. Pltf. claimed them back from defts. & brought an action for their delivery to him. The German bank had no lien upon the shares:—Held: as pltf. had a right, as against the German bank, to the delivery of the shares, defts. were bound to hand them over to pltf.

I cannot see how it is an answer for defts. to say "Yes, the shares are yours, but we will not give them up except by the authority of a third person, although you have a right as against that third person to have them handed over" (SCRUTTON, J.).—*WETHERMAN v. The agreement then contained a clause empowering the trustees, in case (inter alia) B. should become bkpt., to take possession of the work already done by him, & to put an end to the agreement, which should be altogether null & void; & that the trustees, in such case, should pay B. or his assignees only so much money as the architect of the co. should adjudge to be the value of the work actually done & fixed by B., as compared with the whole work to be done. The course of business during the progress of the work was for the clerk of the works to inspect every article which came in under the contract, & none were received except on his approval. After the works had proceeded some time, B. became bkpt. Before his bkpy., certain wooden sash frames had been delivered by him on the premises of the co., approved by the clerk of the works, & returned to B. for the purpose of having iron pulleys, belonging to the trustees, affixed to them; & at the time of the bkpcy., these frames, with the pulleys attached to them, were at B.'s shop. He afterwards, but before the issuing of the fiat, redelivered them to the trustees; & the sash frames being afterwards demanded of them by B.'s assignees, they gave an unqualified refusal to deliver them up:—Held: (1) the property in the wooden sash frames had not passed to the trustees at the time of the bankruptcy; (2) they were not entitled to retain them under the agreement, as being work already done, they not having been fixed to the hotel; but even if they were within that clause of the agreement, it could not bind the assignees, inasmuch as their right accrued on the bkpcy., whereas the option of the trustees was not to be exercised until after the bkpcy.; (3) the refusal of the trustees not having been limited to the pulleys, the demand & refusal were sufficient evidence of a conversion by them of the wooden sash frames, so as to entitle B.'s assignees to recover them in trover.—*TRIPP v. These were in the house of the prosecutor, & detained by him as being the proceeds of the money stolen from him. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. for the return of some of the goods, & for damages for the conversion of others of them:—Held: the county ct. judge was right in giving judgment for deft.—CATTLEY v. 392. Goods in possession of police—Right to sue police—Necessity for magistrate’s order.—Pltf. was committed for trial, tried, & acquitted on a charge of stealing a diamond pin & ring, which were found in his possession. Deft., a superintendent of police, into whose possession the pin & ring had lawfully come in the course of the criminal proceedings, did not deliver them to pltf. on his acquittal; but within a reasonable time afterwards applied to a magistrate under Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1830 (c. 71), for an order “for the delivery of the goods to the party who should appear to the magistrate to be the rightful owner thereof, or such other order as to the magistrate should seem meet.” The magistrate, on the application being made heard evidence which was tendered both for pltf. & deft., & adjourned the further hearing to a distant day. Before the expiration of that day pltf. brought his action against deft. for the detention of the goods. Deft. set out the above facts in his statement of defence, & that no order had yet been made by the magistrate:—Held: no order having been made by the magistrate under sect. 29, pltf.’s action was not maintainable.—BULLOCK v. Possession of the goods was given to A., together with an inventory, but no bill of sale was executed by pltf. The object of the transaction was to prevent pltf.'s creditors getting hold of the goods, & so being paid in full. Deft. was a creditor for £100, & was cognisant of what was concocted between pltf. & A. After A. had removed the goods from pltf.'s premises, two meetings of pltf.'s creditors were held, but no compromise was effected with the creditors. Some months afterwards A. executed a bill of sale of the goods to deft., for the alleged purpose of securing the debt due from pltf. to deft., but pltf. was no party to the bill of sale, nor did he sanction or know of it. Pltf. having demanded the goods from A. & deft., brought an action against deft. for the detention:—Held: the fraudulent purpose not having been carried out, pltf. was not relying on the illegal

411. ——After L., a trader, had committed a secret act of bkpcy., M. & co., his creditors, knowing him to be embarrassed, pressed him for payment. L. said he had no money, but that if they could get a customer for his goods, they should be paid. M. & co. accordingly procured deft. A., a creditor of their own, to buy goods of L. No money passed from A. to L. or to M. & co., but A. gave M. & co. credit on account. This transaction was communicated to L., & a receipt was given him by M. & co. signed by them, specifying it to be “by payment of deft. A. agreeably to his order, balancing their account with him.” A fiat having issued against L. his assignees sued A. in assumpsit for the price of the goods sold to him:—Held: if the appropriation of the price to M. & co. was parcel of the contract between A. & L. & by its terms irrevocable, the action should have been trover.—*BRADBURY v. In Oct. A. committed an act of bkpcy.: & in Nov., at B.'s desire, he sent goods to the warehouse of B. & C. as a further security for the debt. In Dec. B. & C. dissolved partnership, & the former afterwards received from A. several sums of money on account of the warrant of attorney, & also sold the goods, towards satisfaction of the debt. A commission of bkpt. issued against A. in Jan. 1823, & in Nov. of that year B. died:—Held: A.'s assignees might recover from C. the money paid by A. on the warrant of attorney by an action for money had & received, & the value of the goods by an action of trover.—*BIGGS v. 420. ——— Lessors of bankrupt lessee—Machinery subject of valuation covenant.]—By indenture of demise, debts. leased to E. & W. for twenty-four years, a fulling mill & machinery. The lease, after reciting that the machinery had been valued at a certain sum, contained covenants, that at the end or sooner determination of the term the machinery should be again valued by two indifferent persons, one to be chosen by the lessees & the other by the lessors, & that according as the second valuation exceeded or fell short of the first, the lessors were to pay or receive the difference. A fiat in bkpcy. afterwards issued against E. & W. during the continuance of the term, under which plffs. were appointed assignees. Plffs. declined to take the lease, but they required debts. to appoint a person to value the machinery, & upon their refusal, appointed one themselves, who valued the property at an amount exceeding the original valuation. They then delivered possession of the premises to debts., the machinery being still therein, & demanded the difference between the two valuations, which debts. refused to pay. The plffs. afterwards demanded the goods, &, on debts. refusing to deliver them, brought an action of trover for the machinery:—Held: the assignees could not maintain an action of covenant against debts., for not appointing a valuer, or paying the difference between the two valuations, as the covenants had been determined by the bkpcy., but that the action of trover would lie.—FAIRBURN v. EASTWOOD (1840), 6 M. & W. 679; 9 L. J. Ex. 226.

422. Goods transferred by bill of sale—Before adjudication in bankruptcy—Effect of sale of goods by transferee.]—J. executed a bill of sale to deft. as security for a debt, & was adjudicated a bkpt. on his own petition. Before the adjudication deft. seized & sold the goods & received the proceeds. In an action by the assignee, the jury found that the bill of sale was a fraudulent preference, & gave a verdict for pltf. A rule to enter the verdict for deft. was obtained, on the ground that there was no relation back to the date of the bill of sale so as to enable pltf. to recover:—Held: the assignee was entitled to recover the proceeds of the goods, the bill of sale being voidable at his election as contrary to the policy of the bkpt. laws. Semble: an action for money received would lie.

Here the transaction was voidable at the suit of the assignee from the time the property passed to him. He might have avoided it, & maintained an action of trover while the goods remained in the possession of the transferee. After the transferee had converted the goods into money, the transaction still remained unlawful & voidable as against him; the only difference is that the remedy is changed, & he has become entitled after a demand to maintain an action for money received (KELLY, C.B.).—*MARKS v. S. subsequently committed an act of bkpey., on which he was made bkpt., & N. received the amount of the several bills of exchange at maturity:—Held: the amount so received by N. was received to the use of the assignees of S. & B., the solvent partner, & they jointly could sue N. for such amount in an action for money had & received.

MAULE, J., says that the old doctrine about tenancy in common, meaning the doctrine that one tenant in common cannot maintain trover against another, is not to be pushed to its full extent. . . . "But it does not follow that, where one tenant in common has dealt with the subject to an extent exceeding his authority, as where he sells out & out to a number of purchasers who carry away the articles," the very thing which deft. in the present case attempts to let them do, "it would militate against the true understanding of the older authorities to hold that the party may treat that as a conversion" (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—*FRASER v. Sect. 2.—Right to relief: Sub-sect. 4, C., D. & E.]

435. ———.—[In order to enable one tenant in common to maintain trover against another, there must not merely be a carrying away of the property, but such a carrying away of it as will disable the party complaining from having the lawful use or benefit of the property, or there must be the destruction of it. A. & B. were, without the knowledge of C., tenants in common of lands. C. had held them under A. In Mar. 1867 C. received from B. notice to quit at the end of six months. He did not quit, but afterwards made an agreement with A.'s agent for the renewal of the tenancy, continued the cultivation of the land, & paid the rent under the new lease. While C. was still in possession B. denied the premises to D. as from Mar. 1868, for six months. In June, 1868, D. entered the land, cut the grass, put a lock on the gate, & carried away the grass, & stacked it as hay:—Held: assuming C. & D. to be tenants in common, these circumstances did not amount to an ouster, so as to enable C. to maintain trespass against his co-tenant in common, D., nor to a destruction of the common property so as to enable C. to maintain trover for the grass.—*JACOBS v. Before B. had been called upon to pay any part of the £400 A. became bkpt., & his assignees took possession of the goods & sold them:—Held: A. was entitled to recover their value in an action of trover.—*LETTIS v. 478. Delivery to stranger after acceptance—Right of owner to sue—Action against person wrongfully delivering out bill.]—(1) It is the regular & usual course of business in commercial transactions to deliver out a bill of exchange, left for acceptance, to any person who mentions the amount, & describes any private mark or number upon it; & if the clerk of the party leaving it by his conduct enables a stranger to discover the mark or number, in consequence of which the bill is delivered out to him, the party leaving it cannot maintain trover for the bill against the party who so delivered it out.

(2) The questions . . . will be, (a) whether there was any negligence on the part of plffs. in their conduct with respect to the bill; (b) whether there was negligence on the part of deft. If . . . there was negligence on the part of plffs., then they will not be entitled to recover; but, if the negligence was on the part of deft., then plffs. will be entitled to the verdict (LITTLEDALE, J.).—*MORRISON v. 479. Person to whose order bill payable—Bill not accepted.]—L. & co., a London firm, agreed with C. & co., also a London firm, to make advances on a cargo per S., consigned to M. & co., at Moulmein; on the terms that L. & co. should have a lien on the cargo & its proceeds; & that M. & co. should remit the proceeds as soon as realised through L. & co. L. & co. accordingly advanced to C. & co. £6,000. M. & co. were informed of the arrangement & agreed to it. Afterwards L. & co. requested C. & co. to pay off their advances. C. & co. informed M. & co. of this, & requested them to draw on them in favour of L. & co. in anticipation. L. & co. were not aware of this application. M. & co. wrote to C. & co.

expressing dislike to the style of draft, but assenting to do as requested, & adding, in a letter of the same date, "we trust you will take care we are protected in this matter." Inclosed was a letter, addressed to L. & co. unsealed, advising them of a draft. The draft was on C. & co. payable six months after sight to L. & co. C. & co. accepted the draft, handed it & the letter to L. & co., & afterwards duly honoured the draft. Afterwards a similar draft was sent in a similar letter, stating the draft to be "in anticipation of the arrival of the S. addressed to L. & co., but open, & in a letter to C. & co. When it arrived, C. & co. were in such circumstances as to be aware that they could not honour it. They therefore suppressed both letter & draft; M. & co. approved of their conduct. Subsequently C. & co. became bkpts.; & the unaccepted draft came into the hands of his assignees. L. & co., whose advances had not been paid off, demanded the draft from them, & on its being refused, brought trover. On a special case stating the above facts:—Held: L. & co. had no property in the draft, which had not been drawn under the agreement to which they were a party, but under a separate arrangement between C. & co. & M. & co.; & under the arrangement between C. & co. & M. & co., the former would have done wrong if they had handed over the draft to L. & co. when aware that they could not protect it.

We are of opinion that the property in the bills of exchange, for the conversion of which this action is brought, never vested in plff. Both bills were payable to his order; but no act was ever done by M. & co., the drawers, or under their authority, to give him any title to them which will support this action. . . .

The circumstance, that the bills were remitted to C. in an unsealed envelope addressed to plff., entirely accords with the notion that the bills were not to be handed over to plff. till C. had accepted them, & that C. was not to accept them unless he was in a situation to honour them when they became due. . . . We are therefore of opinion that . . . plff. acquired no property or interest in them by their accidentally coming into his possession (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—*DE LIZARDI v. 482. — Churchwardens de facto—Right to sue predecessors.]—Parish books of the chapelry district were purchased out of rates levied over the whole chapelry district, & passed from time to time from the churchwardens to their successors. After the purchase the district was contracted under the Church Building Acts, & also under an Act for dividing the parish in which the ancient chapelry was situate, & churchwardens for the contracted district provided, who de facto succeeded the old churchwardens, though the area of the district was not so extensive:—Held: the churchwardens de facto were entitled to sue the old churchwardens in detinue for the parish books.—MOSS v. THORNILEY (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 101; 20 J. P. 660; 4 W. R. 514.

484. Rights of grantee of bill of sale.]—A. contracted with B., a shipbuilder in Nova Scotia, for the building of a vessel. B. was already largely indebted to A. upon a general consignment account, & A. from time to time made considerable advances on account of the ship whilst in progress, & also supplied anchors, cables, & other stores for her. On June 20, 1848, B., by a bill of sale, reciting that A. had made advances to B., & had agreed to make such further advances as he might require to build, launch, rig, & fully equip the vessel for sea, “for the security & repayment of all such sum or sums of money as A. had already advanced or might thereafter advance, to aid & assist him to complete & finish the vessel,” bargained, sold, assigned, & transferred to A. “a certain ship or vessel now in course & progress of building” by him, at etc., particularly describing it, together with certain timber in B.’s possession—“to have & to hold the ship or vessel, etc., goods & chattels, etc., to A., his exors., etc., to their absolute use & benefit of behoof for ever, when the ship or vessel shall be complete & finished, in as full, ample, & perfect a manner as if the said ship or vessel were ready for sea, & ready to be delivered to the said A. at the time of executing these presents.”

On Jan. 30, 1849, B. signed a builder’s certificate & declaration of ownership stating A. to be the sole owner of the vessel, & thereupon obtained a certificate of registry in A.’s name, pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 11. This certificate B. retained in his own possession.

On Mar. 29, 1849, B. induced the comptroller of the customs at Pictou, in Nova Scotia, to cancel the above certificate, & to grant him a fresh one in his own name as owner, & on the same day executed an assignment of the ship, then in an unfinished state, to C., who took possession of her, finished her, & sent her to Liverpool with a cargo on his own account:—Held: the property in the ship passed to A. by the bill of sale of June 20, 1849, & his right was in no degree limited by the habendum; & consequently, C. was liable in trover.

The parties having agreed that the amount of damages should be assessed by an average stater, the ct. suggested, & the parties assented, that the proper principle on which to estimate such damages, would be, the value of the ship & all her stores, etc. on Mar. 29, 1849, when C. took possession of her; & as a mode of ascertaining such value, the referee should consider what would have been the value of the ship at Pictou, if she had been completed by B. according to his contract with A., & deduct therefrom the money that would necessarily have been laid out by B. after that date, in order to complete her according to the contract.—REID v. FAIRBANKS (1853), 13 C. B. 692; 1 C. L. R. 787; 21 L. T. O. S. 106; 138 E. R. 1371; sub nom. READ v. FAIRBANKS, 22 L. J. C. P. 206; 17 Jur. 918.

485. Pledge as security for debt—Bills of lading of expected cargo—Unauthorised disposal of goods by agents of owner—Recovery by assignees of bankrupt owner of substituted goods delivered to pawnee.]—A merchant pledges for value the bills of lading of an expected cargo, his property, in the profits of which his agents abroad were interested in a certain proportion. His agents, without the knowledge of the owner or the pawnee, dispose of part of the cargo abroad, after which the owner becomes a bkpt.; he induces the agents to replace the goods disposed of by others, of which the agents give him bills of lading, & he sends them to the pawnee, to make good their security:—Held: the assignees of the bkpt. might recover the substituted goods against the pawnee.—MEYER v. SHARPE (1813), 5 Taunt. 74; 128 E. R. 614.

486. — Title deeds—By purchaser before conveyance—Action by trustees of bankrupt.]—A. having agreed to purchase an estate of B., & having received the title deeds, borrowed money of C., & deposited the title deeds with him as a security, agreeing to mtgc. the estate to him whenever he should receive the deed of conveyance. A. afterwards received from B. the deed of conveyance of the estate, which he then delivered to C. as a further security. In the interval C. refused to complete the mtgc. unless A. would pay usurious interest on the money lent, to which A. agreed. A. afterwards became bkpt., & his assignees bought trover against C. for the deed of conveyance:—Held: the original possession of the title deeds being good, gave C. a right to the estate whenever it should be conveyed to A., & therefore C. was entitled to retain the deed of conveyance of the estate against the assignees of A.—WOOD v. GRIMWOOD (1830), 10 B. & C. 679; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 551; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 192; 109 E. R. 602.

488. — Promissory note—Action by pledgor after tender.—To a count in detinue, on the bailment of a promissory note to be redelivered on request, deft. pleaded, that pltf. had deposited the note with him, to be kept as a pledge & security for the repayment of a loan of £50; pltf. replied, a tender of the £50:—Held: the replication was good, & no departure. —*GLEDSTANE v. 489. — Lease—By assignee of lease—Action by pledgor.—Pltf. being possessed of the lease of a messuage by assignment, delivered it to F. with authority to raise money on the security of the deed. Deflt., who had advanced money, which was not repaid, having refused to deliver up the deed, pltf. sued him in trover:—Held: deflt. might give these facts in evidence under a plea that pltf. was not possessed of the deed as his own property at the time of the action, & pltf. was not entitled to recover. —OWEN v. KNIGHT (1837), 4 Bing. N. C. 54; 6 Dowl. 244; 3 Hodg. 245; 5 Scott, 307; 7 L. J. C. P. 27; 1 Jur. 869; 132 E. R. 709.

490. — Dock warrant for goods—Wrongful delivery to third person.—A. deposited a dock warrant for brandies with B., as a security for a loan, which was to be repaid on Jan. 29, or, in default, the brandies were to be forfeited. On Jan. 28, B. agreed for the sale of the brandies to C., & on Jan. 29 delivered to him the dock warrant, & C. took actual possession of the brandies on Jan. 30:—Held: (1) the sale on Jan. 28, & the delivery of the dock warrant to the vendee on Jan. 29, A. having the whole of that day to redeem it, amounted to a conversion; (2) the proper measure of damages was the actual damage A. had sustained by the wrongful conversion, which, as there was no intention on his part to redeem the pledge, was merely nominal. —*JOHNSON v. U. Principal and Agent.

See, generally, AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 257 et seq.

491. Right of Agent—Against principal—Taking documents entrusted to agent by court.—A party to a suit having obtained from his own attorney or agent, documents in a cause, in custody of a ct., & by the ct. entrusted to the agent, on his undertaking to return them:—Held: the agent was entitled to maintain either detinue or assumpsit against his employer to recover them. —GRAIG v. SHEDDEN (1859), 1 F. & F. 553, N. P.

492. — — — — ——A Scottish agent, having, by the desire & for the purposes of his employer, obtained documents out of the custody, of a Scottish ct., upon an undertaking to return them:—Held: entitled to maintain an action against his employer for the detention of them. —SANDS v. SHEDDEN (1859), 1 F. & F. 556, N. P.

493. Right of principal—Principal holding out agent—No notice to defendant that goods belong to plaintiff.—The declaration stated, that whereas Y., at the request of deft., caused to be delivered to deft., & continued to deft. until the committal of the grievance, etc., a certain horse of pltf.'s, to be left by deft. for Y. for certain reward, to be paid to deft. in satisfaction of all his claims; & it thereupon became the duty of deft. to re-deliver the horse upon the request of Y., upon being paid all his demands in respect of the horse. The declaration then averred, that Y. requested deft. to deliver the horse to pltf., & pltf. then paid deft. all his demands in respect of the horse, & requested deft. to deliver to him the horse; yet deft. refused to deliver the horse to pltf., but wrongfully kept & detained it from pltf. for a long time, by means whereof pltf. was deprived of the profit & advantage that he might have derived from the possession & employment of the horse, & was prevented from applying his care, etc., about the treatment of the horse, for want whereof the horse became lame, etc.:—Held: (1) this was not a defective count in trover; (2) as pltf. had recognised the right of Y. to make a contract with deft., & had not shown that he gave notice to deft. that the horse was his property, he had shown the right of action to be in Y., & not in himself, & the judgment ought to be arrested. —TOLLIT v. SHENSTONE (1839), 7 Dowl. 455; 5 M. & W. 283; 8 L. J. Ex. 244; 151 E. R. 120.

494. — Principal not holding out agent—Wrongful sale by agent.—Appls. were timber merchants, & kept large quantities of timber warehoused in their name at the docks.

The dock co. were authorised to accept & act upon delivery orders signed by C., appls.' manager, who had authority to sell timber in ordinary quantities to regular customers.

C. from time to time fraudulently transferred timber belonging to appls. to a fictitious purchaser, & then sold it to resps. in the assumed name of such purchaser.

Resps. bought & paid for the timber in good faith without any suspicion of fraud. They were not customers of appls., & did not know them in any way in the transaction:—Held: there was no holding out of C. by appls. to resps. as a person having authority to dispose of the timber, & resps. acquired no better title to the timber than that of C., who had stolen it, & were liable for the value of it to applicants in an action of detinue.—*FARQUHARSON BROTHERS & Co. v. W. Ships and Cargo.

495. Right of vendor of ship—After sale—To sue for certificate of registry.—(1) There is nothing in the character or nature of the certificate of registry of a ship which excludes it from the jurisdiction of the ct. to decree its delivery as against a party unlawfully detaining it.

(2) The vendor of a ship, with a covenant for title, retains, after the sale, in order that he may fulfil his contract, & defend himself against an action brought upon his covenant, such an interest in the certificate of registry as enables him to sustain a suit for its delivery against a party unlawfully detaining it.—GIBSON v. INGO (1847), 6 Hare, 112; 67 E. R. 1103.

LAIDLIER* (1823), 8 Moore, C. P. 37.

497. Trover for ship with apparel & appurtenances—Whether ship's boat included.—In trover for a ship "with the apparel & appurtenances thereto belonging," pltf. cannot set up a distinct title to a new boat & cordage.—SHANNON v. OWEN (1827), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 392; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 61.

500. Legatee—After assent of executor.—A specific legacy being left to L., he applied to pltf. the exor., who assented; but delaying to deliver it, L. brought an action of trover for it, & had a verdict & £200 damages; the exor. preferred his bill here, & insisted, (a) an action of trover would not lie for a legacy; (b) that it is a verdict against conscience, the damages being excessive. The ct. held, that after an exor. has assented, an action of trover certainly lies for a legatee; & that this was not a case where they would relieve against a verdict, & therefore allowed the plea of the verdict & judgment.—*WILLIAMS v. 503. Person contracting for work & labour—Property in goods supplied not passing.]—By a contract between pltf.s., the owners of a steamship, & defts., engineers, defts. were to supply new boilers & various parts of machinery for the ship, & to alter the engines according to a specification, & the engines & boilers & connections were to be completed ready for sea & tried under steam previous to being handed over to pltf.s. Due notice was to be given by pltf.s. to defts. of the date at which the ship was to be placed in the hands of the defts., after the work was ready, to have the engines completed. The price to be £5,800, payable as the work progressed, as follows: viz., when boilers were plated £2,000; when the whole of the work was ready for fixing on board, £2,000; & when the ship was fully completed & tried under steam, £1,800. These payments were to be made only on the certificate of pltf.s.' inspector that the conditions entitling defts. to receive such payment had been fulfilled. The whole of the old materials necessarily taken from the vessel by reason of the execution of the contract was to become the property of defts., & the value of such old materials was £353.

Pltf.s. gave defts. due notice that the vessel was ready to be placed in their hands on a certain date, but on hearing that defts. could not promise to be ready by that date, pltf.s. sent her on a voyage on which she was lost by perils of the sea. The boilers were plated by a certain day, & afterwards, on a certain other day, the whole of the work was ready for fixing on board the vessel, & pltf.s.' inspector having, on each occasion, given the necessary certificate, pltf.s. paid the first & second £2,000 according to the contract. At the time of the payment of such second £2,000, pltf.s. knew but defts. did not know of the loss of the vessel:—Held: the contract was substantially one for work & labour to be done by defts., & the two payments of £2,000 each were intended only to be paid on account of a contract to be performed as a whole, & therefore as the full performance of the contract had been rendered impossible by the loss of the vessel, no property in any portion of the work certified by the inspector to have been properly done & in respect of which the two sums were so respectively paid, had passed to pltf.s. so as to entitle them to recover in detinue for its detention.—*ANGLO-EGYPTIAN NAVIGATION CO. v. M. & co. thereupon purchased cotton from time to time & shipped it on board B. & co.'s vessel. The master of the vessel executed to M. & co. a bill of lading, which stated that the cotton was to be delivered at Liverpool "to order or to our assigns, paying for freight for the cotton nothing, being owner's property." M. & co. indorsed the bill of lading. "Deliver the within to the Bank of Liverpool or order M. & co." Afterwards M. & co. sent to B. & co. an abstract invoice of the cotton, in which they stated that they had shipped the cotton on board the vessel "by order & for account & risk" of B. & co. & addressed "to order"; & still later they sent to B. & co. a full invoice stating that the cotton was shipped "by order & for account of B. & co. & to them consigned." M. & co. not having sufficient funds of B. & co. to pay for the cargo of cotton, drew bills on B. & co. for the amount,

M. & co. sold the bills they had so drawn to the bank at Charlestown, & delivered to the bank the bill of lading so indorsed as a security for the payment of the bills, which were ultimately dishonoured & taken up by M. & co. B. & co. became bkpts. before the arrival of the vessel. M. & co., by means of their agent, on its arrival put in a claim to the cargo. The assignees of B. & co. brought detinue against M. & co.'s agents, who pleaded that bkpts., B. & co., were not possessed, & that plffs. were not possessed as assignees:—Held: M. & co. did not by transferring bill of lading as security to the bank at Charlestown, lose their property in the goods so as to prevent their claiming them as against B. & co. or their assignees, & the defence might be raised under the plea of not possessed.—*TURNER v. At the trial it appeared that pltf. was in possession of goods which he claimed as his own property, under an assignment to him from O. Defts. seized the goods in pltf.'s possession, claiming them under an assignment from O. to them, made whilst O. was in apparent ownership of the goods, but of a later date than the assignment to pltf. This was the conversion. Defts. offered as a defence to prove that O. had become bkpt. before pltf. took possession, & that the goods were in his order & disposition, & therefore vested in the assignees before the conversion. The judge refused to permit this defence. On a motion for a new trial:—Held: the judge did right; for pltf. being in possession, & defts. being wrongdoers not claiming in any way under the assignees, defts. could not set up the jus tertii as a defence in trover.—*JEFFRIES v. But, in an action by the donee against a wrongdoer, for the conversion of chattels so given, it is not competent to deft. to set up the title of the husband.

A., as exor. of B., seized & sold as the goods of his testator a watch & several articles of dress & jewellery which C., the niece of B.'s deceased house-keeper, claimed to be hers by gift, some of them from her aunt, & some from B., in whose house she had for many years lived with her aunt as a sort of adopted member of the family.

The jury having found upon sufficient evidence that the articles in question had in fact been given to C., & were in her "possession" at the time of the conversion:—Held: C. was entitled to recover their value; & it was not competent to A., who was a mere wrongdoer, to urge that, as to those articles which came to C. by gift from her aunt, the latter, having a husband living, who, however, made no claim to them, had no authority to dispose of them.—*BOURNE v. 525. ————.]—Where assignees of bkpt. brought trover for goods obtained by deft. from bkpt. by a fraudulent assignment made in contemplation of bkpcy., deft. was held not entitled to defeat pltf.'s claim by setting up the title of assignees under a former bkpcy. under which bkpt. had not obtained his certificate, those assignees not having intervened to claim the goods.—MORGAN v. KNIGHT (1861), 15 C. B. N. S. 669; 3 New Rep. 469; 33 L. J. C. P. 168; 9 L. T. 803; 12 W. R. 428; 143 E. R. 947.

526. ————. Sale by sheriff.—In Dec. 1837, certain goods of C. were seized by the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa., & by him conveyed to pltf. by bill of sale, the goods remaining in C.'s possession under a secret arrangement between him & pltf. In Dec. 1838, a fiat issued against C., under which he was duly declared bkpt. In Aug. 1841, the goods, which still remained in C.'s possession, were again seized by the sheriff under other writs of fi. fa., & by him sold, & the proceeds paid over under an indemnity to the assignees, who then for the first time asserted their right. In trover by pltf. against the sheriff, the jury having found that the goods were in the order & disposition of C. as the reputed owner at the time of his bkpcy., with the consent of the true owner:—Held: the sheriff was not under the circumstances precluded from setting up the title of the assignees as an answer to the action.—LEAKE v. LOVEDAY (1842), 4 Man. & G. 972; 2 Dowl. N. S. 624; 5 Scott, N. R. 908; 12 L. J. C. P. 65; 7 Jur. 17; 134 E. R. 399.

527. ————.]—In detinue, under a plea of not possessed, deft. may show that the property in the goods detained is vested in the provisional assignee of the Insolvent Ct., pltf. having petitioned that ct., & a vesting order having been made.—KERNOT v. PITTIS (1853), 2 C. L. R. 242.

528. ————. Goods transferred by bill of sale.—Pltf., being possessed of some plate, transferred it by bill of sale to M. & B. for a valuable consideration, but in order to defeat the execution of a judgment creditor. Pltf. continued in possession of the plate, & the creditor having assigned his judgment to M. & B., they issued execution thereon; whereupon pltf., in order to defeat the execution, deposited the plate with deft. In trover by pltf. for the plate:—Held: deft. was entitled to set up the right of M. & B.—CHEESMAN v. EXALL (1851), 6 Exch. 341; 20 L. J. Ex. 209; 155 E. R. 574.

529. ————. Subsequent bill of sale to plaintiff.—Claimant was pltf., & an execution creditor deft., in an interpleader issue, to try whether certain goods were, at the time of the seizure thereof by the sheriff under a writ of execution, the goods of pltf. Pltf. proved a valid bill of sale to him of the goods:—Held: it was competent for deft. to defeat pltf.'s title by proving a prior bill of sale to a third party.—GADSDEN v. BARROW (1854), 9 Exch. 514; 2 C. L. R. 1063; 23 L. J. Ex. 134; 2 W. R. 241; 156 E. R. 220.

530. ————. Goods sold as debtor's—After act of bankruptcy.—M., the owner of certain goods, put C. into possession of them, who remained so until after the death of the owner who died take possession, & a statement that a delivery of possession was given at the time of executing the mtge. There was no evidence that the mtge.-money had been paid. Pltf. afterwards executed three other mtges. of the same goods to other persons, each containing a similar agreement upon default, & a similar statement as to delivery of possession:—Held: under these circumstances pltf. could not recover either in trover or detinue, & deft. might, as against him, set up the right of the other mtgees.—RUTAN v. BEAMISH (1861), 10 C. P. 90.—CAN.

c. ————. Plaintiff not in possession.—In an action of trover for quartz, etc., deft. pleaded denying pltf.'s property in the goods, & gave evidence that the property had been seized under execution against pltf. & sold to a third party. Pltf., at the time of the alleged conversion, was out of possession:—Held: as pltf. was out of possession, deft. could set up the jus tertii intestate. After M.'s death, deft. sold the goods by the desire & as the property of C., who had previously committed an act of bkpcy., of which deft. was cognisant. Intestate's goods had not been administered, & the ordinary had not claimed them.

Sect. 3.—Remedies: Sub-sect. 1, B. (d), (e), (f), (g), (h) & (i).]

In an action by the assignee of C. for the conversion of the goods:—Held: deft. was not entitled to set up the right of the ordinary to the goods; & therefore deft. could not insist that the property was not shown to have been in the order & disposition of bkpt. with the consent of the true owner.—WHITE v. MULLETT (1851), 6 Exch. 713; 20 L. J. Ex. 291; 17 L. T. O. S. 146; 155 E. R. 732.

531. — Sale to plaintiff by bankrupt.—With authority of creditors.]—B., an undischarged bkpt., to whom his creditors had given, by a resolution duly passed, a certain quantity of his furniture, assigned that furniture by bill of sale to pltf., & afterwards sent it to deft., an auctioneer, who sold it & paid the money received to bkpt. In an action for conversion:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the furniture, for bkpt. could, under the resolution of his creditors, dispose of it to pltf., & there was no ius tertii which deft. could set up.—BROWN v. HICKINBOTHAM (1881), 50 L. J. Q. B. 426, C. A.
